This Soviet youth is pressing out rifles to members of a civilian "exterminator battalion" in a Russian town, according to Soviet-censored caption on the picture, flashed from Moscow to New York. "Exterminator battalion" is a Russian euphemism for sharp-shooting snipers who lurk in buildings in Nazi-held towns and pick off German soldiers as they approach.

THE GARDEN OF THE GULF
O let me call it "Wonderful" For that it "really" is A pleasant little fairland A sanctuary of Bliss.

ANTICIPATION
Weave me a wreath from the leaves of Autumn has changed them to gold, brown and rose. Give me the fragrance of dew-nursed meadows. The incense of hot beds where hyacinth grows.

Thrill me with music, rare note of enchantment That rise from the wood at the breaking of day: Tune my poor muse with the glad songs of nature That comfort one's soul like some heavenly lay.

Give me a heart that can feel Of the lover's sorrow, And hands that will lift up the fallen and low. Give me bright eyes that may seek out the beauty of heaven's lay.

Rolling o'er the landscape Devoid of rock and stone The impression is, that this was not The work of "man" alone.

O God, has blessed this country With a rich and fertile soil And a gift of priceless value "A really mean it smile."

Sitting on the Ferry To watch the land recede Gives a feel of satisfaction And a thoughtful heart indeed.

In the coarse grain pit, mills offered fair support for oats, but oats and barley prices both worked lower on liquidation, oats losing about 1 1/2 cents, barley 1 1/2 cents.
