THE VALEDICTORY

Read by Amy Linkletter Your Honor, Mr. Premier, Your Worship, Members of the Faculty, Fellow Students, Ladies and Gentlemen—

We have gathered here this morning to complete the work of another term and we, of the graduating class, meet for the last time as a unit.

From here we must go forth into fresh fields of endeavor, where we hope we shall always be a credit to our loved Alma Mater.

Although one's thoughts are turned to the future, yet on an occasion such as this we cannot look back over the years spent here without regretting that they will never come again, and it is with mingled feelings that we bid farewell to Prince of Wales College.

The privilege of speaking the parting words has been given to me and it is a pleasure as well as a privilege to review the past years' activities which have been highly satisfactory in every way.

The enrollment this year, except in the second year, was not as large as usual, but in the majority of cases the application of the students to their work has more than compensated for the smaller number.

There was but one change made in the teaching staff at the beginning of the term. Professor J. F. MacMillan being appointed in the place of the late Professor Gregory Gallant.

We were very fortunate in that during the session none of the teachers lost any long period of time, nor was it necessary, as was necessary last year to close the college for sickness.

Sorrow has entered the homes of some of the teachers and students and a few of the students, through illness have had to discontinue. In all these cases the students felt the deepest sympathy.

All the different branches of study have been carried on as usual and the Business Department has had a good attendance.

During the year a series of intelligence tests has been conducted, particularly in Modern Languages, showing that we are marching shoulder to shoulder with other educational institutions throughout the country.

The Debating Societies have had a very successful year and owing to the wide range of subjects discussed and the varied interests represented, the sessions of these societies will long be remembered with pleasure by the members.

Regarding the physical side of college life, everyone had an opportunity to take part in college sports and in hockey and football especially, our boys acquitted themselves well indeed.

In the many religious and social affairs held during the year everyone enjoyed and took advantage of the opportunity of reviewing old acquaintances and forming new ones, and we know that some of the friendships formed will last all through life.

And now, it is necessary to bid adieu.

To you, our Principal and Members of the Faculty we say farewell. As we go out to take our places in life, to meet whatever difficulties may come up, or to enjoy whatever successes there may be in store for us, we shall try to follow the principles which you have endeavored to instill into us. We shall always look back with gratitude and appreciation to the example of industry and patience which you have set us.

To you, citizens of Charlottetown we say farewell. We wish to thank you for your kindness in welcoming us into your homes, especially those of us who have left the home circle for the first time and the best we can wish the future students is that they should receive the same cordial hospitality as we have experienced at your hands.

To you, fellow students, we say farewell.

It is with deep grief that we part with you. Yet we know that each of us will follow with interest the careers of the others and hope that the friendships formed here will continue through the years.

We trust that all the graduating class in particular will not fail to measure up to the high standards of life set for us by our predecessors. To you who have not reached the goal to which you aimed, we would say: Remember that one reversal does not mean defeat, that what now seems disappointment may be but a means of rousing you to better things.

Let us who are leaving Prince of Wales College for the last time strive to meet the greatest tests of life as zealously as we have worked together in the examination hall and do our best to follow our Alma Mater's worthy motto "Ich Dien"—I serve.

Bonnie Scots Bairs for Canada

Canada gives a specially warm welcome to children, and Scotland continues to send her sturdy youth to the great Dominion. Here is a party which sailed from Liverpool to Canada on the Canadian Pacific liner "Montclair," recently. They are Robert and William M'Robert, Christie and Nancy Cameron from Forbes, Jean Brown from Govan, W. Gray from Fife and Flora Stables from Insh, Aberdeenshire.
