TOURIST TRAVEL

An Interesting Article on a Timely Topic.

POINTERS FOR CITIZENS

On the Benefits to be Derived by Encouragement of the Traffic.

The population of large cities yearly show a growing disposition to get away for rest and recuperation while the summer sun shines hot upon the scenes of their daily toil. This is in the first instance a good thing for the urbanite. It means that he is getting to have a better appreciation of the fact that life should not be all labor and sorrow, but that there should be some pleasure in it. It also means that he is, consciously or unconsciously, doing himself and his business a distinct service in getting a little of the fresh air and bright sunshine of heaven into his being. This growth in the movement countryward in summer is one whose economic bearing is important, and it has a moral bearing as well as that we are apt to overlook.

The moral aspect of the case is this. It will be observed by the reader who interprets historic movements as he reads, that absorption in pleasure is marked by a decadence in public spirit. The summer movement is unquestionably one that involves a great deal of abandonment to pleasure, both on the part of the summer visitor to the country and on the part of the country folks themselves, whose desire in this respect are awakened by the example of their city brethren. It is too much to say that there is any real significance in this; for in all likelihood the moral balance is steadier rather than shaken because of the curative influence of a few weeks in the country upon the urban visitor, and because of the broad view of things imparted to the dweller in the country by his contact with people who have been accustomed to a wider sphere of existence.

The economic aspect of the case is certainly so obviously to the credit of the tourist business that it hardly needs more discussion than we have already given it in these columns. But it is probable that there are still some people in the provinces who have not yet awakened to the value of the summer tourist, and until we know that everything has so awakened we shall esteem it our duty on the proper occasions to speak as strongly as we know how upon this subject.

It is possible that one effect of the presence of summer visitors in a community is to raise the cost of living to the denizens thereof, without at the same time raising the standard of it. We are not fully enough informed on the subject to affirm whether this is so or not in all cases. It would be a matter for regret were it so. But so far as we have observed the summer resorts of our own provinces, this characteristic does not seem to have entered with the advent of the summer visitor. On the other hand there are communities, particularly in countries where the tourists business has been highly developed, which owe a new life of prosperity and attractiveness entirely to a transient and money-spending population that flocks here in summer. Summer residents contribute largely to the higher life of a community. Their influence upon local architecture and gardening is along the line of improvement. They help materially in the improvement of roads. They frequently carry intellectual life where little of it has been known. These and many other benefits apart from the circulation of much spare money are things that make the tourists traffic worth while.

The tourist traffic is likely to do the most good to communities that are not highly favored except with scenery and other features that contribute to the pleasure of life in summer. This can be rapidly seen. In the maritime provinces there must be numberless such places—places where the opportunities for carrying on productive industries are not great, but where sequestration from the hum of the world may be assured, where a propitious sky encanopies a combination of scenery and pleasure possibilities. The penetration of the tourist to such parts would be marked in the first instance by a happy provision of new means of making money to the people dwelling therein, then to the social and intellectual improvement of those same people, finally it might lead to the discovery of some yet unsuspected industrial possibility. In this connection it is worth remembering that at the attention of America's was first steadily directed to Nova Scotia by a tourist who wrote Badbeck and that sort of thing since whose time other Americans have found this not only a pleasant land to summer in, but a place of untold wealth in whose development they are even now sharing. STUART'S CATARRH TABLETS

HAVE SUPERSEDED OINTMENTS, INHALERS, WASHES, SPRAYS, SNUFFS, SALVES.

Surprising Results.

A Simple Internal Remedy Makes Remarkable Cures of Catarrh.

People who have used sprays, inhalers, salves and washes for catarrh and have found how useless and inconvenient they are, will be agreeably surprised at results following the use of a pleasant internal remedy in tablet form; druggists everywhere admit that Stuart's Catarrh Tablets which they sell at 50 cents for full-sized treatment is the safest most effective and popular of all catarrh remedies.

Nearly all cheap cough mixtures and throat lozengers contain opiates; these cheap medicines give a temporary relief, especially with little children by destroying nerve sensation; the irritation in throat, which causes coughing is temporarily removed, not by removing the cause but by deadening the nerves of feeling, the irritation is not felt although it is still there and will promptly return.

Stuart's Catarrh Tablets is the best remedy to remove catarrhal secretion, whether in the nose, throat or stomach because they are composed of wholesome antiseptics like Eucalyptol, Guaiacol, Sanguinaria and Hydrastin; when you use these tablets you know what you are putting into your system and not taking chances with cocaine, opiates or similar poisons found in so many catarrh cures and cough medicines.

Dr. Ramsdell in commenting on catarrh cures says: "I can heartily recommend Stuart's catarrh Tablets, because they contain no cocaine nor other dangerous drug found in so many advertised catarrh cures. I have known of many cases of long standing catarrh of the head and throat completely cured by the daily use of these tablets for several weeks. One case in particular, which I could not reach with an inhaler or spray and where the catarrh caused daily head aches and a noticeable loss of hearing was entirely cured by this harmless but effective remedy."

Dr. Wainwright says: "I never hesitate to prescribe Stuart's Catarrh Tablets for catarrhal headaches and catarrhal deafness because I know them to be perfectly safe for child or adult and have seen many remarkable cures resulting from their regular daily use; because they are advertised and gold in drug stores is no reason why any good physician should not use them because we should seize upon the means of cure wherever found."

Stuart's Catarrh Tablets are especially valuable for catarrhal colds in children because they are pleasant to the taste and may be used freely to break up severe colds and croup at the very beginning.

All druggists sell the remedy at 50 cents for full sized package.
