"Apples Is Apples" but not when you know them. In a recent survey the Fruit Branch of the Dominion Department of Agriculture secured some interesting information on this subject. The Dominion favorite is McIntosh, the survey shows. Then in order come the Spy, Gravenstein, the Delicious and the Baldwin. By provinces, Ontario prefers its "Spy"; Nova Scotia and New Brunswick their "Gravenstein"; while Quebec, Manitoba, Saskatchewan, Alberta and British Columbia all vote "McIntosh" first. Other popular varieties are Greening, Snow, Fameuse, Duchess, Winesap, Bow Sweet, Wagener, Jonathan and Wealthy.

A barn belonging to Mr. Hartwell Crosier was destroyed by fire early Sunday morning. The building contained practically all of Mr. Crosier's farm machinery, a number of turkeys, ducks, etc. It was well that the fire was discovered in time to save an adjacent building for if this had caught no doubt the fire would have spread to the other barn and dwelling house. The origin of the fire is unknown. The total loss is estimated at two thousand dollars. It is very regrettable that Mr. Crosier has met with such a heavy misfortune and it is hoped that in some way some compensation may be made.

The members of the Young People's Society were entertained at the home of Mr. John Simpson, Hamilton, on Tuesday evening. MALPEQUE

The funeral of the late Mr. James Burns took place on Wednesday afternoon. There was a short service at the home followed by a largely attended service in Keir Memorial Church. The service was conducted by the pastor, Rev. Fredk. Williamson, assisted by the Rev. D. M. Grant of Princetown United Church. The address was based on the words of John 11, 24-26. "I know that he shall rise again in the resurrection at the last day, Jesus said unto her. I am the resurrection and the life." The hymn "On Calvary's Brow," was sweetly sung by Mrs. Proffitt and Mr. Charles Woodside. The floral offerings were many and beautiful and were as follows:— Wreaths—From the family, Rev. Fredk. Williamson, Malpeque; D. Sterling MacLean, Charlottetown; Victoria Lodge, A. F. and A. M., Charlottetown; school children, Malpeque; O. D. MacGregor, Nell D. MacLean, Charlottetown, and Walter M. Beer, Summerside; Mr. and Mrs. J. L. MacLeod, Marion and boys, Charlottetown. Sprays—the grandchildren, "Go Forth Mission Band," Malpeque; Morrison MacLeod, North Wiltshire, and Oswald Smith, Charlottetown, and the Young People's Society, Malpeque. In this and in many other ways the citizens of Malpeque and friends elsewhere paid their tribute to Mr. Burns and expressed their sympathy to the bereaved.

Mr. Burns was an honored member of King Edward Lodge No. 16, A. F. and A. M., and the service at the grave was conducted by the Masonic Brethern with Mr. Waldron Darrach of Kensington, acting Worshipful Master, and Mr. Thomas MacNutt, Chaplain.

SOUTHERN NOTES

We regret very much to report that Mr. J. W. MacLean of High Bank recently met with an unfortunate and painful accident recently when sawing logs for firewood with a circular saw. He was handling the wood next to the circular, feeding the saw, in fact, when his fingers were pushed by an unlucky chance against the teeth and two fingers were completely severed. His hand, (the left) is thus unfortunately permanently maimed.

If by inadvertence the writer in previous notes reported that Mr. J. Hector Ross, was working with Mr. D. Munn and wishes now to correct that and state that he is working in Co-operation with Mr. D. M. MacLeod of Wood Island North.

Mr and Mrs Angus Matheson of Glen Forest who have resided all winter in Charlottetown have recently returned to their former home where they will remain for the Spring and Summer.

Mr Edward Mosher who gave up fishing for the past three years is about to take it up again this Spring. He will be assisted by his son Harry.

The writer has been informed by a farmer in Wood Island, who has been about mines quite a bit, that he has discovered on his farm strong indications of coal. Coal, he tells your correspondent is very often associated with gas. This gas has the property of discoloring air and stones in its vicinity giving them black shade. This is one of the indications. He is so strongly impressed that he plans to bore as soon conditions are favorable.

The prevailing opinion here is that there was too much snow on top of the ice to allow a great depth of the latter. That is largely the reasons why it moved off shore so early and that compared with other seasons perhaps considerably milder than the past winter, the strait is free of ice.

Language fails me to express my gratitude to "Agricola" for his kindly references to these musings of mine. I can only say that I value his opinion on literary efforts, if I might so designate these piebald productions, more than that of almost any other man, so highly, do I esteem his qualifications. I value his estimation the more, because I never met the gentleman and do not know him except through his writings under the column, "Newy Farm Notes." For the reason that we are not acquainted and do not know each other's names there can be no collusion respecting compliments. In him I think, the Guardian has found a man.

Perhaps this item will be news to many readers. At any rate it is news to me. Mathematicians will find it in a startling deviation from what they considered a physical law as well, established, perhaps, as gravitation. It is an answer to an inquirer in The Free Press Prairie Farmer dated March 12th and reads thus; you are correct in stating that a falling body never attains a greater velocity than 118 miles an hour. Theoretically a body that is falling increases its velocity 32 feet per second if the action of gravity is wholly unresisted. Recent experiments made by the United States Air Corps, however have shown that an object the size and weight of a human body never attains a greater velocity than 118 miles an hour from any altitude. This velocity is attained after falling 1300 feet in quiet air, and about 11 seconds, after commencing to fall. This I may say is in violent disagreement with any law of motion I ever read. —H

Newstead Abbey, ancestral home of the Byrons, has been purchased by Sir Julien Cahm for presentation to the British nation, thus atoning in some measure for the refusal to permit Lord Byron to be buried in Westminster Abbey. It is, says the Toronto Globe, a belated recognition, and it will not, perhaps, win universal approval, but it raises anew the question of Byron's place in English literature. This has been variously estimated, from Carlyle's phrase, the "sham strong man," to the tribute of Brandes, the Danish critic: "He, the inviolate English peer, became the organ for the dumb bitterness of feeling which tortured the best souls of Europe, the souls of those who most loved freedom, as unchecked and unpunished he poured forth the awful threats of his revolutionary wrath."

Indeed it was Continental Europe which derived most satisfaction from Byron, and his service for the freedom of Greece, in his last years, was sufficiently heroic to wipe out some of the stain of his reputation in England. On the centenary of his death a few years ago Greece paid Byron the great honor of placing his portrait on a postage stamp. The foreign recognition accorded Byron was bitterly explained by Swinburne, who said his poetical form was so bad that it was improved by translation. "The blundering, floundering, lumbering and stumbling stanzas," he wrote, "transmuted into prose and transfigured into grammar, reveal the real and latent force of rhetorical energy that is in them: the gasping, ranting, wheezing, broken-winded verse has been transformed into really effective and fluent oratory."

But the verdict of even the Continent of Europe is being revised. If the poetry of Byron in his own time was one of the greatest emotional forces that had ever stirred the souls of men, that poetry was soon to be eclipsed by others of that time, as the true worth of Shelley and Keats, Coleridge and Wordsworth was appreciated by a better educated reading public. The earlier cantos of "Childe Harold" properly enabled Byron to say he "awoke and found himself famous," but portions of "Don Juan" and other works were merely drivel. The later public would not accept such offerings from one called a major poet. Swinburne's verdict was that, "as a poet, Byron was surpassed, beyond all question and all comparison, by three men at least of his own time, and matched, if not now and then over-matched, by one or two others." John Morley declared that "Shelley was immeasurably superior to Byron in all the rarer qualities of the specially poetic mind."

Professor Dowden believed Byron wrote his own best epitaph in these lines from "Manfred": "This should have been a noble creature; he Hath all the energy which would have made A goodly frame of glorious elements, Had they been wisely mingled; as it is It is an awful chaos—light and darkness, And wind and dust, and passions and pure thoughts Mixed, and contending without end or order."

As the ferment of the Napoleonic wars took form in the lines of Byron and led on to greater things, so, perhaps, the yeasting thoughts of the Great War which today are seen in messages of sordidness and revolt may yet result in a still greater literature.
