SEARCHING OUT CHRISTMAS GIFTS.

As I had an afternoon to myself and Christmas was drawing near I thought I would slip down town and see if I could complete my Christmas list. Now you know girls as a rule are curious to see everything and although on my way to Paton's I dropped into a few stores but did not seem to get interested till I arrived at my destination, then you ought to have heard me gasping, such a bewilderment of goods, such variety, what a fine establishment everything, everything, everything one could suggest or wish. I feasted my eyes on the decorations, such swell goods I actually felt small, me with so little money to spend this Christmas how I wished I was a millionaire or at least married to one, then I thought of Jack and was consoled. Remembering at last my mission I moved to the furnishing counter and my heart grew light again as my eye caught some of the prices attached to the various articles and visions of all I could really buy with my allowance dawned upon me and I was content aye more.

Below is the list I carried away from which to choose for father, brothers, Dick and Tom also my dear John and I think my task will be an easy one.

Now for Mother and sister, Bess I'll try the counter on the other side, time is flying, such dainty fancy collars.

Lovely little chiffon collar forms 2 for 25c which I can trim up and thus save money.

Lovely plain or hemstitched handkerchiefs, 6c, 8c. 12c, 16c.

Now I must be hard to please indeed if I can't make a choice, who would think it 5 o'clock, and I won't have time for a peep at the lovely furniture, carpets, rugs and Bissel sweepers I know they keep, but will try and run in another afternoon as who knows I may be house keeping next summer if Jack —— but that's telling.

Speeches of Men.

You may search through the annals of all time, and the speeches of men will tell the passions of the periods during which they flourished. The speeches of the ancients that have been preserved through the ages present to us our strongest and most important history of the past. They constitute the living sentiment of the literature of fame. In all the mighty tumults of war, the tranquil periods of peace and the convulsive shocks of revolution the orator stands in clear relief as impressive and enduring as the soldier. The great speeches of the great men of antiquity are in the mouth of the schoolboy. He cannot know Greece without Demosthenes. He cannot know Rome without Cicero. Still the stenographers of those centuries were unlike the stenographers of this, and so it will always remain a lasting regret that many of the most brilliant utterances of ancient oratory and wit have never been recorded.

An India Rubber Man.

As the Bordeaux-Nantes express was approaching Bellevue-sur-Vic, France, recently at a speed of over forty miles an hour the engine driver fell from the cab. The stoker stopped the train, fully expecting to find his comrade dead on the line, but was astonished to see him running after the train without a scratch, says The New York World. He climbed in again and drove the train to Nantes.

Even More.
