A representative of the Guardian had the pleasure of inspecting the Penmanship at the Union Commercial College, recently. Each student's work is filed each day in order of merit in the class-room, on especially prepared holders attached to the walls. At regular intervals the work is marked and returned to the students who in turn file it in their special folders. In this manner parents as well as students can see the progress made from week to week. The improvement in a short time is, in most cases, extraordinary. The work is certainly creditable to both students and teacher and judging by the improvement already made there will be some extra fine penmen graduates from the U. C. C. this year.
