UNHEALTHY Regions United Nations air bases in the Solomon Islands, Tojo said, have made "extremely difficult" the reinforcement and supplying of Japanese units in those "unhealthy regions." He claimed that Japanese reinforcements had reached Guadalcanal, but did not specify the number nor the direction.

Because of frequent attacks by American planes based on Dutch Harbor in Alaska, Tojo said, the Japanese are withdrawing their troops from the Aleutian Islands are unmanageable.

The Aleutians were mentioned, along with Burma, the Solomons and New Guinea as probable sites of Allied Nations "counter-attacks."

On the profit side of the Japanese war, the Japanese claimed that 1,100,000 tons of raw materials to Japan, or 70 per cent more than the nation's requirements for an entire year.

In his summary of Naval warfare, the Japanese claimed that 1,100,000 tons of raw materials to Japan, or 70 per cent more than the nation's requirements for an entire year.

These Japanese claims obviously were greatly exaggerated. They included one or more aircraft carriers than the United States possessed at the start of the war.

Japanese losses were placed at one battleship, three carriers, four cruisers, 15 destroyers, nine submarines and 20 other fighting ships, 48 destroyers, 39 submarines and 54 assorted other war-craft.

Damaged Japanese warships, he said, included one battleship, two carriers, three cruisers, nine destroyers and one submarine.
