PUBLIC DISPENSARY APPEAL

Owing to the prevalence of influenza in this City the District Nurse in charge of the Public Dispensary has been taxed more than usual in attending to cases of sickness and poverty, and the resources of the Anti-tuberculosis Society are in demand to an unusual degree in supplying food and medicines. The Society through the Dispensary has been rendering all possible assistance to those in need since the beginning of the epidemic and the visiting Nurse has been indefatigable as usual in her attendance on the poor and sick. The Dispensary is open for call at any hour and Miss DeBlois the District Nurse in charge invites those who are in a position to contribute food and warm clothing to phone the Free Dispensary, 197-J, when articles for the needy will be collected and distributed under her direction as formerly. She is also ready to visit any case not on her list when notified of same.

Welcome to Returned Soldier

On the evening of Friday, Oct. 11 the young people of the neighborhood assembled at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Jas. McQuaid, Baldwin's Road, to welcome their son Ambrose, who lately returned from France, where he fought in some of the heaviest engagements of the war. He was gassed and rendered unfit for further service. During the evening which was spent in dancing, games, music, and song, Pte. McQuaid was presented with an address and a well-filled purse. Although fighting the Hun had been his occupation until lately Mr. McQuaid in a few well chosen remarks thanked the donors for their thoughtfulness and expressed delight at being back again among friends and loved ones. Just before leaving the boys bounced their former school-mate after which the National Anthem was sung and all left for home after spending an enjoyable evening.

Prussian Crown Prince

Catered to Mob Views To Secure Popularity

BEFORE the war Friedrich Wilhelm, Crown Prince of Germany, was described as an unbeschriebenes Blatt, which is not so bad as it sounds, merely meaning in plain English the "unwritten page." Since then there have begun to appear on this unsullied page such expressions as "Beloved of the People!" "Idol of the Army!" Papa Wilhelm, the war lord, may roll down the Linden, flanked and preceded by uniformed guards, with the fanfare of trumpets and all the royal pomp that befits the intimate personal friend of the Teutonic Gott. But the Crown Prince, when not at the front with his beloved soldiers, appears in a modest runabout, his princely by his side, and on the floor of the car, with their bare legs dangling over the running-board, his four rather good-looking youngsters. Just an every-day family party on an outing! The people shout: "Hoch! A fine man!" The Crown Prince grins and thinks German gutters that in English would mean: "I've put another over on you, good people. You think I love you—fools!" The Crown Prince Friedrich Wilhelm, he of the rabbit face, is a skilled camoufleur! Capt. Edward Lyell Fox, a resident of Berlin up to the break in diplomatic relations, and who was quite close to the imperial Germany, writes in the Forum: "The Crown Prince is clever, amazingly so. His face does not show it."

GERMAN CROWN PRINCE.

He has been caricatured to represent a rabbit. There is no denying that his features look weak. He has often been photographed grinning in a silly way; but the grin can be sinister, too. For Friedrich Wilhelm is one of the most dangerous and sinister men in the world! The Sunday editions have regaled us with stories of his exploits—"affairs," supper parties, rash automobile driving and steeplechasing. We all know by now how he led his favorite regiment of Hussars on his horseback up the terraces of the old castle of Sans Souci and then held gay doings with them there. We know how his apparent thoughtlessness has brought down severe criticism from the imperial parent. We have heard all manner of stories involving him with light young ladies. What we have not heard is that the man himself is a contradiction to all his harum-scarum actions of the past. That the emptiness of his face is a mask that nature has given him apparently to conceal the shrewd, calculating brain behind. The soldiers in his army love Friedrich Wilhelm. He has made it his business to meet as many of them as possible. They love him. That is the fighting male population of Germany to-day—except some Socialists—believe that the Crown Prince suffers mental agony every time he reads a new list of German killed or wounded. Did he not say so in an interview which he gave to a newspaper correspondent?

Keeping that in mind, go back into the Crown Prince's boyhood. He had two pet dogs. He wanted these dogs to sit on their haunches and hold their forelegs out straight. It would be a pretty sight when he took his dogs out riding in a little basket cart. He couldn't train one of the dogs to stick out his forelegs like ramrods. So, becoming greatly exasperated, Friedrich Wilhelm snatched the little animal by the scruff of the neck and buried its nose in the dirt. It choked to death. To make sure that the other dog would hold out its legs properly Friedrich Wilhelm broke both of them. It could never bend them. The truth about the matter is that the Crown Prince is a genius for playing the mob. He doesn't care any more for the mob than does the Kaiser. The mob causes his royal blood to revolt. The Kaiser tries to play the mob, but it is exquisite torture for him to pretend he has deep interest in people who are quite ignorant and unlovely. After acting his part, the Kaiser, exasperated with himself, will turn around to a royal aide and let go an oath. Not the Crown Prince. He never shows his hand. Every time he can be makes the mob believe they are the best little people in the world. What a stage director!

Poetical genius is often but an uncommon degree of imagination. for us to teach it. It is close—but not quite close enough. Money is

Condolence

Uigg, Oct. 14th, 1918. Malcolm R. MacLeod, Orwell. Dear Brother:—We the officers and members of Lion L. O. L. No. 1049 wish to convey to you and the others of your family our heartfelt sympathy in the very great bereavement you have been called upon to undergo in the death of your beloved wife. We assure you that every member of your lodge grieves with you. Your sorrow is also ours, and we pray that the Great Grand Master above may console and comfort you. We are sure dear brother that your loved one has gone into the heavenly home where the pure and good are gathered from every land and where God shall wipe away all tears from their eyes and there shall be no more death neither sorrow nor crying, neither shall there be any more pain for the former things are passed away. Signed on behalf of the Lodge. John J. MacLeod, Chaplain. M. E. MacDonald Rec. Secretary.

John W. MacLeod, Lyndale. Dear Bro.—On behalf of the members of Lion L. O. L. No. 1049 we desire to convey to you and to the other members of the family our sincere sympathy in the great sorrow that has come to you through the death of your dear brother and our esteemed brother Orangeman, Pte. Wallace C. MacLeod on the blood-stained fields of distant France. We are not unmindful of the fact that words at such a time are feeble to assuage your grief. Yet we believe that as is the anguish at the loss of such a brother, his passing in the cause of liberty and right for which he fought and died while in action in France will in some measure ease the pain of your sorrow. The example of his love for his friends, his cheerfulness, his clean Christian character; all these will be blessed memories for those whose hearts are now so sore. Again we would assure you all of our heartfelt sympathy and commend you to the God of all comfort and consolation to the great burden-bearer, the Man of sorrows Who is acquainted with grief. Signed on behalf of the Lodge. John J. MacLeod, Chaplain. M. E. MacDonald, Rec. Secretary. Uigg, Oct. 14.

SMOKE TACKETTS T & B CUT

Always the Same

"Beaver" Flour is as uniform in quality as a minted five dollar gold piece. Its proportions are as accurately fixed, and as scientifically determined. The wheats used in milling "Beaver" Flour are analyzed—and the percentages of gluten, starch etc. are found by chemical tests.

We know—from years and years of experience—just how much western spring wheat to add to the choicest Ontario winter wheat—to obtain the desired strength.

BEAVER FLOUR

Equally good for Bread and Pastry. Milled of Blended Wheat.

This is why "Beaver" Flour always gives good results—why it requires less shortening—why everything you make with it has a flavour that you cannot get with western spring wheat flours. Try "Beaver" Flour yourself for both Pastry and Bread—you'll find it equally good for either, and best for both. Remember, to insist on having "Beaver" Flour—the original blended wheat flour. DEALERS—write for prices on Feed, Coarse Grains and Cereals.
