35th OLYMPIAD

LOS ANGELES, May 29. (A.P.)—William M. Henry, sports technical director of the 10th Olympiad, said today assurance has been received from ten of the fifty nations expected to compete in the games here July 30 to August 14, that they will be represented by approximately a thousand athletes.

This total will exceed 2,000 when the rest of the countries report, Henry said, for some of the leading contenders, including Canada and South American nations, have not been heard from officially.

The Japanese have shown the greatest enthusiasm, Henry said. They plan to have 203 contestants. These are equestrians. Eleven schooled horses from the land of cherry blossoms arrived several weeks ago.

Other nations which have reported as to probable size of their teams, are Italy, with 120; Germany and Great Britain, with 125 each; France with 78; 50 from Mexico; 40 each from Denmark and Finland, 24 from India and 12 from South Africa.

It will be only a matter of days now until the Olympic village, with its complete municipal setup of fire and police departments, post office, money exchange bureau, amusement centre, and dining halls, will start filling up.

Unemployment In Germany

which would entail depreciation of the mark, he explained, "but the nation could not stand another inflation without sinking into hopeless chaos."

Chancellor Bruening sketched the Government's plan to relieve unemployment by settlement of people on land, especially on the fringe of cities and industrial centres, and by a system of voluntary labor which would at least help to remove "the deadly curse of enforced idleness."

"Germany cannot solve this vital problem alone," he declared. "The world can only be freed from the scourge of unemployment if all cooperate and general confidence is restored."

Dr. Forbes Godfrey, Minister of Health, through whose death the vacancy was created, had registered 8,296 votes against 4,411 for his only opponent, W. A. Edwards, in a straight Liberal-Conservative fight.

The poll was a heavy one, with a total vote of 16,724 already as compared with 12,707 during the general election campaign of 1929.

With two polls to be heard from, the figures are:

Price, Cons., 6,883.
Guardhouse, Lib., 5,886.
Buckley, Lab., 3,869.
Reid, Soc.-Lab., 106.

The result of the election leaves the standing in the House as follows:

Conservative 88; Liberals 15; Progressive 4; Independent Conservative 3; United Farmers of Ontario 1; Labor 1—Total 112.

urday were Hon. Dr. MacMillan, Acting Premier, who presided, Hon. G. Shelton Sharp, Minister of Agriculture and Mr. J. W. Boulter, Deputy Minister, Prince Edward Island; Hon. Lewis Smith, Minister of Agriculture, and Mr. Harvey Mitchell, Deputy Minister, New Brunswick; Hon. O. F. Goucher, Minister of Agriculture, and Colonel Robert Innes, B. A., Deputy Minister, Nova Scotia. Mr. W. M. Lea, Provincial Opposition leader, was present at the invitation of the Provincial members and took active part in Saturday's discussions.

The conference followed a recent meeting of Maritime Premiers and Ministers held at Amherst, where it was arranged that the Ministers of Agriculture for the three Provinces would meet at Charlottetown min's Court, where we have since remained in comfort. . . The Spring is late but the fields looked fresh and green as ours in early June. The fields were full of cattle and sheep though the ground was so cold and damp that our farmers would expect them to die in like conditions. This first view of England, confirmed by our recent trips into the country, may be summed up by saying that "it is a lovely land."

The British Parliament

"Next morning I called at Canada House. The High Commissioner was then in Ottawa but Colonel Vanier was sufficient. He is a perfect official—competent and courteous. Through him Mrs. Mathieson and I were given places in the House of Commons to hear Neville Chamberlain deliver the Budget speech. It was a good speech and would rank high even in our Legislature—but not too high. Later I attended the debate and saw the House at work. We have had Speakers in ours that would have enforced the rules more rigorously against the Clydeside Labour members, especially in question time. . .

"The high light in the budget debate was the clash between Sir Herbert Samuel and Winston Churchill, of which I enclose the "Times" report of May 5. It was the most spectacular but in my opinion Major Elliot, Financial Secretary to the Treasury, made the great speech in the debate.

Law and Lawyers

"My first contact with law and lawyers was at a meeting of the Benchers, Barristers and students in Lincoln's Inn Hall—no speeches, but an exceedingly pleasant social meeting. My vis-a-vis was Sir Flenes Barrett-Lennard, who had for a long time been a judge in the British Court at Shanghai.

"Next I broke into the House of Lords under the care of Lord MacMillan. He with four other members of the Court read their lengthy judgments in the Bank of Portugal case. Then the Lord Chancellor, superseding Lord MacMillan, invited me to luncheon with the members of the Court who had just given their judgments. It was a pleasant, easy party. They were like a lot of school boys just set free for a half-hour from school. They had many questions to ask about Canada and the chances in the coming Conference, and kept me so busy trying to answer them that I missed most of my lunch. Then a new case came on, presided over by Lord Atkin, with MacMillan, Warrington and two others. It was intensely interesting to see the Court at work though the case itself, which had to do with workmen's compensation, was not interesting.

"Lord Hanworth, the Master of Rolls, invited me to a reception in the Hall of the Archives, which is under his official care, and there we were shown the great historical documents from the Domesday Book down to the immortal "Scrap of Paper." He was exceedingly kind and gave me a card of introduction to Lord Hewart, Chief Justice of England, and the Judges of the Court of Appeal, etc.

"Later the Chief Justice invited me to take a seat on the Bench with him and Lord Justices Avory and Macnaghten, which I accordingly did. For two days following, under the guidance of the C. J.'s secretary, I visited the other Courts but will leave the experiences there for a later time. The lower criminal courts alone remain unexplored. In the Privy Council I heard part of the Davis-Shaughnessy Appeal.

Visit to Oxford

"For the past three days Mrs. Mathieson and I have been in Oxford, the guests of Mr. and Mrs. Haldane. Mr. Haldane is a scientist of world-wide fame, a brother of Lord Haldane. It was he who discovered the constituents of the German gas used in the war and who invented the respirator which saved our men. We met there a distinguished company of Oxford people, including Julian Huxley, grandson of the great Thomas Huxley, a contemporary and co-worker with Darwin.

"It was a delightful experience—perhaps most of all for the insight it gave into English life from the very heart of England.

"These people are all intensely interested in Canada and what will

IMPRESSIVE CEREMONY

Thursday, the Feast of Corpus Christi, the pretty chapel in the Sacred Heart Home was the scene of a solemn and impressive ceremony at 9 a.m., when a number of young ladies of the province, dedicated their lives to the service of God, in the Order of the Marthas. His Excellency Bishop O'Sullivan officiated, assisted by Rev. P. McMahon, D. D., and Rev. Louis Dougan.

The following young ladies received the Holy Habit: Patricia Cullen, Charlottetown; Edith Keefe, (Sister Mary Ursula); Edith Keefe, Kinkora (Sister Mary Angela); Melaine Arsenault, Tignish (Sister Mary Assumpta); Catherine McPhee, St. George's (Sister Mary Charles); Bernadette Connolly, City, (Sister Mary Magdalene).

As the young ladies entered the chapel gowned in white they were preceded by the following little girls who acted as flower girls: Misses Frances Kelly, Alma Monaghan, Mary Fleming, Irene McPhee and Mary Hennessy.

The Habits were borne by five other little girls, viz.: Misses Mary Pendergast, Marion Keefe, Kathleen McNeely, Inez Murray and Thelma Hennessy.

After the Habits had been blessed by His Lordship the young ladies retired, returning with the conventional black of the Order, after which Mass was celebrated by His Lordship and the names by which they are to be known in Religion taken.

Two other novices also made their first profession vows, viz: Sister Cecelia Joseph Gallant, Egmont Bay, and Sister John Baptist MacDougall, Tracadie.

During the ceremony the required psalms were chanted by Rev. B. Gillis, D. D., who also rendered most effectively the beautiful solo "Pans Angelicus."

An appropriate sermon on the Dignity of the Religious Life was delivered by Rev. Hubert Sweeney, C. P., who recently conducted a retreat at the Mother House, Mount St. Mary's Mt. Edward Road.

At the conclusion of the ceremony, which was attended by a large number of relatives and friends of the young religious His Excellency Bishop O'Sullivan said he could not allow the occasion to pass without referring to the presence of Archbishop O'Leary of Edmonton, who was the founder of the Order here.

His Excellency congratulated the young ladies on the step they had taken in entering the religious life and also congratulated their parents who had nurtured them in good homes and encouraged them to correspond to the inspiration of the Holy Ghost, which every good Christian is supposed to follow.

He was glad of the opportunity to thank the Archbishop of Edmonton who in founding the Order in Prince Edward Island some fifteen years ago had been loyal to those inspirations. In concluding, His Excellency pointed out the large field of work which was presented in charitable endeavours.

His Excellency Archbishop O'Leary also extended his congratulations to the young ladies and their parents. It was a great joy, he said, to witness the growth of the community which had grown from four pioneers to fifty-four, and room for three times as many to continue in the educational, catechetical and charitable works of the Order.

During the ceremony the following priests occupied seats in the Sanctuary: Right Reverend Monsignor Maurice McDonald, Rev. J. C. McDonald, D.D., Rev. W. V. McDonald, D.D., Rev. Jas. Murphy, D. D., Rev. M. Smith, J.C.B., Rev. J. B. McIntyre, Rev. M. Francis, Rev. A. J. McIntyre, Rev. J. Far-

Mystery Writer Warns Carol

VIENNA, May 29 (A.P.)—A mysterious parable writer who signs himself with double quotations, and is believed by many to be General Alexander Averescue, leader of the Rumanian people's party, caused excitement in Bucharest today with veiled warnings of death for King Carol of Rumania and his friend, Mme. Magda Lupescu.

Months ago he hinted strongly at dethronement of the Rumanian King, but recently his writings have taken a more sombre turn. A week ago he alluded to the death of the French King, Henry II, in terms leaving no doubt he was warning King Carol.

The cafes buzzed today over his latest "history parable" in the people's party organ "Indreptarea," which again plays with the death theme in what some readers interpreted as an attack on Madam Lupescu, red-haired companion of Carol's Par's exile before he became King.

In this sensational parable, the text of which has appeared in Vienna the writer "took as his theme Madame Du Barry and her influence over Louis XIV."

It was out of the corruption of Louis' court that grew the French revolution," the mysterious writer said, "and only slaves and lackeys could glorify Kings like Louis XV today."

The death note was particularly pronounced in view of a story persistently circulated in Bucharest to the effect that a soothsayer years ago foretold that an attempt would be made to assassinate King Carol not long after fire destroyed one of his residences. The Royal Chateau recently burned down at Sinaia. Many are inclined to doubt that such a prediction ever was made, believing the story is just another attempt to warn or intimidate King Carol.
