DIPLOMATIC CORRESPONDENCE BETWEEN UNITED STATES AND EUROPEAN BILLEGEMENTS

WASHINGTON, Oct. 28.—A second instalment of what has come to be popularly known as the United States Government's white book was issued tonight by the State Department. It gives the text of important diplomatic correspondence with the belligerent Governments of Europe since the publication of the first instalment last May.

One of the most interesting features of the new edition is the publication for the first time of a memorandum of the German Foreign Office referred to in a colloquy between Chairman Flood of the House's Foreign Affairs committee and representative Barthold of Missouri, at the hearing of the bills proposing an embargo on arms Mr. Flood quoted the memorandum as a justification of his argument that the German Government did not hold shipments of munitions to the Allies as illegal.

The memorandum says: "Under the general principles of international law no exception can be taken to neutral states letting war material go to Germany's enemies from or through their territory. If, however, a state avails itself of that liberty in favor of her enemies, then it must, in addition to a rule generally accepted in international law, place no obstacle to the German military force ordering contraband from or through its territory. In spite thereof various American port authorities have denied clearance from American ports to vessels of the merchant marine which carry enemy supplies or fuel to German warships either on the high seas or in other neutral ports. According to the principles of international law a neutral state need not prevent furnishing supplies of this character; neither can it, after allowing the adversaries to be furnished with contraband, either detain or in any way disable a merchant ship carrying a cargo. Only when contraband trade would turn the ports into bases of German military stoppage of the trade of those vessels become a duty.

The Secretary of State, in his reply held that: "The essential idea of neutral territory becoming the base for naval operations by a belligerent is, in the opinion of this Government repeated departure from such territory of merchant vessels laden with fuel or other supplies for belligerent warships at sea; in order to ascertain the vessels which are thus operating the Government has been obliged to investigate certain cases in order that it might determine whether there have been or are about to be repetition of such acts, but in all respects equality of treatment has been observed toward all merchant vessels suspected of carrying supplies to belligerent vessels."

The correspondence shows that the State Department received also a complaint from the British Ambassador stating that the "systematic way in which neutral ships have left German ports and have been allowed to operate freely in the ports of the United States in spite of the warnings which have been given in the matter causes grave anxiety to His Majesty's Government."

Mr. Lansing replied that after investigating, "the Government of the United States feels inclined to accept any suggestions intimating that its vigilance in the maintenance of its neutral duties, under international law, has been relaxed."

On another occasion the German Ambassador complained to the State Department that the British cruiser "Fox" was being supplied by tugs from New York. Mr. Lansing answered this with the statement that the Government of the United States had investigated the matter thoroughly and was not able to find sufficient evidence to show that tugs did supply British warships. A series of communications passed between the British Embassy and the State Department on defensive armament of merchantmen and the right of belligerent merchant ships to leave neutral ports prepared to arm at sea. The British Embassy stated that with reference to the fitting out on American territory of vessels intended for warlike purposes, Great Britain would "hold the United States responsible for any damage to British interests generally, which may be caused by such vessels having been equipped at, departing from, United States ports."

The ruling of the State Department that it was permissible for merchant ships to arm for defensive purposes drew forth a note from the British Embassy on instructions from the Foreign Office, giving "the fullest assurance that British merchant vessels will never be used for purposes of attack, that they are merely traders, armed only for defence; that they will never fire unless fired upon and that they will never, under any circumstances, attack any vessel. The German Government taking exception to this view, Mr. Lansing replied, "that the United States held that to permit vessels of small armament to enjoy the hospitality of American ports as merchant vessels was not a violation of neutrality."

NEW YORK, Oct. 28.—The six officers of the interned German raider Kromprinz Wilhelm, who escaped from Norfolk (Va.), Oct. 10, in the yacht Eclipse, were captured at sea by a British warship, according to information in a letter received here today. The letter was sent to William Wolf, a New York manufacturer by his mother-in-law, who was a passenger on the steamer Bermudian, which left New York for Hamilton, Bermuda, last Wednesday. According to the letter, the Bermudian was stopped a short distance from its destination by a British cruiser which engaged the passenger vessel in wireless conversation. The substance of the talk, as told by the wireless operator of the Bermudian, was that the cruiser, the identity of which is not given, had overboard the missing Eclipse at sea, made prisoners of the German officers and sunk the yacht. The letter gives no other details. Reports have been current in shipping circles here for several days that the yacht. The letter gives no other British cruiser, believed to have the H. M. S., Melbourne.

REPORT THAT RUSSIA IS SEEKING A BIG AMERICAN LOAN NEW YORK, Oct. 28.—Agents of the Russian government, it was widely reported here today, are seeking to establish a credit loan in this country, somewhat similar to the recent $500,000,000 Anglo-French credit loan, although no bond issue is contemplated—of from $50,000,000 to $100,000,000, and more, if it can be obtained. Details of the proposed loan were lacking, but in one quarter it was reported that the Russian government was willing to pay as high as nine per cent. interest for a loan of this size. This report added that the loan probably would be in the neighborhood of $60,000,000. It is said that negotiations looking to the establishment of the loan have been under way for some little time past, and that a definite announcement might be forthcoming soon. This would be the first time that Russia would be spent entirely in this country in the payment of supplies shipped to Russia by American exporters.
