VELVET IN EVIDENCE IN THE FALL STYLES

Velvet, velvet, velvet! It enters into a vast majority of the afternoon frocks brought over so far, and there are quantities of handsome velvet two-piece and three-piece costumes, Pannet, chiffon, striped, checked, all sorts of velvets, are in evidence and all sorts of other materials from chiffon to cloth, are striped or checked or figured in velvet. The idea of making at least the upper part of the bodice of a velvet frock in some lighter weight material counts too much for comfort to be lightly discarded, and it is the exceptional velvet frock that does not make use of it, even at the risk of losing novelty. A brown velvet and chiffon shows a collar border of fur cloth, and the collars of white satin—a collar idea one finds often repeated. There is a fur bib of velvet running up upon a chiffon bodice that is laid over embroidered tulle, and the full skirt is of chiffon with a very deep band of velvet on the bottom and a narrower one above. A block check in black and some deep color almost as dark as black or in two very dark colors, or in a dark and lighter tone of one color is much liked in velvet and is the material for some handsome suits of Russian allure

HAPPENINGS OF THE WEEK

St. Andrew's night was right royally celebrated this year when on Tuesday evening the Caledonia Club entertained at a well arranged musical program and dance followed by dainty refreshments in the P. W. C. Hall. A feature of the occasion was the attendance of many members of the Highland Brigade now in training accompanied by several pipers. Some thought that this year St. Andrew's should be quietly celebrated on account of the war while others united in making it one grand patriotic effort thinking with the poet that

In times like these of stress and war, And fearful wrenching of the heart, When every Briton, near and far, Must play the man, and do his part, We will not let St. Andrew's Day Go by without our usual cheer. But show our enemies the truth: Our hearts are sore we have no fear. Then, cheer Britannia, three times three! Brave Belgium! France! and every friend! Are we downhearted? No! Not we: Our cause shall triumph in the end.

The effort was a successful one and the committee are now busily shopping for the Christmas season, just as happily as if the sun shone brightly every day.

Harry Lauder has come and gone leaving St. John with several thousand good laughs to the good. It was not all laugh however with Harry Lauder, for while the opportunity offered to reach thousands of hearers he made a Recruiting Speech such as was never before heard in New Brunswick and finished with the following words. "Think of the after years. When you're old and gray with may, had a wee baton on your knee—your grandchild. "How old are you granddad?" she asks. "How old?" you reply. "Why I was about nineteen or twenty when the great European war was fought," you say. "Then will come the child's question: "What did you do, grand-dad, then?" "Oh, the shame of any Britisher if he can not have the heritage of a part in the fight that made men free. "We will never forget this war," he went on, "the men with empty sleeves will be remembered enough and I tell you we cannot do too much for these boys who are fighting for us." Mrs. Lauder and other members of their party were quite widely entertained by the ladies of St. John during their all too short sojourn.

Mrs. George Miller of Alberton and her sister Miss Katherine James of Charlottetown were welcome visitors to Halifax this week.

Major Goodwill was the guest of honor at several small functions this week when presentations from admiring friends were made him prior to his leaving for St. John en route to England where he takes up his military duties.

Mrs. (Major) Goodwill will be the guest of Mrs. John Goodwill at Brighton for the winter months.

Mr. and Mrs. Tidmarsh were in Halifax this week with their son Lieut. Clarence Tidmarsh who is taking the officers training course preparatory to departure overseas with the Grenadier Guards of Montreal. He will be attached to General Meighen's Staff.

Charlottetown has been quite gay this week with an opera every night in the Prince Edward Theatre. The Young Adams Company are putting on a very pleasing repertoire and nightly jolly little parties may be seen wending their way there, happily unconscious of rain and dirty walking. The vaudeville is an especial drawing card.

Mr. Howard Hilson and bride are being welcomed home from their extended wedding trip. They are occupying Mr. J. O. Hyndman's prettily appointed home on Longworth Avenue.

Mrs. H. T. Holman and Miss Dorothy Brennan of Summerside were very welcome guests of Mrs. George McSweeney of Moncton this week.

Lieut. J. A. S. Bayer is being heartily welcomed home this week on a short furlough from Halifax.

Christmas in the trenches and in Merry England will certainly start early for the boys from this Province if the mails do not miscarry for the one thought of home friends for weeks past has been to get "a box" off for the boys in time for that day of days. The prisoners in Germany and those who may be overlooked or are without home ties are receiving a share of the Christmas cheer from The Garden Province, and many a stranger will have kindly thoughts for unknown friends to help him bear his hardships for King and Country.

Congratulations are being extended to Dr. and Mrs. Smallwood of Georgetown who have just returned from a honeymoon trip to Halifax. As the daughter of the late Lieut. Governor McIntyre, Mrs. Smallwood made many friends while in residence at Government House, here.

It is quite the fashion now to take ones knitting everywhere and at the recent patriotic meeting quite a few ladies were noticed knitting briskly as they listened to and thoroughly enjoyed the speeches and program.

Knitting parties are the popular entertainment just at present with an occasional game of Bridge to break the monotony.

THE LINEN SMOCK

Linen smocks, to be slipped on in the form of light wraps over light frocks, or worn as a blouse, above a golf or tennis shirt, promises to retain their hold on feminine fancy through the early days of autumn. These smocks have been mostly a blue or tan linen for wear with white skirts, but now they are coming out in deep yellow and orange, blue, and white or black-and-white sport hats of blended straw and felt, they are very good looking affairs. In line with the smocks—which are quaint in suggestion—are the chintz sport coats. These are of chintz patterns in a lovely, warm-toned effects, usually deep rose, green and black, amber, brown and green, or some such combination for early September days, and collar and cuffs of dark velvet give an effective, though inconsistent, finish. By September 15, however, the chintz sport coat and the linen smock will probably have seen their final hour of favor and will be replaced by tailored sport garments of worsted weave.
