Reports Of Women's Institutes Of P. E. I.

HOW TO KILL THE INSTITUTE
Taken from "Scottish Home and Country."

Don't come to the meetings. But if you do come, come late. If the weather doesn't suit you, don't think of attending.

If you attend a meeting, find fault with the work of the officers and the other members. Never accept an office, as it is easier to criticize than to do things. Nevertheless, become annoyed if you are not appointed on a committee; if you are, do not attend the committee meetings.

If asked by the Chairman to give your opinion regarding some important matter tell her you have nothing to say. After the meeting, tell everyone how things ought to be done.

Do nothing more than is absolutely necessary, but when other members roll up their sleeves and willingly, unselfishly use their ability to help matters along, tell everybody that the Institute is run by a clique.

Hold back your subscription as long as possible, or don't pay at all. Don't bother about getting new members! Let Mrs. So-and-So do it.

THE HOT SCHOOL LUNCH
If the Prince Edward Island Women's Institutes excel in any one line of work for their communities, it is in the improvement of conditions in the rural school. Perhaps the most important activity in connection with the betterment of conditions in the country school is the installing of equipment, whereby a hot lunch may be served to the children at the noon hour during the cold weather.

MOTHERS, DO THIS—

When the Children Cough, Rub Mustrerole on Throats and Chests

No telling how soon the symptoms may develop in a child. And when you're glad you have a jar of Mustrerole at hand to give prompt relief. It does not blister.

As first aid, Mustrerole is excellent. Thousands of mothers know it. You should keep a jar ready for instant use.

It is the remedy for adults, too. Relieves sore throat, bronchitis, tonsillitis, croup, stiff neck, asthma, neuralgia, headache, congestion, pleurisy, rheumatism, lumbago, pains and aches of back or joints, sprains, sore muscles, chilblains, frosted feet and colds of the chest (if may prevent pneumonia).

Better than a mustard plaster ever-increasing number of schools are serving a hot lunch.

The advantages may be summed up as follows:

1. Digestion is aided.
2. The mid-day meal is better balanced.
3. Pupils are enabled to do better work in the afternoon, and are better prepared for the walk home after school is over.
4. Pupils are encouraged to take sufficient time to eat.
5. They are more willing to attend school in cold weather.
6. The relationship between home and school is strengthened.
7. An opportunity is given the teacher to teach courteous habits and the fundamental rules of table etiquette.

While the above are without doubt the most outstanding benefits that would result from a well-planned and efficiently conducted school lunch, there are a great many minor advantages that would arise from such an institution.

DUTY OF THE TEACHER
The duty of the teacher should only be the general supervision and arrangement of the schedule of work for each child, who would share in the responsibility of the preparation of the meal or in the clearing away afterwards.

The hot school lunch may consist of a main hot dish, such as baked potatoes, baked custard, macaroni and tomato or cheese scallop, potato soup, scallop, boiled eggs, omelette, boiled rice, potato scallop, cream soups, etc., with a hot beverage as cocoa; or it may be only the hot cocoa.

EQUIPMENT AND SUPPLIES
In the first case, a larger amount of equipment and cupboard room is necessary. A separate stove, such as a two-burner oil top with a one burner oven, and a small variety of cooking utensils is needed. The common practice, especially in schools experimenting with the serving of a hot lunch is to serve hot cocoa. In such a case only a small cupboard is needed for the supplies and kettles, and this, along with a necessary serving shelf of table, may be a problem in wood-working for the older boys in the school. The remainder of the equipment and supplies is sometimes donated, but more commonly by the local Women's Institutes.

A teacher in a rural Saskatchewan district, writing of the hot lunch in her school, says:—"The pupils sit at their desks, using a white desk cover on which their desks are placed. The pupils who prepare the lunch are given liberty during the school hours to leave their desks to give attention to the cooking, if necessary."

The cost of supplies, furnished by the School Board is a little less than one dollar per year, per child. Each child is responsible for:—

1. Desk dusted before meal.
2. Face and hands clean, towel got away.
3. Get plate of food from serving table and take to place.
4. When finished, carry soiled dishes to serving table, empty all unused food.
5. Put table cover in place in cupboard.
6. See that desk is free from crumbs, etc.

This school is well supplied with cooking utensils, serving dishes, an oil stove and the necessary groceries. Another arrangement which a number of schools adopt is to have a hot main dish each day, which is sent already cooked to the school by the parents of the pupils who take their turn being responsible for this main dish. It is usually some kind of scallop, or baked beans, which may easily be kept hot until noon by standing in a dish of hot water.

In this case the arrangements for serving should be carried out in a systematic way. The big advantage of this plan is that the school is done away with, and there is no need for elaborate equipment. At the same time the children receive all the benefits of a substantial main dish in the middle of the day.

WHY SHOULD COCOA BE USED IN PREFERENCE TO TEA OR COFFEE?

In the first place, neither tea nor coffee is a food and therefore does not contribute in any way to the nutrition of the body. Furthermore, they both contain harmful drugs, which, while they may postpone for a short time brain and body fatigue, stimulate the heart to greater activity and the brain to greater irritability, and subsequently leave the body in a weaker condition. Children are excitable and given highly seasoned foods, nor those which contain tea and coffee, drug stimulants such as tea and coffee, which over-stimulate the body processes and tax the nervous system.

Cocoa, on the other hand, with milk, Nature's most perfect food, as its chief constituent, supplies the body of the child with all the food substances necessary for growth and activity. Cocoa does contain a very small percentage of the drug theobromine, but the action on the nervous system is much less than that of tea or coffee. Its effect is less stimulating and more sustaining. It is also of nutritive value, because it contains starch, mineral matter, protein and fat.

Recent studies of rural conditions have shown that country children tend more than city children to be below par physically; and this is certainly not because country life does not offer opportunity for good development, but because country dwellers often fail to realize that they must take advantage of the fresh air and wholesome food which are theirs to command.

The realization of what good feeding means for physical and mental development results not only in careful provision of foods for the meals at home, but also in cooperation with the school authorities in securing protection from bad feeding at the noon hour.

P. E. I. engage in this splendid work for "Home and Country."

MARY'S SURPRISE

This is one day's chapter of the story of "Mary and Her Little Lamb." If you read the story and color and cut out the pictures every day you will have the whole set of paper dolls to play with at the end of this week.

Mary started toward her seat. Suddenly she heard a great deal of noise and laughter behind her. Something was upsetting all the children in the schoolroom. Mary turned around. She nearly fell through the floor with surprise when she saw her little white lamb trotting along behind her!

"What's this?" cried the teacher, coming back to see what the excitement was about.

"It's my little lamb," faltered Mary. "He followed me."

"Tomorrow you will find out what the teacher did to the lamb. Color Mary's school dress red with a white collar. Her tam is red, too."

Bishop Hackenley

Delivers Address

Address delivered by the Right Reverend John Hackenley, D. D., Bishop Coadjutor of Nova Scotia before the Diocesan Church Society in St. Paul's Parish Hall, Charlottetown, Wednesday March 18th, 1925.

Reported by EDITH RYAN, STUDENT

Your Worship, Your Grace, Ladies and Gentlemen:

I feel that it is an exceptionally great honor that has been conferred upon me by the address that you have just heard upon this my first visit, officially, to the City of Charlottetown, the Capital of the Province of Prince Edward Island. This is not my first visit. Fortunately, I have seen your city under more favorable weather conditions. It was my good fortune some five or six years ago with a very close companion with me, who, by the way is a Prince Edward Islander—to visit his home and his home Province in that season of the year when the Country and City are at their best, and also when your city looks beautiful, as I know it does under such conditions. But while I am not a stranger to the Island, I am in a large measure a stranger to many of the citizens of the Province, and I hope that this will be but the first of many opportunities that will be given me to become more largely and better acquainted with you and the citizens of this Island Province.

As I have said, it is a very great pleasure for me to be here tonight, and I prize more especially the fact that this address has come from the City as represented by His Worship, the Mayor. In the work which he before us, namely the betterment of the Province and the uplift of the citizens and members of the church as a whole, there must be more co-operation, and it is a very good omen that the city authorities are taking recognition of the value of the Church and State so working together in harmony and peace for the benefit of all. It is a good sign of the times, and I appreciate it most heartily. It will prove to be a joy to all of us and a help to the people as a whole. Therefore, I appreciate, and thank most heartily, the citizens of Charlottetown who have pressed upon me and will say that I will try to carry out the wishes expressed, and will do the best I can in my own humble way.

Tonight, I want to talk to you for a few moments on the program of the D. C. S., and to say how pleased I am with the work of the Society up to the present time. I find that it is an active body, and has workers who are thoroughly in earnest, and it should be recognized that the D. C. S., is a part of the work of the Church in the Province of Prince Edward Island.

Now, I am going to take as my theme a subject based on an article I read some little time ago in one of the church papers, and it was based on a statement that was made by one of the great athletes of our country, and I do not think that you are going beyond the sphere of my position when I make reference to that, because St. Paul was very fond of comparing the Christian life to a race.

He has stated that no one should play golf—I hope there are not this evening—under the age of forty; that it is better for those under that age to take up some branch of sport that was composed of teams. Golf, it is claimed tends to develop the individual. It is a game that will bring out the best of the individual and womanhood in all branches of sport in addition to developing oneself that he may be better and more efficient, he should work in harmony with other members of the team, and so have individuals giving of their best and the club or the welfare and benefit of the whole. I see in this a problem of Christian work. Take it in the matter of parishes. The past has been that parishes have become identified within certain boundaries that they have little consideration for other parishes, rather despise parishes to work together as teams, develop the work to the best of their ability, do anything to bring the parish up to the highest standard, better results would follow.

The Parish for us is the Diocese of Nova Scotia; and it is what we want to remember; therefore I want to impress upon you to give all the encouragement you can. I am not here tonight to give you my impressions as to what is needed in the Diocese; that is in the hands of the Archbishop, and in very good hands it is; but my work is to try to encourage the parish people in the Diocese with reference to the work that lies before us, and to—if possible—get them to realize the expansion of the work; get them to realize where this work is needed. Let us be as an individual entering into the great team of the church in our Diocese, in order that we may work together and pull together and try to see if through this unity, this combination, we cannot carry on the work of the church in such a way, that it will be helpful to the Diocese as of old. There is a great work to be done in this Diocese and what I find so far as I have gone through the Diocese is that the people want to know just what the work is. And they can be encouraged, they can be led, they can be helped in such a way that they will carry on and realize the importance of the work that lies before them, and when they are part of the parish, of the team which is doing the work, then we can expect to accomplish the ends we have in view, in particular—the missionary work. I am particularly interested not only in the educational part of the work of the Diocese, but I am especially interested in the missionary work that is needed in the Diocese of Nova Scotia, because, while we are the oldest Diocese, and have had the church work longer than any part of the Dominion, I think there are in comparison to the number of church people in the Diocese a very small number who realize the needs of the missionary work within our bounds. There are people who have been starved by our church for years; there are others who are only having it under the direction of a student once a year or part of a year, and there are others who are being served by laymen, who are doing their work earnestly, they are doing their work with zeal, and with much enthusiasm. But there is yet a great deal to be done, and it is not simply the need of money, it is not simply the need of organizations. There is plenty of money in the Diocese of Nova Scotia. There is a lot of money for church work, we could only get the people interested, get them to realize the need. There are plenty of organizations. I sometimes fear that we are over-organized, for any little thing that comes up there is an organization for it. If we could be more devoted to the church and the leading organizations, that are organized for the work of the church in the Diocese, we will accomplish greater and better work.

Now, what is the leading need? What is the great need? We want men. I just want to mention that need, so that you have the representatives of the church in Prince Edward Island who have a great many men for the ministry. If young people only received some encouragement from their fathers and mothers, from their brothers and sisters for men to enter into this great work, there would be more coming forward to take up this work that is so earnestly needed. They tell me of churches and missions on the eastern side of the Island that have not been served for years. Here is work, and my friends, I tell you what we need first of all is to place before the people the great need of men. But what do we so often hear, "I do not want my son to go into the ministry. He would not be able to give his family the pleasures and comforts that he would have if he took the same course as his father, and enters any other profession or profession of life would be able to give."

Is it large salaries that are always satisfying? Is it a reputation that is always giving a man peace of mind? Is it comforts that satisfies the manly craving of a man who thinks earnestly and seriously of his God? "I say no. It is not." There is something infinitely more satisfying than even these. It is a satisfaction of knowing that he has taken up the work of the Master, and that there is no more noble work; there is no more soul satisfying work. And my friends, I am not going to deny that there is a good deal of sacrifice, but in any sacrifice there is satisfaction, and especially in the making of the sacrifice for the honor of God and for the benefit of souls. The life is not temporal but rather eternal when he makes that sacrifice. It makes him realize that there is work for him to do. That man has a peace of mind that he cannot express even to himself, much less to his fellows. You people assembled in this hall do not think of your church in the individual way; do not think of your church from your own association but rather take a larger view. But you are just as individually interested, and under the direction of your officers of the D. C. S. you are going to make one of the points of your endeavor to encourage and assist. And in the name of all that is good and noble and great, fathers and mothers, older men and older women, never try to discourage any young man or young boy who has at least some thought, if not ambition, for the work of the Priesthood. Rather encourage them and by doing that you can help your church. I know the Archbishop has thought long and carefully and hard about the problems of supplying men in the parishes of Prince Edward Island, just as he thought carefully and hard and long about the missions and parishes in the Province of Nova Scotia. And I come in contact with these missions and in contact with these people, who have not had the services of the church for a long time. They are hungering for the Bread of Life and the Well of Water that is Eternal. It makes me feel so intensely upon this matter that I try to urge upon the fathers and mothers and young men of our Diocese this great need of the best of our professions and the most sought after. I want you to try to realize that if we are to advance the cause of the church, if we are to satisfy the needs that come from time to time, and if we are to make the Diocese to become one in which you and I are very pleased to labor, we must try to realize that there is a place for everyone that is a member of the church, that is working for the benefit of the Church. Work for the benefit of the old Diocese in a united effort to accomplish the work and to meet the need for which we are battling together, and I do not want you to get discouraged and to say that it cannot be done. It will surprise you and me what can be done. And what I call for and what I cry for is that every churchman and every church woman see that the needs of the Diocese are fulfilled, and when that is done, we will have satisfaction of knowing that by the help of our God we can accomplish those things which seem so far away. Banded as one great force for one great cause, for one God as manifested for us in the person of Jesus Christ, I want you to think about it, and my friends do not forget that there is one great need men to fill our parishes. What they want most is encouragement from those best able and best qualified to give that encouragement, that incentive, and to be like those men of old that faithfully banded together going forward under the leadership of the Christ.
