offer your guests the finest... offer them Ganong's. Each piece is perfection, chosen for Ganong's, chosen for you from exotic tropical fruits and nuts and spices. These are smothered in rich, luscious chocolate. One taste tells your guests these candies are Ganong's... the finest in the land.

One of these days—soon we hope—we'll have Ganong's for you every time you ask.

Ellen's Diary

was from a bride's bouquet, a shower one, for a bit of white ribbon held it. What a story was there, if I could have read it! The romance, the wedding, and did they live happily ever after? I should like to know. The clover. Was it only a gesture to Lady Luck or did it hold a promise? A promise as old as the hills. And would the sprigged muslin have something to do with it? And where did the oak grow? I wish that I knew.

Good Friday brought a clear blue sky, sunlight touching the stubbles and pasturing the red-brown of the plowed fields but the "prevailing wind" was cool and out of the North. "A South wind, Ellen" James said "would be a nice wind for today. Unless we get lots of rain I'm afraid there'll be mighty poor hay crops." However, over our woodlands and above the fields it blew coldly, the same fields along which James walked this afternoon on his way to Rob's. It was as he said "a long time" since his last visit there and I suspect that he found much of interest to inspect about the place, not the least of these would be the two grand-sons. The younger lad at six weeks "is quite old-fashioned" James tells me, though he is a bit puzzled, as to "which side of the house" he resembles most. The better features, after weighty consideration, of course "incline to our side, Ellen" the not so attractive (looking at me intently so as to make a fair comparison) are "yes, quite a lot like yours, Ellen." Our cattle-kind still manage to gaily mount the incline from the watering hole and the flock of poultry foraged in the nearer fields. Sunshadows of the bare trees lay about the lawn, trees that one senses will soon have squirrels' ears of leaves. But all day the scum of ice remained on the pond, only sparrow-birds chirped among the shrubs when we would have had robins, and "the crows flapped over by twos and threes", cawing boldly to disturb Pard's napping in a sheltered and sunny verandah-corner. He has fully recovered from his accident and can chase briskly after those that presume to sit even briefly in the old spruces down in the orchard. Pard is not so easy at present as he appears to be. Notwithstanding an order, born out of recent and more intensive cleaning, and to the effect that "I'm not going to gather up sand and mud after that dog" he followed close on James' heels this evening when he came in from the choring. Oddly, as now, an eye opens to regard me with some reproach. As if to say: "You forget, Ellen how faithfully I escort you, from the house across the lane after dark. And many another trip I come with you. Down to the mailbox—I'd hate to miss that one. Remember yesterday when you tried to slip away without me, just for fun, but I knew and beat you to it, didn't I? And when we gathered the crows from the pasture—I enjoy that. Or to the field for the new potatoes or other vegetables, or to the woods for berries? I'm not a bad dog, am I? I sort of reckon I make up in those ways for any inconvenience I may cause you." Come to think of it, all, Pard is not a bad dog. Until tomorrow—Diary—Good-night.

Lively Discussion On Fish And Game Amendments

A bill to amend the Game Act—a hardy perennial which makes its appearance every year for one purpose or another—provoked lively discussion in the Legislature yesterday morning. The bill was moved into committee by Mr. George E. Saville, with Mr. Leslie Hunter in the chair.

The promoter gave the customary explanation, namely that the object was to preserve fish and game which is getting scarce in the Province. Everyone would like to see wild life more plentiful, he said. If properly looked after the Province should have an abundance of pheasants and prairie chickens. The same applied to trout. There was also involved the question of preserving the water supply by rebuilding ponds, etc.

Under section 2, the minimum penalty for taking or selling fish or game out of season is increased from $20 to $50. Mr. Heath Strong protested that in some cases this would be pretty severe. He agreed that persistent lawbreakers should be punished severely, but there were others who violated the Act innocently.

Moves Amendment. The promoter moved that the fine be amended to $20 minimum for first offence, and $50 minimum for second offence. The maximum penalty under the section is $100, or a jail term not exceeding thirty days.

Mr. Morley Bell said the Act is already on the statutes and the people know its provisions. The section under discussion was to prevent illegal selling of ruffed grouse and other game by people who found it profitable to do so with the present minimum fine. The same applied to trout. He knew of persons who habitually broke the law and it was against these persons that the amendment was directed.

Mr. Strong agreed with Mr. Campbell that the magistrates should be allowed to use discretion in cases where it was known that the law had been broken innocently. He cited an instance where, on the other hand, a merchant believed to be an old offender had been convicted of selling game illegally, and the magistrate had been requested to impose the maximum fine but had not done so.

Power of Suspension. Hon. Dr. MacMillan pointed out that the magistrates already have the power to suspend sentence. This bill was to get at the chronic law-breakers and he approved of it thoroughly.

Mr. H. H. Cox said he knew of a man in Prince County who had been buying partridges from boys for years, and shipping them into Charlottetown. It was to get after people of this kind that the higher minimum penalty was required.

Premier Jones: "Have you ever passed in this man's name?" Mr. Cox: "No." Premier Jones: "Well, if you had done so the Attorney General could get after him and we could put a stop to this practice."

Mr. C. F. Morrissey, 1st Prince, asked what part of Prince County the hon. member was referring to. Mr. Cox replied that "it might be Portage and it might not."

unless we act 1 in 8 will die of CANCER ever, that birds would go to the places they liked best. One bird which should be given more protection is the natural rough grouse, he said. In the case cited by Mr. Strong, he thought the magistrate had not exercised good judgment, as he understood the party was an old offender.

Mr. Cox said he was informed the migrating game was about 50 per cent less than it was some years ago. All over Canada they are shortening the season for trout and migratory birds.

Few Convictions. Hon. Mr. Barbour recalled that when the Act was amended previously the farmers were given permission to fish on their own properties without licenses. He noted in the last annual report of the R. C. M. P. that there were only 10 convictions under the Act for the whole Province.

Section 2 was carried as amended, providing for a $20 minimum penalty for first offence, and $50 minimum fine thereafter. Sec. 3 provides an open season Dec. 1 to Jan. 31 for hares or rabbits. It provides that this game may be snared, but not shot, during the month of November.

Sec. 5 imposes a hunting license fee of $25 on bona fide residents of Nova Scotia and New Brunswick, and of $35 on all other non-residents, license to non-residents to be limited to a maximum of 200 in any one year.

Skunk Bounty. Another section provides that from and after April 30, 1947, no bounty shall be paid in respect of any skunks killed after that date.

In reply to a question by Opposition leader, Hon. Mr. Stewart said the Department was paying a $30 bounty on snouts after April 1. Last Saturday 115 adult snouts were brought in.

Mr. Saville thanked the members for their support of the bill, and related an amusing experience of his own, when he had failed to catch any fish and a young lad with a short piece of pole caught such a big one that he had to walk backwards to bring it in.

There was laughter, but no reply from Mr. Saville, when Dr. MacMillan asked: "Did you buy it off him?" The bill was then reported agreed to.

EARNSLIFFE W. I. The April meeting of the Earnscliffe W. I. was held at the home of Mrs. Joseph Morrissey, with an attendance of 8 members and 4 visitors.

Meeting opened by the creed, followed by roll call which was answered by "A House Cleaning Hint."

In Memoriam

In loving memory of our dear wife and mother, Mrs. Glenn Waddell, who passed away April 11, 1945. Sweet memories will linger forever. Time cannot change them but true years that may come cannot sever our loving remembrance of you. Remembrance is a golden chain. Death tries to break, but all in vain. To have, to love, and then to part is the greatest sorrow of one's heart. The years may wipe out many things. But this they wipe out never. The memory of those happy days. When we were all together. A cheerful smile, a heart of gold. The dearest wife the world could hold. Happy memories fond and true. From one who thought the world of you. Lovingly Remembered by Husband and Family. ALL OFF—SPFLASH! REGINA.—(CP)—Rapid melting, which left many "lakes" on Regina streets, prompted one bus driver to an unexpected transfer-point call. As he neared downtown Regina he solemnly called, "Broad street and Lake of the Woods."
