BY-LAW TO ESTABLISH INSTALMENT PAYMENT OF CIVIC ASSESSMENTS AND TO FIX THE RATE OF DISCOUNT THEREON

BE IT ENACTED by the City Council of the City of Charlottetown as follows:—

1. That all ordinary general Civic assessments on real and personal property within the City of Charlottetown for the fiscal year 1937 and each succeeding year shall henceforth be due and payable in four equal installments within the fiscal year that the same be assessed, as follows: One installment on the thirty-first day of March, one installment on the thirtieth day of June, one installment on the thirtieth day of September, and one installment on the thirty-first day of December.

Should any assessment be appealed and the appeal thereon not determined before the time within which the discount on any installment thereof shall be available, then such installment may be paid subject to determination of such appeal and due allowance for the result of such appeal, by refund or otherwise, be made thereafter.

7. All poll taxes shall be payable on the thirty-first day of March in the year of assessment, and no discount shall be allowed upon any installment of any assessment while the person assessed be in arrears for current poll taxes.

8. Should any installment of real or personal assessment remain unpaid, in whole or in part, after the time within which the same shall be hereby discountable, then all remaining installments thereof shall immediately fall due, and collection thereof may then be enforced by any means or process available for collection of assessments under the provisions of The Charlottetown Incorporation Act.

We'll Meet Again

By MARGARET GORMAN NICHOLS

Lucia pulled off her white gloves and reached for a cigaret. "Did you see them, Alan? They left when we came in. Gay isn't doing badly by herself." She bent her head to catch a light. "She is wearing a new dress Gregg probably bought her."

"That's unking of you," Alan said moodily. Catty."

What else is one to think?" She blew the smoke upward. "Every one is talking about it. Of course, she'll marry him. Gay's no fool. But every hostess in New York is trying to get him to her parties."

"I don't think she'll marry him," Alan said soberly. She'll never marry him for his money." His head had spun when he saw her and he wondered how he could endure Lucia's inane converstion all evening with the memory of Gay in that white dress and her curls brilliant and shining beneath the shadowy lights.

* * * *

In the narrow hall Gay stood beside Gregg where she had so often stood beside Chris. How different they were! Gregg—with his top hat in his hand, his heavy white silk scarf tied close to his chin, his long black coat. And Chris—in rumpled tweeds, in a blue shirt and vivid tie, and his unruly black hair disheveled.

Gregg drew her close gently.

"Gay, when are you going to let me stop being just your friend and let me be what I want to be This is too casual and it can't go on this way! There are girls and girls I've kissed and danced with but—but I had to come back to New York to meet the only girl I ever wanted to marry."

She did not draw away. She closed her eyes tightly to keep the tears back because everything was so terribly confused. Added to the other demands people made of her was Gregg's demand—no, not demand but his plea to love him. She thought with a sudden shock that every one in her life asked something of her, every one except Chris. He had demanded nothing, asked for nothing.

I want you to love me," Gregg said. I know and understand that in your life now there isn't much room for love. But, Gay, love me, love me a little. Let me help to take some of the confusion out of things for you. They all expect too much of you."

Perhaps I'm afraid to love you even a little, Gregg. The people I love always go away. They take themselves out of my life."

I'll never go away unless you send me away. I won't become another problem to you. Perhaps I spoke too soon."

It was pleasant to be in his arms. Life wasn't so frightening when arms that loved you—held you. Chris, yours were the strongest arms. Yours was the strongest will. I felt invulnerable to everything when you were with me. Why did you go away, leaving me helpless?"

Gregg said, Kiss me, Gay. For weeks I have wanted to kiss you."

When he left, her heart moved quickly and painfully in her. She stood in the dark living room, her wrap hugged close about her, and despised herself for letting him kiss her. I felt unfaithful, she thought bitterly. Unfaithful to Chris."

Lying next to Penny, she tasted her tears that night because she saw herself helplessly caught in a current that was stronger than she was.

* * * *

There is always music in Nassau.

Sitting on a vine covered balcony overlooking the sea and hearing the haunting music from guitars, Chris Mallory crushed his cigaret beneath the heel of his shoe and went back into the room.

I'm going back, he said, Going home."

You haven't finished your play, said Mac Bolton.

Who am I to write a play? He stood in the middle of the floor, tall, bronzed, his hands in the pockets of his white trousers. Why did I come here? This place is maddening! I've been sitting out there thinking of the coward I was to run away.

Mac, with a deep scar over his eye, grinned.

You and me, too. But here we are and what are we going to do about it?"

Frowning, filling his pipe Chris said, I never realized before that I left her an easy prey to any man with money. She'll marry for her mother's sake. She's crazy about her mother. I left her at loose ends. I was afraid of being hurt myself. We're a fine pair, we are! We didn't care how much they'd be hurt!"

He picked up a typewritten manuscript.

She's in this, in every page."

Are you going back?" Mac asked.

Not until this is done. Maybe I'll have something to offer her then. But I don't want to offer her anything except myself."

Suppose she gets married.

Chris walked to the door that led to the balcony and looked out into the warm night.

My mother—she who knew a lot of things—always said I'd be a one-woman man. I see a lot of girls here....."

There's Evelyn, said Mac.

Yes, but....but...."

Mac nodded. I know. She doesn't have red hair."

There were times when Gay thought she did not love Alan any more. She thought, I haven't thought of him all day." But there were other days, despite the unpleasant situation at home and Gregg's attentions, when the thought of him never left her.

The circumstances at home were becoming intolerable.

One night Penny said like an humble child, I'm sorry, but I'll have to move, Gay. I have to have it quite when I work and Patti has the radio on and talks to people over the phone. I'm sorry. She isn't, said Penny, very nice to me. She seems to resent people who work for their living. I've tried to be nice to her."

Gay said, Don't go just yet. I don't want you to go. Give me a little time. Do you," she asked, ever hear from Mac?"

No. Never. Her lower lip trembled.

And there will never be anyone else for you?"

I want only Mac, Penny said with stubborn sweetness. You see a lot of Gregg these days. I like him. He's in love with you, Gay, Sitting up in bed, she hugged her knees. But he's a bored young man. He has seen too much. There's nothing left for him to explore. His curiosity is all gone. Because Chris and Mac have had to fight for everything, they're still curious and interested."

It was when Gay saw Patti lunching with a former admirer several days later that she decided the affair had reached a climax.

She called Richard's Washington home. The butler said, as if he expected her to know, Mr. Miles is still abroad. But she did not believe that Richard, after his quarrel with Patti, had stayed in Paris.

That night she walked to the hotel where Richard always stayed when he was in New York. He was registered. He was in. Gay took the elevator to his room and knocked.

A girl, a little blond thing, opened the door. Richard, seeing Gay, put down his cocktail glass and got up.

Hello, he said. He looked embarrassed and then indignant. If you've come about Patti...."

She's your wife, said Gay.

She left me, Richard said sulkily. He turned to the girl. Eve, would you mind waiting down in the lobby for me It'll take only a few minutes. We won't miss that party."

When the girl had gone, Gay said, Richard, stop lying to me and to yourself. A few minutes, I suppose, to write the end to marriage and to tell me what you think of my sister. You want to undo in a few minutes what took you years to accomplish."

He picked up the glass again. She was unbearable.

You knew her four years before you married her, said Gay. I'm not excusing her for anything. I know her disposition very well. But I don't believe you want to end your marriage like this or so soon. You haven't given it a fair trial. You're not a person to take it, lightly."

She left me, he said, because I wouldn't buy her an ermine coat. That's how much I meant to her! I came back on the next boat. I've been here in New York ever since. She left me and if she wants to see me, why didn't she come?" He paused and said, I went to see your family lawyer. I called at the old apartment and new people were living there."

You know then.

I'm very sorry for you, said Richard.

Don't feel sorry for me. If you want to fix it up with Patti, come and get her. She wants to come back to you, Richard. You're the only person who can manage her. Because you stayed away, her vanity is hurt."

Mine was hurt, too.

Gay cried, What children you both are! To ease your vanity you've been going to parties with a girl you wouldn't have noticed before. Patti had lunch with Ronnie Webster today! She wants her hurt vanity soothed, too. Oh, Richard, stop this and come and get her! How can you be so foolish? Mother and I are working. We make scarcely enough to keep ourselves. But we've been keeping your wife while you've been taking girls—girls like Eve—to parties!

It does seem rather silly, he said. If she'll stop wanting everything she sees.....I'm well fixed but I can't buy ermine coats and emeralds. I despise an extravagant woman."

Won't you come home with me? She'll be so glad to see you. She hates where we live."

FORMER CRIPPLE NOW PLAYS TENNIS

Rheumatism in Feet Relieved

Here is a story of a young man who had almost given up hope of taking part in active sports with his fellows again. He tells how he tried one remedy after another and how finally a former sufferer put him on the way to recovery:—

"Two years ago I started with pains in the feet which gradually got worse. I tried 'everything under the sun' but to no effect. Whilst waiting for treatment one evening, another patient advised me to try Kruschen Salts. That was twelve months ago; the relief was not sudden, but the pain and swelling gradually left my feet, and in six months I amazed my friends by taking long walks into the country. This year I have played a good deal of tennis, a thing which I had begun to think I should never do again."—C.W.

Rheumatic pain and swelling is frequently caused by excess uric acid accumulating in the body. Kruschen contains two ingredients which are notable for their work in dissolving uric acid deposits. Other ingredients in Kruschen assist the internal organs to expel this dissolved acid from the system.

CURVES ON WAY BACK

In spite of the streamlines of the Paris dress, better keep an eye on the figure girls. It is said that curves are indeed coming back to the human form divine. Several of the most noted of the Paris couturiers are encouraging a modified version of the hour-glass figure. Vionnet and Lanvin, who dress many actresses, are demanding that their models put on flesh. Alix and Schiaparelli—both noted for the originality of their creations, outline the body curves. Pinching in the waist is the manner in which Schiaparelli brings back the figure of the gay nineties. Alix uses clever draping of material to gain the desired effect.
