"GIVE US MEN"

God give us men! A time like this demands Strong minds, great hearts, true faith and willing hands: Men whom the lust for office does not kill; Men whom the spoils of office cannot buy; Men who possess opinions and a will; Men who have honor; men who will not lie; Men who can stand before a demagogue without winking; Tall men sun-crowned, who live above the fog; In public duty and in private thinking. For while the rabble, with their thumb-worn creeds, Their large professions and their little deeds, Mingle in selfish strife, lo! freedom weeps; Wrong rules the land and waiting justice sleeps. —J. G. Holland.

AT GRAVESIDE, GRIEF IS TURNED TO JOY

BOSTON, Feb. 11—Sad news came by telegram to Abraham Levine and his three children at their home in Malden last week. The family group was grieved by a sudden brief notification that Mrs. Levine, who had been for some time at an institution in Tewksbury, had died. After the first shock of sorrow had passed the husband hastened out to an undertaker's and made arrangements for having the body brought to Malden for burial. He paid the undertaker $35. Then he sent telegrams to relatives in Maine notifying them of the death. After that he went back to the house and children. The neighbors learned of misfortune and Levine found consolation in the offers of assistance from friends whose kindly feelings came out in the test of trouble. The body was brought on to Malden. The funeral was held at once and at the grave Levine, his children and the relatives, with a few devoted friends, grouped about and wept while preparations were being made to lower the casket. Desiring one last look upon the face of his beloved wife, Levine stepped forward and asked that proceedings be stopped for a moment while he drew back the slide at the head of the casket. As the husband looked in he gave a start and cried out. The woman in the casket was not his wife. The funeral was held while an investigation was made, and Levine found out finally that his wife was alive at Tewksbury. The dead woman was another patient at the institution had borne the same name.
