WEDDING BELLS.—A quiet but pretty wedding took place at St. Bonaventures Church, Tracadie, Wednesday morning, Oct. 19th, when Miss Mary C. McIsaac, one of the academy's most popular young ladies, was united in the holy bonds of matrimony to Mr. John D. McDonald of Blooming Point. The bride looked charming, gowned in white georgette and satin with hat to match. She was attended by her sister, Miss Anna McIsaac, who wore blue like Mr. Alex. McDonald of Blooming Point, who supported the groom. The marriage ceremony was performed by their pastor, Rev. J. B. McIntyre. After the bridal party drove to the home of the bride where a sumptuous wedding breakfast awaited them. After partaking of this repast and resting awhile they returned to the Revolver Hotel, Charlottetown, where they had dinner. In the evening they returned to the home of the bride, where a few immediate relatives along with Rev. Father McIntyre waited to receive the newly weds. After partaking of a well prepared supper where the remainder of the party was pleasantly spent in music both vocal and instrumental. The large number of valuable presents received together with many substantial cheques, testify to the popularity of the young couple. The Guardian joins in wishing Mr. and Mrs. McDonald many years of happy wedded life. (Parlor and Examiner please copy.)

LINEN OR PONCEE FOR HANDKERCHIEF. A dainty handkerchief is the final touch to a costume, especially if it is of silk pongee, the latest material for handkerchiefs, or of linen embroidered with harmonizing colors. The new drawn thread work handkerchiefs cost from $1.25 to $2.50 in city shops, but you can make one in an afternoon.

Use linen or silk pongee. The threads of cotton goods break easily in a square. Drawing threads to make it perfectly straight. About an inch from the edge pull out a thread. Tie it in a very tiny, smooth knot two or three strands of bright colored embroidery floss—you can get the floss for 5 cents a skein. Put the thread on the other side carefully and the floss will weave into the goods in its place. A little practice will soon teach you how to do it. The hem can be plain, or rolled and whipped over the floss in a blanket or cross stitch. Many are edged with the fine lace.

One handkerchief has three blue threads drawn about a third inch apart, crossing at the corners to make a pretty effect. In a corner of another handkerchief a three-ply black thread is worked in with a fine needle, over and under single threads, for the center figure, and in this are embroidered very tiny yellow and blue flowers with the satin stitch. Little oblongs at each side are worked with a straight running stitch in blue to offset the center figure, and French knots are added as indicated. The work is fascinating and solves many a Christmas gift problem.

Take your mind, as well as your body, away from the office or shop when you go home at night, and you will work with all the more energy when you return in the morning.

Let not your mistakes and false steps embarrass you. Nothing is so valuable in experience as the consciousness of one's errors. This is one of the cardinal means of self education.

Tomb Is Chosen By Divine Sarah

Mme. Bernhardt Selects for Last Resting-Place Rorky Islet

PARIS, Nov. 3.—"When I am dead my tomb shall serve as a guide to safety for the brave fishwives, and I love so well, enabling them in the sudden storms which rear death in the Bay of Biscay, to see their way to a haven of refuge, where they may find shelter until danger is past." Thus poetically did Sarah Bernhardt explain to the correspondent her idea in choosing a final resting place. With her love for the romantic, she has found for her tomb a wild, rocky islet in the Bay of Biscay which the French Government has consented to sell her at the nominal price of one hundred dollars. The islet is not far from her Summer home at Belle-Ile.

It is practically nothing but a solid mass of granite, but on the sheltered side it can provide temporary harborage for a small fishing fleet. Its appeal to the famous actress is that the lofty rock stands high out of the water and can be seen from afar. In this weird fastness, remote from all sound save the thunder of the Atlantic and seabirds' screams, she intends to build a magnificent tomb for herself. The will be erected in a statue of the actress in white marble from Carrara quarries. Her arms of stone will be stretched out as if beckoning to the harassed fisherman to come to her little haven and escape the perils of the storm.

Mme. Bernhardt said, "I have always been a devotee of the sea. Still there is plenty time," she smiled, judging from the yacht she still owns at 76, she will have many years in which to carry out her work. "You know," she went on, "I think one should always try to be of use even dead. I have always made it my aim to be of service in life, and I think my plan for an island tomb offers the best means of being useful when life is over."

Champagne Taste Led to His Undoing

BERLIN, Nov. 3.—Emperor Carl's taste for champagne is largely responsible for the failure of his attempted coup. Arriving in Godesberg, he wasted 24 hours in merrymaking. Ignoring Zita's warning that every moment wasted would rebound to his loss, Carl insisted on celebrating his "triumphant return."

Experts say that the former Emperor's spirits were so lowered that he sought suicide as a result. He originated, it is said, his frequent weeping spells and expressed wishes to "end it all."

STYLE NEWS

Embroideries, particularly those inspired by the Polish Renaissance, are of prime importance in all of the fall collections, and they are most effective on plain black dresses, the sleeves of which carry the trimming.

For her bouffant evening frocks Sarah makes a skirt which is creased by numerous tiny roses not more than one-half inch in diameter, and in direct opposition to these are the large flat collar-bone flowers featured by Charlotte and Premet.

During the last two years Madeleine Vionnet has held the fancy of the public to such an extent that the Vionnet genre or style is being copied by practically every maker in Paris, and quite unwillingly the old and long established firms have found themselves forced to add gowns of this floating panel type.

Worth, more than any other maker, features artificial flowers, particularly in bright red and flame shades.

Lavin makes outstanding use of unique designs of ankey tail in either black or brown.

Does Winter Dairying Pay

The question is frequently asked: Does winter dairying pay? To this question the answer should be yes, if you wish directly and indirectly, in the first place the dairyman is selling his milk year around and gets the advantage of the increased price during the winter season.

From experiments at some of our stations it has been shown that proper grooming has increased the yield of milk from two to four units per day or in a large herd enough to pay the wages of the extra help needed. Many of our up to date dairymen clip the hind quarters and the udders as they find it much easier to keep them clean. In regard to feeding, there are a number of general principles which no feeder should loose sight of. The cow is no matter day worse of miracles. The milk must come either directly or indirectly from the food consumed. Every large producer must be a large consumer. At the same time there is no need in filling the cow up on any food that may be on hand or is possible to buy. If we are to keep the cost of production down, there must be a thorough knowledge both with the feeding value and the market price of various feeds. It is certainly a well known fact that a cow's ration should be palatable and fairly well balanced to produce best results. We cannot get ahead of nature along this line as it is well known that good pasture will produce the greatest yield of milk. Thus, in our winter ration we want to get as near to nature as we can. Good clover hay in almost as near pasture as we can get but the cow would soon tire on it alone. Combined with roots or silage (if you have it) it makes a palatable bulky ration. From conversation with other dairymen and my own experience, I find the following a profitable ration: Roots, 40 pounds; hay, 10 pounds; ground oats and barley, 4 pounds; oil meal, 2 pounds; wheat bran, from two to four pounds and salt about 4 ounces. This ration to be varied as regards the grain ration in proportion to the amount of milk obtained. Another important matter is the supply of good fresh water. Cows having water before them at all times never take enough at any one time to cause a chill, and for this reason are able to maintain a much more even temperature, thus assuring a larger flow of milk and a larger profit to their owner. This extra profit alone would install a water system that would last for years.
