The editorial matter deals with summer as a good time of contemplation for the prospective home builder and is followed by an excellent example of concrete architecture, poster pictures in decoration, problems in concrete, the selection and purchase of a lot, notes on gardening, designs for the home-builder, decoration and furnishing, answers to questions and interior decoration, household economics, table chat, cement, painting and finishing, answers to construction, heating and plumbing, splinters and shavings, glimpses of books. Altogether the magazine is one which will be greatly valued in any home.

The annual meeting of Marie School No 14 was called to order by James H. Dingwell, chairman. Mr Dingwell being retiring trustee, Oswald Dingwell was appointed trustee for the next term. The sum of $25 was voted for supplement and $45 for school purposes. After the financial business was completed the secretary read the resignation of the teacher Miss Olive Webster who has had charge of the school for the last three years and under whose teaching the pupils have made great progress, as shown in examination, from time to time, in all branches of school education and also in music, both vocal and instrumental, as the school was presented with an organ from the Morning Star Lodge of the order of Good Templars. The following resolution was carried unanimously and forwarded to Miss Webster. We, the rate payers of Marie having heard with regret of your intention to sever your connection with us as teacher of Marie school desire to express our entire satisfaction with you as teacher of our school and while we regret parting with you where ever you will go you carry the kindest wishes of the people and pupils of Marie School.

Information was laid before Hugh McLure of Bradabane, a justice of the peace for Queen's County, by Kenneth Gillis against the teacher of Shamrock School for too free a use of the "birch" on his little daughter for a slight offence. There were four justices sitting on the case and after hearing the evidence on both sides all agreed that the punishment was too severe for the offence. Two were in favor of a fine and two in favor of acquittal on the ground that a fine might establish a bad precedent. After long deliberation the case was disposed of by dividing the costs. A similar case was tried in the same place a few weeks ago against the teacher of Stanchel School for the same offence and resulted the same as above. It should be a warning to the profession to use a little caution when called upon to inflict punishment upon children under their care.

EQUAL TO PARISIAN MODELS IN STYLE AND SHAPELINESS BUT FAR MORE DURABLE AND MUCH LESS COSTLY

To-day begins a special sale of fresh new corsets

This is not an offer of a job lot—or a shopworn line. It is just another instance of modern, wide-awake merchandising. If economy interests you look into these.
