Cape Town Services

(Canadian Press)

LONDON, Jan. 21.—Imperial Airways announce that regular flying will begin over the northernmost section of the Cairo-Cape Town air trunk line on March 5, when an inaugural flight will be made from Cairo to Mwanza, Tanganyika Territory—a distance of 2,670 miles.

Departure from London to connect with this first through air liner is scheduled for Saturday, February 28. Nine days after leaving London passengers will reach Mwanza; the swiftest surface transport takes 24 days. The service between Cairo and Mwanza will be operated weekly in each direction, the first return flight beginning at Mwanza on March 10. Eight days later passengers and mails are timed to disembark at the London air port.

Between Cairo and Khartoum, the route will be operated by big three-engine Armstrong Siddeley "Argosy" biplanes similar to the craft which have built up a fine reputation for economy and dependability in many months of flying over the London-Paris route. At Khartoum, freight and passengers will be transhipped to Short "Calcutta" flying boats for the journey to Kisumu and Mwanza, going by the way of the Nile and the Great African lakes. The company hopes to have the entire 8,000 miles of airway between London and Cape Town in regular operation by May or June this year. Eleven days in time will then separate the two cities, comparing with 17 days by the fastest boat and train.

THIS SNAKE TRIES HARD BUT CAN DO NO HARM

One of the most numerous species of snakes found in the West is the water snake. There are about 100 varieties of the snake found throughout the country.

The common water snake, often wrongly called "water moccasin," is abundant from Canada to Wisconsin and south to California. It is from three to four feet long, brown above and spotted with red below.

Hockey At Wellington

(Canadian Press)

Two games of good clean hockey were played at Wellington on Tuesday for the MacLean Trophy. A special train took the boys and fans down. The players were the Kensington Granites vs Wellington Bafflers and C. Y. M. L. vs Holmans. Both were league games in competition for the MacLean Trophy. Kensington after three periods of good hockey won from the Bafflers with a score of 11-6. Kensington did not play an aggressive game until the last period. They were without the services of one of their best players, Chick Bernard. They used some of their junior players which made the play more evenly matched. The Wellington team carry no spares and although they play a good brand of hockey it is improving fast they show signs of fatigue in the last period. The score by periods was 2-2, 7-4, 11-6.

C. Y. M. L. and Holmans played a good fast game, a little rough at times but a good exhibition of hockey. First period was 2-1 in favor of Holmans. In the second the C. Y. M. L. came to the front and evened the score. C. Y. M. L. coming out and the best end of the score at the finish with one goal to the good. It was a close game. Final score 4-3 in favor of C. Y. M. L.

Referee—Herbert Schurman. Mr. Clovis Perry and A. L. Rogers refereed for Kensington and Wellington. The ladies entertained the boys to supper after the match in the new hall and everyone felt they had a thoroughly enjoyable evening.—S.

No "Right Honorable" In Hertzog Cabinet

(Canadian Press) CAPE TOWN, South Africa, Jan. 21.—"There is no "Right Honorable" in the Hertzog Government and Hon. James Hertzog, Prime Minister of the Union of South Africa, alone among the Prime Ministers of the Empire, is not a Privy Councillor, nor are any members of his ministry privy councillors. "When the new premiers of Canada, Australia and New Zealand were created privy councillors at the recent Imperial Conference in London, General Hertzog still stood aloof," says a writer of the Cape Argus, Cape Town. This writer says: "The announcement that Rt. Hon. Jacob de Villiers, the Chief Justice of the Union, has been appointed a member of the Privy Council is interesting, because this is the first appointment of this sort to be made during the last six years—in fact, since the present Government came into office. Perhaps, however, this appointment of the Chief Justice indicates that a change in this policy is imminent.

"Death has reduced the number of South African Privy Councillors, but those entitled to the prefix "Right Honorable" includes Sir James Rose-Innes (former Prime Minister of South Africa), Henry Burton, (Attorney General of the Cape of Good Hope) and F. S. Malan (member of the Senate of South Africa.)"

Notre Dame Alumnae Association

In view of the Celebration in June 1932 of the 75th Anniversary of the foundation of Notre Dame Academy, Charlottetown, by the Sisters of the Congregation de Notre Dame, the occasion seems appropriate to form an Alumnae Association—thus uniting three generations of former pupils in a home-coming feast at their Alma Mater.

To make this re-union possible, and to facilitate the work of the Organizing Committee as well as to prevent delay, all former pupils of Notre Dame Academy dispersed throughout Canada and the United States are kindly requested to send in name and address before February 15, 1931.

The Book Of Common Prayer AGRICOLA

BY AGRICOLA

These brief papers make no pretense of giving an account of what is known as the Reformation; for that, the reader is advised to turn to the lively pages of Green ("A Short History of the English People"). Attention must, however, be called to two dominant characteristics of the English race, if we would understand the events of the time and the evolution of the Prayer Book. The first is that the English had always opposed an intractable disposition to any foreign influence in their domestic affairs, whether political, religious, or social. William I, Conqueror though he was, felt obliged to promise, on his coronation, to rule like an Englishman, and even tried, but vainly, to learn the language that he might personally administer justice to his unruly subjects. That Rome should interfere in the matter of religious discipline was a sore point with both kings and subjects for centuries. The other characteristic was an intense conservatism which many times saved the nation from grave errors, and sometimes stood in the way of its advancement. Hence at the period we are considering it was bluntly said by an old writer that "Englishmen loved the Mass but hated the Pope." Nevertheless their experience under Henry VIII, who in the words of Freeman had given them "Popery without the Pope," was not a happy one. For personal rather than religious reasons he had assumed the supremacy of the Church, yet allowed no change in its doctrines. The Catholic who denied his supremacy, was adjudged traitor, while the Reformer who protested against the doctrines was pronounced heretic; and some of Henry's greatest and wisest subjects were sent to the scaffold on one or other of these counts. As has been said, there had grown up a feeling that some reform was necessary and it must have been a majority that rendered it possible to promulgate the First Prayer Book of Edward VI, but there was also a strong minority who refused it, and risings took place which were "stamped out in blood." The Second Prayer Book was too great an advance for such a short interval, and the reaction which set in on the accession of Mary swept the country. The Prayer Book was set aside and the missal restored. Those priests—some 1,800—who had availed themselves of the permission to marry in the last reign, were driven from their benefices. Parliament annulled all the laws of Edward's reign, which related to religion. But in the short space of five years Mary had committed England to that break with Rome which has lasted till the present day. Her marriage with Philip, a Spaniard, was not popular, and the persecutions which were supposed to have been instigated by him she did nothing to stop. "Men learned to connect both Mass and Pope with a political alliance which they hated and with a persecution different; and in kind and degree from anything England had before seen." (Freeman). So utterly weary of bloodshed and disorder had the nation become that the accession of Elizabeth was hailed with a burst of enthusiastic joy. In 1559, the year after her accession, Elizabeth issued a revised Prayer Book; it had few alterations as compared with the Second Prayer Book, but such as they were, they inclined to a greater ceremonial and in a more Catholic direction. Out of 9,000 clergy only 189 refused to conform. To show the chaotic state to which the religious spirit of the nation had been reduced by these rapid changes, "sometimes Mass was celebrated at the parsonage for the more rigid Catholics, and the new Communion in church for the more rigid Protestants; sometimes both parties knelt together at the same altar rails, the one to receive host's consecrated by the priest at home after the old usage, the other wafers consecrated in the Church after the new." (Green).

No further changes were made in the service until after the Hampton Court Conference (1603). Then was added the prayer for the Royal Family and the last part of the Catechism.

In 1649, the Prayer Book was again proscribed under heavy penalties, and a "Directory of Public Worship" issued by the Commonwealth in its stead.

In 1660 the Royal Line was restored in the person of Charles II, amid general rejoicing. Sharpe, a shrewd Scottish observer, wrote at this time, "the generality of the people are doting after Prelacy and the Service-book." A further revision of that book took place after the Savoy Conference (1661) and left it practically in the shape in which it now stands. The Absolution was to be pronounced by the Priest, not the Minister. Five concluding prayers were added to the Evening Service (it ended at the

Joseph D. Russo is adviser on beauty to Boston's smartest women. He says: "Your skin must be kept clean and free from irritation. You should use Palmolive Soap twice a day to safeguard complexion beauty."

"SOAP and water cleanliness is a basic part of all our home beauty treatment. But not any soap will do. We specify Palmolive." So says Mr. Russo—and Canadian beauty experts unanimously endorse his views.

Why vegetable oils are best
Vegetable oil soap lather is more soothing... it penetrates into the tiniest pores and removes all dirt without hurting sensitive skin. Palmolive Soap lather cleanses without irritation. It leaves the skin soft and smooth.

Dangers to Skin Beauty
Unless the skin is thoroughly cleansed twice a day, dirt gathers in the pores of your face and they develop into unsightly blackheads and pimples. These blemishes show neglect on your part. Use the right soap and the right cleansing method, and you are taking the best steps toward complexion beauty.

Palmolive is a pure vegetable oil soap... the

At the present day there is, in the Church, a strong party intent on securing a further revision, but the body of the nation opposes this. However the matter arranges itself, it is a consoling thought that the nation, in these materialistic days, still takes a vital interest in religious affairs.

Honey Raising is Citizens Pet Hobby

TORONTO, Ont., Jan. 21.—(By The Canadian Press)—Last summer John I. McArthur, of the Don Valley won second prize with his honey at the National Dairy Show in London England. "That's pretty good for our city bees I think," he said when interviewed. "We were competing with honey from all over the Empire. Ontario honey took both prizes this year. T. J. Francis of Cannington took first prize and our honey second. Not bad for two Ontario men eh?"

Mr. McArthur raises queens. That he thinks, is about the most interesting thing any one could do. "You study the colonies," he said, "and when you find one that is strong and peaceable and always keeps its honey tidy and fills every cell of its whitecomb and caps it smooth and shiny, then you know it has a good queen, and you say, 'That's a queen to breed queens from.'"

"I have queens I wouldn't sell to anybody. It means a lot of time and thought getting everything you want in a queen—beauty and strength and disposition, and tidiness, and industry." John I. McArthur raised three thousand queens last year. Some he sold and some he gave away. We've always a queen or two extra for any one that really wants to study bees," he said, "and always a jar of honey for anybody that really needs it. We don't feel my wife and I, that it's ours altogether. The bees made it, you see."

"If you ever think of keeping bees remember what I'm going to tell you," Mr. McArthur said. "The success of keeping depends on two things: The one is a good queen with in the hive, and the other is a good natural color of palm and olive oils. Its delicate, natural odor makes the addition of heavy perfumes unnecessary.

With both hands make a smooth lather of Palmolive Soap and warm water. Massage gently into the skin, both face and throat, for about two minutes. Then rinse it off with warm water until you can actually feel the accumulation being swept away. Now, give a final rinse with cold, even icy, water. This is refreshing and closes the pores, preventing dirt and grease from getting underneath the surface of the skin.

TO BURNS

A poets music, soft and clear
I hear among the fields of Ayr
A song divine
Its swelling notes are wafted far
And time their beauty cannot mar
They are sublime!

Taking his way among those fields,
His tuneful heart to music yields
Forth flows a tone;
The mavis in the forest near,
With jealous heart that song doth hear
So like his own

Like Midas turning gold to gold,
Thus nature, did to Burns unfold
Her beauty fair;
He gave the lowly daisy fame
'Sweet Afton' an immortal name—
This 'Bard of Ayr.'

Who knows what priceless gems of thought
This budding genius might have wrought
In riper years?
But wealth—the poor man's trust
friend,
Brought youth and promise to an end
His joys and tears.

But still, his spirit haunts those scenes,
Those Scottish hills and bonny streams
He loved so well.
Beside the winding banks of Clyde
His phantom spirit still may hide.
Who, who can tell?
Perchance, tonight, from some far plain,
He hears a world proclaim his fame
From east to west;
Tho' poorly honored while on earth
A poet, peer of humble birth
Now richly blest'd.

Immortal Bard! Thy message bears
A richer fruit with passing years—
Undying fame!
The greatest boon to mortal being
The fairest gift bestowed from Heaven
An honored name.
