

After Pneumonia Couldn't Get Strong

After many severe illnesses the patient is often left in an extremely weak and exhausted condition.

To all those convalescents needing a tonic to strengthen and build up their weakened system we would recommend Milburn's Health and Nerve Pills to assist them to recover the full enjoyment of robust health.

After I had taken two boxes I felt as well as ever, so I will recommend them to any one who is suffering as I did, for I could not have taken any medicine that would have done me so much good."

Signs Of Business Improvement Seen

WASHINGTON, Jan. 13—(AP)—There are signs of a possible "turn for the better," both for industry and agriculture, the United States Bureau of Agricultural Economics said today in its monthly analysis of economic conditions.

- 1. Evidence of renewed interest by prospective buyers of some industrial goods.
2. A slight improvement in the demand for wheat and cotton.
3. A slower and less severe decline in consumer purchasing power, and in the demand for farm products, than in industrial activity.

ALBERRY PLAINS WOMEN'S INSTITUTE

The January meeting of the Alberly Plains Women's Institute was held at the home of Mrs. Shaw MacMillan with 19 members and 4 visitors present.

A reading was given by Helen MacDonald and a recitation by Mrs. G.D. Praught. A contest put on by Mrs. Norman MacMillan was won by Mrs. Tweedy.

The December meeting was at the home of Mrs. Malcolm MacLean and the weekly cake was drawn by Rena MacLean in favor of Louise Brehaut.

STRAIN ON YOUR EYES

Eyes used for close work—particularly if lighting is not correct—are subject to a greater than normal strain. This brings the patient discomfort if there is present any appreciable refractive error and shows itself in headaches, sore eyes, etc.

FREEDOM FOR TWO

By MARGARET WATSON

CHAPTER II MYSTERIOUS OLAF ELSON

There were great exclamations over the state in which she came home, and many questions asked. I always knew said Mrs. Manning that something dreadful would happen sooner or later with that terrible car. I'm glad it's gone.

It wasn't very dreadful, really, said Erica, smiling, and now I haven't even a car to drive to the station. But she could not feel properly sorry for the loss of the two-seater; it seemed, for some reason, so unimportant. She sat beside the fire while her hair dried slowly into the light cloud round her head, and answered her parents' questions in good-humoured detail.

Yes, he was a complete stranger. She felt that her mother, behind the lovely, gentle middle-aged face so like her own young and eager one, was thinking it, in true Brandford style, rather modern and distasteful to try and run down a perfect stranger. He was a person who hasn't I should say, ever spent much time in a place like this. Even if he was born here I can't imagine it holding him for long.

Across her head they exchanged glances of regret for this eternal restlessness in her which could not find its outlet, and yet could not bear to be confined.

She looked at her reflection in the mirror above the fire, and exclaimed in dissatisfaction at her own beauty.

I'm not a wave to-morrow. I must look my best for the concert. What had put that into her head again? She had told Michael she would not go. The unknown had said, or pretended, that he would not go; and yet he had put away the ticket with such significant care that she had hopes he would change his mind. At any rate, he was going to ring her up in the morning.

At it happened, she was still in bed when the call came; but she heard the ring, and was halfway down the stairs in pyjamas and dressing-gown before the maid looked up from the instrument and said with a surprised smile: For you Miss Erica.

Erica took the telephone, her tumbled hair showering over it. Hello! Erica Manning here!

The remembered voice, low-pitched, deliberate and swift almost to violence, said: I really needn't ask. You sound excellently well.

I am, thanks. What about you? No ill results, I hope? By the way I never did tell you how guilty I feel about it all.

Please don't! I quite forgot to tell you what I, perhaps the most important thing about me — my name's Martin Hirst. I gave it, you see, when I reported the accident.

Oh, but I'm letting you do everything, said Erica. In a startled gasp. It's quite forgotten. It was necessary to report the crash. Why didn't you remind me? It isn't good for anyone to be looked after so well, especially when they're the cause of all the trouble.

Oh, I don't think you'll be spoiled, he said, with such a slow, rich tone that she could almost see the deep smile flooding his face. Apart from losing the car, things didn't turn out so badly after all. He added, mischievously, I'm glad you haven't caught a chill. It would have kept you away from the concert. You're going of course? You'll probably see me there, though I may be late.

She felt the beat of her heart quicken. There was no time to be deceptive about her own decision. Yes, I'm going. You're not acting on my advice, then?

Oh, I really think I'd like to hear this Olaf Elson, he said, still laughing, she supposed at the memory of their last night's conversation. Well I'm glad you're not to be deprived of the same pleasure. Good-bye!

She thought, putting down the receiver: It isn't good-bye, it's only an au revoir! And she was glad.

It was a crazy kind of day. She sang better than she had ever sung, and with her mind only half upon what she was singing. Dr. Manning said, swinging round from his piano as she closed what should have been the most common place of scales with a trill like a prima donna:

What has happened to you today Erica? I don't know. It's just that I feel like that. She laughed at his always laughable, sometimes inspired round face.

The end of her lesson left him still puzzled about the latest development in his most puzzling pupil.

the vestibule of the Town Hall, while she stood looking round her vainly for a glimpse of Martin Hirst, Michael came pushing an eager way towards her through the throng of Brandford's leaders of fashion.

Erica! So you changed your mind after all — I mean about coming.

Yes, I changed my mind. She had suddenly remembered the existence of Michael. Her neglect of him made her feel mean. She thought rebelliously: I should hate a husband who was always making me feel mean.

You look great! Mind if I tell you so? Shall we sit together? You remember I said I had something to tell you.

Afterwards, please Michael. I — I don't want to spoil the music by talking of anything serious now.

By all the laws of logic that was a very poor subterfuge; but Michael was the simplest of men.

They sat together. It was terribly hot in the Town Hall. Every cloak in the room, many of them fondly retained in case of cold draughts, was soon dispatched back to the cloakroom; and before one item was over the members of the orchestra, in ceremonial array for the last of their four annual occasions, were visibly suffering.

She looked round carefully for Martin Hirst. He had said he might be late, but this was being very late. Supposing he did not come at all? She was astonished at the reluctance she felt to believe in that possibility.

She could see nothing of him, however, though her chin was still on her shoulder when a salvo of applause made it clear that Olaf Elson had appeared upon the platform. She listened rather listlessly to Michael's voice saying with enthusiasm:

I wonder if this man really is a Scandinavian? Grand-looking sort of person, anyhow.

She looked up and saw Olaf Elson just seating himself at the piano, spreading his broad shoulders, flexing his long fingers once or twice, and raising thoughtfully to the flood of light which poured over him the dark, whimsical, finely-modelled face of Martin Hirst.

Hundreds Pay Respect To Rev. H. J. McKenna

The following account of the jubilee of Rev. H. J. McKenna of St. Joseph's church of Owatonna, Minnesota, is taken from the Daily People's Press of January 4, 1938.

Father McKenna is a native of Baldwin's Road and the parish of St. Teresa's, and has many relatives and friends on the Island. He graduated with honors from the University of St. Dunstan's in June 1907. He took his studies in philosophy in Montreal and pursued the study of Sacred Theology in St. Paul Seminary, St. Paul, Minnesota. He is a brother of Mrs. James G. Gill of Elliotville and of Mr. Peter McKenna, and Mrs. Joseph Trainor of St. Teresa's with whom he visited in the summer of 1938.

The silver jubilee of his ordination into the priesthood Monday resulted in cordial felicitations for Rev. H. J. McKenna, pastor of St. Joseph's church, extended him by hundreds of parishioners and friends in Owatonna as well as scores of clergymen, relatives and friends throughout the Northwest.

With approximately 40 priests, a score of Sisters and thirty or more relatives in the crowded church for opening of the observance, a solemn High Mass was read yesterday morning at 10:30 o'clock with the Rt. Rev. Francis M. Kelly, bishop of the Winona diocese, in the pulpit to give a congratulatory sermon.

Bishop Kelly spoke briefly also at a noon dinner, held in the Chapel Hall for members of the clergy, Sisters and relatives of Father McKenna. Approximately 100 attended the dinner, served by ladies of the Altar Society, with other short talks given by numerous visiting pastors.

The day's largest attendance gathered in the evening for a public reception at which John Regan of Mankato, a friend for many years of Father McKenna, spoke. Others taking part in the evening program were Senator M. R. Cashman, who represented the parish in an address; John Ciesinski, who presented Father McKenna with a purse and the pastor, who responded. The evening's program included also a solo by Miss Winifred Hogan, with Mrs. C. V. Campion as accompanist; musical selections by members of the Gorman family; selections by St. Joseph's choir and instrumental selections by the Grass family.

Numerous letters and telegrams were received from all sections of the Northwest, messages congratulating Rev. McKenna who was ordained by the late Bishop P. R. Heffron at the Pro-Cathedral in Winona January 3, 1913 and whose first assignment was at St. John's church in Rochester. When St. Mary's college opened at Winona in September of the same year he was recalled and appointed to the teaching staff, in which capacity he served until 1933 when he came to Owatonna to succeed the late Father P. J. Kearnan.

Featuring his services here for the past 14 years have been his supervision of plans for erection of the present church edifice, one of the most complete and most beautiful in the Northwest; his part in stimulating ecclesiastical activities for members of the growing congregation, and his interests and activities in civic and community projects.

Music in connection with the noon dinner was provided by an orchestra directed by Dr. A. L. Blisk and composed of Miss Margaret Christianson, Miss Dorothy Christenson, Miss Esther Sanneman, Miss Ellen Blakeway, Mrs. C. V. Campion, Alvin Thon, Stanley Muckie, James Winters, Stanley Johnson and James Thon.

Guests of honor, in addition to Bishop Kelly, included Mother Aquina of Rochester; five cousins of Father McKenna, Sister Pauline of Rochester, Sister Mary Robert, Sister Josephina, Sister Vincent de Paul and Sister Joan, all of St. Paul.

Monitors attending included the Rt. Rev. J. P. McKenna, of Kansas City, Rt. Rev. J. H. Peschges of Austin and Rt. Rev. J. J. Treanor of Waseca.

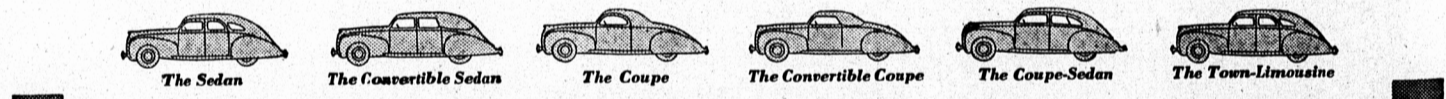

Among other pastors attending, the list being incomplete, were Rev. J. P. Foley of Faribault, Rev. James Donahue of Minneapolis, Rev. J. B. Gregoire of St. James, Rev. A. R. Krebsbach of Sherburne, Rev. J. McShane of Easton, Rev. F. M. Schimek of Johnsonburg, Rev. William Schimek of Albert Lea and Rev. L. M. Derlin of Mapleton.

Also Rev. Earl Byron and Rev. A. Scheid of Mankato, Rev. F. A. McMahon of Madison Lake, Rev. R. Snyder of Waseca and Owatonna, Rev. James Donovan of Blooming Prairie, Rev. A. Frisch of Claremont, Rev. H. Speck and Rev. William Ryan, all of Rochester.

Also Rev. M. Doyle of Preston, Rev. B. Kramer of Altura, Rev. R. Borden and Rev. George Smith of Caledonia and Rev. Stephen Majorus of Newry and Somerset. Approximately 25 other relatives of Father McKenna completed the guest list.

ANNOUNCING THE 1938 LINCOLN-ZEPHYR V-12. The modern "twelve" at medium price. Includes a large illustration of the car and descriptive text.

IN THE ANNUAL, fashionable parade of model after model, improvements, changes, refinements are to be observed on every hand. But how seldom the whole car departs from traditional ways. The LINCOLN-ZEPHYR V-12 during 1936 and 1937 did — and still does. The new LINCOLN-ZEPHYR for 1938 does even more. Truly it can be said: It breaks with tradition again!
