Optometry

Optometry may be defined as the scientific examination of the eye and the prescribing of lenses to correct optical defects.

Formerly the examination of the eye for glasses consisted in the placing of lenses before the eyes of the patient until a seemingly suitable lens had been found.

Optometry affords scientific and precise methods whereby the conditions of the eye may be readily and accurately determined.

FISH THAT CATCH THEMSELVES.

During a recent gale that swept the coast of Great Britain, large shoals of herrings drove into Loch Bay, on the west coast of Scotland...

In times of heavy frost many a lone fisherman makes a point of walking along the rocks at low tide, with an eye open for cod or conger eels stranded in the rock pools.

Some years ago a wildfowler from Yarmouth, noticing a commotion in a hole near the water's edge, found a huge cod struggling in vain to regain the sea.

At Snettisham, near Hunstanton, on the Norfolk coast, a lone fisherman caught in similar fashion a conger which must be almost a record for its species.

Another curious discovery made near Maryport, on the Cumberland coast, was an angel fish, a hideous brute seven feet long, which had stranded itself on the beach.

Whales often drive ashore. In July 1911 a shoal of pilot whales came into Mount's Bay, Cornwall and between fifty and sixty of these great creatures stranded themselves on the beach. Some were over 20 feet in length.

There is a record that in the year 1845 a herd of no fewer than 1,540 of these whales came ashore in Quendane Bay, South Shetland, and were all slaughtered.

In tropic seas, where these fish swarm in myriads, mullet will often jump right into a boat at night if it has a light aboard. Red snapper will do the same thing.

Even in English waters grey mullet sometimes catch themselves. Some years ago a shoal of these fish invaded the Great Western Dock at Millbay, Plymouth.

Among the ancient Indian relics discovered in Porto Rico are numerous stone collars in shape resembling horse collars elaborately carved. It is supposed that they were for use after death.

R. hall, in New York, of an evening of song and laughter which was held sometime ago. Among the performers was Mrs. Rankin, wife of Mr. G. W. Rankin, formerly of St. Albion, P. E. I., a graduate of the Emerson College of Oratory...

WIRELESS TELEPHONING.—With reference to a paragraph in a recent issue of The Guardian, stating that a wireless song broadcast from the Navy League Radio Station had been picked up in Detroit, the item should have read a Morse telegraph call sign originating from a spark telegraph transmitter of the Navy League. Unfortunately there is no broadcasting station east of Montreal capable of transmitting the human voice to any such distance. The fact that the telegraph call was heard at Detroit is evidence of the efficient operation of the Navy League telegraph apparatus.

The ceremony was performed by Rev. R. H. Stavert in the presence of a number of the immediate relatives and friends of the contracting parties. The bride was given away by her brother, Mr. John A. McCallum. The young couple were accompanied by a large number of chivalrously assembled to do honor to the newly weds. After having received a generous treat, the motley crew wended their way homeward in peace. When quiet again reigned in the house, the wedding guests sat down to a daintily prepared supper, to which all did ample justice. Later in the night Mr. and Mrs. Ford drove to their home in Winsloe North. The Guardian joins in wishing the young couple many years of happy wedded life.

IN MEMORIAM FRANK MUZZEY Muzzev is a New Hampshire product. He has the rugged outline of the Granite State blended with the wit of a street Arab. Walter Cox says that his face was used as the model of the Profile Rock which appears on the Boston and Maine Railroad time tables. Muzzev denies this. As a lad, Muzzev decided to make a living on the odd chance and started for the fairs and local gatherings with a wheel. His glib tongue and nimble wit soon shifted him from the ballyhoo stand to the pool box where he sold tickets instead of paddles. Muzzev's clever way of handling the auctions made a hit with the race followers who are never happy unless they have a few dollars on the field or favorite. By his work Muzzev also made a place for himself in the speculator's hall of fame to which the old guard and a few of the modern players assigned places to Underwood, Herdic, Shaw, Dempsey, Quimby, Morse, Riley, Stiles, Fitch and Crutch.

Of this group none of the names arouses as many memories as Herdic. He had a voice like a bell. It could be heard all over the betting ring and his remarks became classics with the talent. Dempsey was a rough customer when the tide of fortune was running the wrong way. But the world used him well, his last days being checked off the calendar on a stock farm which he owned in western Pennsylvania.

Major Quimby's headquarters were in Rochester, N. Y. More took care of the business in New England. Stiles lived in Chicago which was also the home of "Silver Bill" Riley, Fitch and Crutch. Picking winners is a pastime with many people. Being losers—well that is another story and no one has any patience with the crepe hangers so long as the bills are paid. Muzzev is a medium for both. He operates in the bright light without a smoke screen or table tapping to make the ghostly walk. The seance comes after the races.

As Muzzev presides over his homogenous group of customers he has ample opportunity to see the "to be or not to be" among race goers. There are no dreams in his tales. One of these burst forth at the New England Horsemen's dinner at Boston last February. On that occasion Muzzev put in an appearance after an aggravated attack of rheumatism for which he said he had taken everything but the ten commandments and presented the following: The Finish of Tennessee Bill If you will sit tight and try to keep still, I will tell of a horse called Tennessee Bill. They brought him to Windsor one day last fall, hoping to clean up in one haul, all the easy money, both large and small. In the tent of in-shipped Bill that night, by freight trucks, near the big water tank so they say, and they marked the way put in their dough like they say "Empty, don't feed any hay," and been robbing a bank, while Now, all you sharp shooters, who kiddie McGrath with a smile on are waiting to kill, remember the his face drove Tennessee Bill in finish of Tennessee Bill. The fourteen pace. The way that he skinned him down to the half A NOTABLE SWIMMING FEAT made the men from Pa., burst out with a laugh. Into the back stretch Tom Morris, the Australian long swim, still bound, to Cleopatra's Needle—a distance of half a mile. In private life I never knew any one interfere with other people's disputes but that he heartily is to insanity!—Jerrold.
