CONFIDENTIAL AGENT AT CAPITOL, SUMMERIDE

Moviegoers of a romantic turn of mind who have felt a decided lack of ardor in the large number of blood and thunder war films that have come out of Hollywood in the past few years will be glad to hear that the pendulum has begun to swing backwards again. The latest example of a return to the pre-war days of sultry and inspired film love-making is to be found in Warner Bros. newest drama, "Confidential Agent."

Lunch: Pea soup, Habitant, Chicken aspic, Grilled lamb chops, Broccoli, Milanaise, French fried potatoes, Chef's salad. Dinner: Assorted canapes, Essence Madrilene, Chicken casserole, Bourgeois, Green peas, bonne femme, Lyonnaise potatoes, Crepes Francaises, maple syrup.

For the scholastic examinations, the students were given dictation to ascertain their spelling ability and had to do two problems of arithmetic connected with costs of meals and percentages of profit. The examiners were W. J. Wetli, catering supervisor, Canadian Pacific Hotels; Louis Beliers, chef de cuisine, Chateau Frontenac; L. Rhode, relieving chef, and Norman Baugh, chief steward.

The training, which will shortly be in full swing in every link of the Canadian Pacific's country-wide hotel chain, consists of a two-year period, exclusive of a probationary month at the start of the course, when the lads' possibilities and inclinations are assessed. The young men are not kept washing dishes, peeling potatoes, scrubbing, or working at other scullery chores. From the start of the course they are put at some interesting work that is definitely part of a chef's training, and there is always the hope that some day they too may join the ranks of true gastronomical geniuses.

In the two years schooling an apprentice receives two months' training as a breakfast cook. In that time he learns how to cook eggs in various ways, the proper handling and cooking of bacon and fish, and the proper preparation of breakfast cereals. From there the lad goes to the butcher department for a three-month period, then three months on pastry, four months as a roast cook, grill cook and fry cook; then four months each as an entremetier (vegetable cook to you); garde-manger, or cold meat man; pastry cook and finally four months as a sauteur, or sauce cook.

And after that, if he passes his examinations, the apprentice is ready to take up the duties of a full-time chef.

And there was a corner devoted to a model show in Berlin. But all in all, you got the feeling that there was only one city to think about when it comes to fashions—Paris.
