"PRINCE EDWARD ISLAND."

Dear Isle that ever haunts my dreams,
Though from it far I wander,
Its beauty re-appears and beams
Before me as I ponder.

A fertile soil of deep red hue
Beneath a rich green carpet,
Above a sky of deepest blue,
Quickly the tourists mark it.

The waters that its shores surround,
Abound with living treasures,
Its woods and rivers, parks and streams,
Afford all kinds of pleasures.

Its fruitful orchards, fragrant flowers,
Its wealth of vegetation,
Its handsome homesteads, and its bowers,
Impel true admiration.

Oh healthful, restful, peaceful Isle,
Where times are ever lively;
Its winters mild are filled with glee,
Its summers wild are lovely.

Cambridge, Mass. O. HUME.

ONE BIG MERCHANT'S METHOD

"With the difference all in favor of the buyer."

That is the way one large and immensely successful merchant headlines a special sale in a well-known city.

Then he goes on to say that having made a n exceptionally large and advantageous purchase of goods he is going to swing the difference the customer's way, for he wants to prove to the public that he is building in a way that benefits his patrons as well as himself.

In other words, on such an occasion he gives more than good measure.

But that isn't such an unusual thing to do after all.

Right here in our own community there are merchants who right along give their buying public the best of a good bit of merchandising, who make the "difference in favor of the buying."

You will find this constantly exemplified in the columns of The Guardian.

It is a fine policy! it pays—pays the customer and pays the merchant.
