—NEW ANNAN DOWN FREETOWN 2 TO 1 TO WIN OPENER IN FINALS—On Thursday evening in the Kensington rink with the largest crowd of the season, approximately six hundred and fifty wildly excited fans looking on, the New Annan Stars, last year's champions of the North Shore Hockey League, after sixty minutes of fast, rugged hockey and with only two minutes to go, eked out a 2 to 1 win over the Freetown Maple Leafs to take the opening game in the best three out of five series for the Baker Trophy, to give them a slim edge in the finals, for the Stars will have to be better in their final games, to again take the trophy, as the Leafs had the edge in play throughout, but McInnis the Stars' goalie was phenominal and saved his team from trimming, by his sensational goaltending.

Checking and play was so close that, but one goal each period was scored, the opening goal coming at the eight minute mark in the opening frame when Gerald Mill from a face-off at the Leafs blue line skated through to beat Paynter from close in while his teammates stood quietly around thinking play was not going on and waiting for changes to be made. The Leafs have protested the game on this account and it will be probably dealt with by the higher ups, the officials however claim that the play was going on at the time. The second goal came at 12:50 of the second canto Allison Deacon from a mixup in front of McInnis drooping the disc into the twines for the tieing counter, and after eighten minutes of the fastest hockey seen in this rink for sometime, with both teams giving all they had in the final session, France's McKay from another mixup in front of Paynter sank the final goal of the game.

McInnis and Paynter were the outstanding men throughout the evenly matched contest and to pick an outstanding forward or defenceman would be almost impossible as two more evenly matched teams yours truly has never before seen and the many fans are in for some high class hockey during those remaining games of the series.

Led by Ralph Jeffrey the Alberton Boy Scouts skated off the ice at the end of the third period on the long end of a 5-1 score.

Jeffrey opened the scoring at the three minute mark when his long drive slipped by McKenna in the net. A few minutes later McQuaid and Wells combined for number two with Wells sinking the wafer. Erskine Millman made it 3-0 when he batted a loose puck into the twines. Freddie Whelan raised the hopes of the Elmsdale fans when he soloed through for the final goal of the period.

In the second period Elmsdale held the Alberton boys scoreless till the dying minutes of the period when Jeffrey slapped Callaghan's pass into the twines. In this period Whelan starred for Elmsdale as he gave tricky displays of stickhandling to weave his way through the entire Alberton team on several occasions only to have Ramsay block his shot.

In the final canto Elmsdale played five men up in an effort to tie the score, but this spelt their downfall as Jeffrey broke away to score his third goal of the night.

Immediately after the game Mr. Harry Hutt presented the cup to Frank McQuaid captain of the Alberton Boy Scout team.

Referee, Fred Millman.

NAZIS LOOSE

period leading up to the March 31 1939, Allied pledge of aid to Poland in case she were attacked, and extended some months thereafter. Mostly they constituted secret reports from the Polish diplomatic envoys to the then Polish Foreign Secretary, Joseph Beck.

(President Roosevelt, in Washington, told newspapermen in response to questions about the documents that all European propaganda should be taken with grains of salt.

(The United States Secretary of State, Cordell Hull, said the State Department gave not "the slightest credence" to documents released in Berlin.)

"The statements alleged," said Hull, 'have not represented at any time the thought or the policy of the American government." There was immediate conjecture in Berlin diplomatic circles at to whether the substance of this German "white book" had been revealed to Sumner Welles, President Roosevelt's "fact-finder" when he was here.

There also was speculation as to whether the documents were released as an implied answer to Mr. Roosevelt's speech of March 16 when he said the world must seek a "moral basis" for peace.

The National Zeitung, which is close to Field Marshall Hermann Goering said tonight "Germany now is laying on the table proof of the war guilt of the western powers, as well as their open and secret stooges."

The newspaper described the "white book" (the third of the war from Germany) as a world sensation, because "all those men of prominence and official position who belong to the enemy camp and who can claim for themselves to have involved the world in this war, through carefully prepared acts, figure in it.

The documents, attribute to American diplomacy, and especially to Bullitt, opposition to any appeasement of the totalitarian states by Great Britain, through compromise.

After giving out the documents German officials said there would be more later. "This is just the first of a series which will speak for itself," they said.

SUCCESS WOMEN'S INSTITUTE

Mrs. Hugh Campbell entertained the members of Success W. I. on Tuesday evening, March 19th with the President presiding. On motion it was decided to help a needy family in the district, each member to donate something, also a bag of flour to be purchased for same.

The program was then taken up which consisted of two very interesting papers, one on "preparing a hot bed" by Miss Elizabeth Whitehead and the other "Women a National Asset" prepared and read by J. R. Campbell. A contest was put on by Mrs. Hugh Campbell which caused much merriment.

Collection was taken amounted to $1.35

Mrs. Earle Murray invited the members for the April meeting. Roll call "Receipes for war time." Meeting closed. A delicious lunch was served and an enjoyable hour of music and social chat brought the evening to a close.

THE WAR THIS WEEK

By Don Gilbert
Canadian Press Cable Editor

While the "momentous events" in Germany's favor so assiduously forecast by the Berlin propaganda office failed to materialize, Allied diplomacy took the initiative in the 30th week of the war and promised vigorous measures to prevent the Balkan states falling within the enemy's orbit.

A "future line of action" was decided upon at a meeting in London of the Allied Supreme War Council and the British and French envoys in the Balkan capitals and Italy were summoned home for conferences on the Allied position in Southeastern Europe. The day before, Premier Paul Reynaud of France had warned that "at this moment" Germany is ready for "an attack on the economic independence of the Balkans" and declared that France's answere will be to "wage war in all domains."

That some snag had hit Germany's plan to promote an agreement between Italy and Russia, which is believed to have been the purpose of Adolf Hitler's visit to the Brenner Pass to confer with Premier Mussolini the previous week, seemed apparent when the Soviet Foreing Commissar, Vyacheslaff Molotoff, failed to show up in Berlin. The Germans early in the week had all but announced his imminent arrival, handing out information to foreign correspondents about the elaborate preparations under way at the Wilhelmstrasse and at the Soviet Embassy in connection with the visit.

While it was conceded the Nazis may succeed in straightening out the situation to a degree enabling Molotoff to visit Berlin without losing face, there was no indication from Italy that the Fascist regime is taking a more kindly view towards the Bolshevists. Mussolini canvassed the Balkan situation thoroughly in conferences with Count Paul Teleki, the Hungarian Premier, whose country occupies a pivotal position in the way of any German vote to the east.

Britain and France let it be known that Russia will have to bear the consequences of her quasi-friendship with the Nazi government. The new French cabinet demanded that Russia call home the Soviet ambassador from Paris when he made an insulting remark about the Allies in a telegram to Joseph Stalin. Britain, seeking to block passage of supplies to Germany through the Soviet Pacific port of Vladivostok, turned over to French authorities two Soviet freighters suspected of carying contraband in far eastern waters.

A stiffer attitude to the use of Norwegian waters by German shipping also was indicated. Two German freighters were sunk by British submarines just outside Scandinavian territorial waters and British patrols were reported in strength in the Skagerrak, the strip of water between Denmark and Norway through which German vessels must pass to reach the Baltic.

In the air the Royal Air Force had a notable success on the western front when seven R. A. F. planes successfully fought 31 German craft, shooting down five while losing only one plane themselves.

Glancing back 25 years: Intense fighting in the Carpathian Mountains gave Russia command of the Dukla and Lupkow Passes and entry to the Hungarian plains. On the western front allied troops made gains in the Champagne and in the Vosges Mountains.

TRAPPED WHEN

originate.

Those rescued besides Hayes and his boatmen were Roy Sulivan, Carl Himmelman and Edward Renner. Found floundering in the chill water after the ship went down, Sullivan and Himmelman, who hails from Lunenburg and was the only outsider aboard, were brought to hospital here suffering from exposure.

Doctors would not allow them to talk to anyone. They were believed to have been asleep when the crash came.

To get to the deck, they would have had to leave their sleeping cabin, rush along a passageway, through a door and up a companionway; except for the one man who sank just out of reach of the rescuers, the others must have been trapped in their bunks.

After the freighter had picked up the survivors and brought them into harbor under Hayes guidance, a lifeboat crew and Navy vessels searched the spot without avail. Not a stick was left.

Loss of the nine men left the pilotage service depleted. Before the war, 20 pilots manned the Hebridean and her companion ship Naupaila. Six were added to handle wartime traffic, and more were being sought. Now, the pilots are back at prewar numbers.

Tonight, at the pilot office, the atmosphere of sorrow was tinged with puzzlement. For, though the calling is hazardous, not in 25 years had a Halifax pilot lost his life on duty.

The great grey hull of the freighter, apparently undamaged, lay in the harbor, reminder of the disaster to the pilots who gathered in their rooms looking down on it with binoculars. It was expected the ship would be held in port until an investigation is completed. One of the pilots, Captain N. L. Power, walked up and down a corridor outside the office with tear-stains streaking his weatherbeaten face. He was too moved to answer questions. As the regular skipper of the Hebridean, he would have been aboard her this morning had he not been taking another ship into port at the time.

The impact lay heavily on the remaining pilots. They had been looking forward to fishing trips in the mild spring weather, mildly irked at the demands of war that kept them on duty night and day.

Prairies Need Copious Rains For War Wheat

(Canadian Press)

TORONTO, March 28—Wartime needs loom large in the minds of prairie farmers as they prepare for spring work in the West's great grain fields. From the Great Lakes to the Rockies, spring rains are anxiously awaited as winter precipitation has been below normal in all sections except southern Alberta.

Dominion Meteorological Office statistics covering the seven-month period, Aug. 1-Feb. 29, show Saskatchewan to have suffered the worst through lack of precipitation. In that province the average decrease from normal was set at 26 per cent, the loss in Manitoba stood at 19 per cent, with Alberta down eight per cent.

Prairie summer fallow lands on the whole are thought to have sufficient moisture to start the spring crop but stubble lands are dry. Alberta notes a decline in the mountain snowfall, a major factor in irrigation projects.

Southern Alberta provided the brightest spot on the statistical record with precipitation 16 per cent above normal for the seven months. This was more than offset by a decline of 29 per cent in the central section of the province. The north, usually well provided with winter moisture, was down seven per cent.

All districts in Saskatchewan and Manitoba were 20 per cent or more "in the red" with southeastern Saskatchewan down 31 per cent. The drought area of southwestern Saskatchewan showed a loss of 28 per cent.

Monthly Analysis

An analysis of the Meteorological Office's monthly records indicated August precipitation was well below normal in Alberta and Saskatchewan, but in eastern sections of Manitoba excesses of 75 per cent were marked.

Conditions were reversed in September with Alberta's southern districts showing heavy rainfalls and the normal amount in the northern and central areas. Only about half the normal amount of precipitation was recorded in Saskatchewan and Manitoba.

October moisture, which ordinarily stands the best chance of being frozen into the top-soil and retained throughout the winter, was more than 100 per cent in excess of normal in northern and southern Alberta but only slightly above the average in central wan. Deficiencies averaged about Alberta and northern Saskatchewan 20 per cent in southwestern Saskatchewan, 35 per cent in the southeastern sections of the province and 50 per cent in Manitoba.

During November, northern Saskatchewan was the only district in the three provinces to show an increase. In most sections less than half the normal amount was forthcoming.

Snowfall during the winter months of December, January and February was considerably more than usual in southern Alberta and northern and southwestern Saskatchewan. It was below normal in northern and central Alberta and through Manitoba. February snowfall was above normal over practically the entire grain belt, especially in southern Alberta where it exceeded the average by more than 100 per cent.

Luxury Hotel Houses Paris Scissors Men

(By Gladys M. Arnold, Canadian Press Correspondent

PARIS, March 28—Before the war, if you said "Hotel Continental" to a taxi driver, he looked pleased, impressed, and expected a generous tip. The Hotel Continental with its arcades looking out into the beautiful Tuileries Gardens; its old-fashioned luxurious rooms with high ceilings and daintily-carved woodwork; the crystal chandeliers, tapestry and imposing staircases was one of "the" hotels in Paris. One didn't go there without the best-looking luggage.

Hotel Continental! Today the taxi-driver looks at you curiously —even a little suspiciously. The hotel is now the Ministry of Information—the palace of censorship—the temple of Anastasie!

For Saint Anastasie is the patron saint of censorship in France. She fills the blank white space of the newspapers where the most interesting tit-bits of news might have been, in caricature as a long-nosed, sharp-eyed female with a large pair of shears.

Closely Guarded

Today you can't see anybody of importance in the hotel without going through a ceremony like a court presentation. Before the entrance is a soldier who gives you the "once-over." It's only a side-entrance at that. After passing through the swing door another individual and a large red-arrowed placard directs you to the "reception of visitors."

Here two soldiers—sometimes just one soldier and a man with that plain-clothes, cinema detective innocence about him—demand your name, your business, sometimes your passport, and whom you want to see.

Verifying your identity, your name is entered in a book while a swift look smites your conscience and makes you feel uncomfortably certain they can see through you to the country sausage you had eaten illicitly on a meatless day. A bit of paper is now the "open sesame" to the hotel.

In a waiting room another guardian angel recopies your name telephones mysteriously and then make off with the paper. Extra telephones, electric bells and buzzers have been installed to facilitate the task of censorship. One thinks of the proprietor with compassion; if he has a "pound no nails" complex, he must be having a nervous breakdown now.

Transportation

Bedrooms and private salons have simply been emptied of their original furniture and turned into offices by installing desks, telephones and typewriters. Only the pretty bedroom chairs, deep rugs and ruch curtains remain, while screens divide rooms into compartments. Day and night people are working at the Hotel Continental from M. Jean Giraudoux the Minister, down to the most insignificant messenger boy.

News must be censored. Every bit, every line written must go through this net before being allowed to appear in print. Even the sports items are not exempt. Not only is this work necessary for the dozens of newspapers, magazines and weeklies, which are published in Paris, but also for all news which leaves France for other countries. All news agencies must submit their material. And then there are the hundreds of individual journalists and writers.

A staff of translators is necessary—for the correspondents of every nation are to be found in Paris. There must be those competent to read articles in English, Spanish, the Slav and Scandinavian tongues, Turkish, Greek, and so on. All must be passed before permitted to leave France. This is the Hotel Continental. In peacetime, the rendezvous of the distinguished, the social elite; in time of war, the eyes and ears of information.

GREEKS BUY SHIPS

LONDON, March 27 —(CP) —An exchange telegraph dispatch from Athens tonight said Greek ship owners are buying 12 United States vessels totalling 50,000 tons to replace Greek vessels mined or torpedoed.

THE NOTORIOUS CRIMINAL, HERR HITLER'S DREAM

There's a story I am told though strange it may seem,
How the criminal Herr Hitler had a wonderful dream.
He dreamed of the Allies as he lay in his bed,
When his dream took a turn and he dreamed he was dead.
In a beautifully trimmed coffin he was lying in state,
And he saw thousands there but not one mourned his fate.
His soul then buzzed out and he found to his cost,
That he and his soldiers were doomed to be lost.
He wouldn't believe it so to Heaven
went straight,
He arrived at the Portals, knocked loud at the gate.
"Hey Peter," come quick, and open the door,
See who's here, it's Herr Hitler make shouting galore.
Blow the bugle, beat the drums,
have a swell banquet made,
Tell them Herr Hitler has come home, we must have a parade.

Saint Peter looked out and with voice loud and clear Said, "try down below Hitler you can't get in here."
"Tut tut" said Herr Hitler, "you're not very civil,
You probably don't know I'm a friend of the devil,
"I'm going with pleasure," and he started to go,
Hooting and whistling and shouting to make a big show.
When he came to Hell's door he was filled with dismay,
For while waiting outside he over heard satan say,
"Look here boys, now I give you
all warning,
I'm expecting Herr Hitler down
here in the morning,
Don't dare let him in, or we'll kick him right out,
Just give him the ha, ha, and say don't dare show your snout."

"Oh, Satan dear friend," Herr Hitler then cried,
"Excuse me for listening while waiting outside.
Do please let me in for where else could I go?"
"Indeed" said the Devil, "I'll be gummed if I know."
"Ach, please let me in for I'm feeling quite cold,
I haven't got money though I had some I'm told.
Let me sit in a corner, no matter how hot."
"Nix nein," said the Devil, "I certainly will not,"
"You can't gain admittance you dirty old elf,
Here's some sulphur and matches
make a hell for yourself."
From his troublesome sleep Hitler awoke in a sweat.
"Oh, I had, yes, I had such a dream, I shall never forget.
That I won't go to Heaven, I know very well,
But I never believed I'd be kicked out of Hell."

"I'M GLAD TO BE A SOLDIER".

(Dedicated to Corporal James L. MacDonald, P. E. I. Highlanders, Canada.)

I'm glad to be a soldier,
An Island Highlander,
We don't believe in warfare,
But won't take any slur.
We have respect for other lands
Whose people are the same,
But, as for poor old "Hitler",
We'll beat him down in shame.

I'm glad to be a soldier,
A soldier from P. E. I.
They've got the most of what it takes,
They mean to do or die.
They're peaceful loving home folk,
But, should some serpent sting
They'll fight for home and loved ones
And honor, for their King

I'm glad to be a soldier,
Also Canadian;
And proud of our ancestors,
The finest race of men.
Our fathers fought their battles,
On land—in air—on foam;
And after we have done our share,
We'll rest in peace at home.

I'm glad to be a soldier,
To fight against all wrong;
I'll always do my duty,
(While on my lips a song)
To fight for what I think is right,
Will always be my theme;
And in my heart the Union Jack.
Will ever reign supreme.

I'm glad to be a soldier,
A soldier of the King;
To fight for our dear country
And make our cause supreme.
World freedom is our "motto"
Oppressors they must fall;
Long live the British Empire,
The greatest of them all!
