WINS VALUABLE GERMAN SCHOLARSHIP

The following reference to Rev. A. S. Murray will be of wide interest to Guardian readers as Mr. Murray's father was minister at O'Leary for some years and the family received the education in Prince of Wales college.

A Nova Scotian family already noted for the attainments of its members received added honor last night with the announcement from the German Consul General in Canada that Rev. A. S. Murray of Rawdon, Nova Scotia, had been awarded one of the scholarships of the Alexander von Humboldt Foundation of Berlin, Germany, for a year's postgraduate study in theology at Berlin University.

Rev. Mr. Murray, a native of Pictou Landing and son of Rev. Robert Murray, Middle Sackville, Halifax county, has two brothers and two sisters who are medical doctors. Another brother, R. C. Murray, 28 Carleton Street, Halifax, was the first bachelor of science in fisheries in the Maritimes.

Dr. Florence Murray, missionary in Korea, is a sister. She was due to leave Damascus Friday on her way home. Another sister, also a doctor, is Mrs. Anna Dike, Toronto, and Dr. Foster N. Murray, North Battleford, Sask., and Dr. A. E. Murray, Quinpool Road, Halifax, are brothers.

The scholarship was offered for competition by Canadians who were college graduates and who spoke German. The course begins November 1 and ends July 31 next year and the winner was determined from among many applications only after searching examination.

Rev. Mr. Murray attended school at Earlington, Colchester county and later in Charlottetown, where he graduated from Prince of Wales College in 1910. He was a member of the 8th Siege Battery and returned from France a member of the Royal Air Force, although his course had not been completed when the armistice was declared.

Rev. Mr. Murray went to Rawdon a few days ago but will resign to go to Berlin in the fall. Before leaving he will take classes in German to refresh his knowledge of that language.

The Romance Of Old Quilts

"Once upon a time" all little girls were taught to "sew a fine seam," and, as they grew older, their training in the art of needle work and patchwork was considered of great importance. Specimens of their handiwork which still exist are highly prized as samples of feminine industry, patience, artistic ability, and even romance of an era long ago.

Today no heirlooms are cherished more tenderly than the quaint quilts pieced together into odd and beautiful designs—quilts made generations ago, and some date as far back as colonial days.

The story of the heirloom quilt is really a tale of historical interest, since many of the old quilt designs have a background of American history, and the romance of the early colonial times appears to have been woven and seamed into every thread and patch.

Quilt piecing as an art, largely of American origin, although quilts were in use long before the colonial days as protection for the body coats of armor. The quilting was a part of the armorer's trade rather than the housekeeper's craft and skill.

Coverings used on beds in those days were called "counterpanes." This word, a derivative of "counterpoint," meaning the laying out of a pattern, point against point, was also used in connection with patterns in laying out the points or panes in stained glass windows.

The "laid stitches" in the counterpanes were fashioned after the beautiful designs of windows. Prior to the days of counterpanes, beds were covered with animal skins. It is said that the ancient Germans made a bed of several layers of skins using as many layers of covering as were needed for protection against the varying temperatures. Sometimes the bottom of the bed consisted of a pile of leaves. Sometimes the floor was the bottom of the bed. During the Middle Ages benches were used to raise the bed above the floor. On these were placed pads or mattresses filled with wool, hair or feathers. However, the skins were still used for covering. During the thirteenth century, people able to afford such a luxury, covered these pads with sheets of linen or silk for the sake of comfort and cleanliness. Eventually the skins were also covered, and held in place, or fastened by "quilting" with a few knots at intervals. After the process of cotton spinning and weaving became somewhat common, and because cotton material was light, easily washed, cheaper than linen, and possessed better wearing quality than silk, it was used for sheets in Holland, England, and the American colonies.

Among the early settlers in America were numerous housewives who were compelled to practice rigid economy in all matters. Combining their sense of economy with their artistic love of the beautiful, many interesting and charming designs in quilt patterns were achieved. Names were given to identify certain patterns which became favorites as the years were exchanged among the colonial families. As the colonists moved farther into the interior and spread southward and westward, the women took their art of patchwork with them into the wilderness.

The Holland influence in New York probably produced the tulip and basket designs in quilts. Undoubtedly the nine patch designs originated as copies of tiling in Dutch kitchens. In Royal's Virginia the threefold "Prince's Father" pattern may be symbolic of the three feathers of the heathcock, the mystic sign of the royal claims of "Bonnie Prince" Charles. "The King's Highway" also very popular, consisted of a broad pecked stripe running crosswise. The "White Rose" and the "True-Love Knot" had their beginning, it would seem, at the time some of the American colonists were clamoring for liberty, because a shoulder knot was often used for identification by colonial sympathizers.

One of the early designs was called the "Log Cabin." Frequently quilts of this design were called the "Grassy Quilt" and was sometimes used as the basis of the "Friendship quilt," which might include the names of friends who contributed pieces, or dates and events embroidered in gay colors. Later generations have copied these old designs, and have copied the beautiful ones have also been created. Whatever the material or pattern of these modern quilts, probably none are more beautiful to their makers than were those made a long, long, time ago, so thrifflily and so neatly, from pieces or scraps of material carefully hoarded for use when needed. Whether necessity, thrift, artistic ability actuated those housewives of the past, they set a worthy example for succeeding generations. Because of their skill in designing and fashioning quilts, they have long been a source of pride and admiration. That is why the heirloom quilt is just another symbol of true womanhood—effort to give, to protect, to serve.

$75,000 IS RECEIVED ON ACCOUNT UNDER THE WHITE AWARD

Another $75,000 Payment Due This Year

A cheque for $75,000 has been received from Ottawa by the MacMillan Government as payment on account under the award of the White Commission.

This represents ONE-HALF of the amount which the Province will receive this year under the award, which resulted in the placing of $3,000,000 to our credit at Ottawa, through representations made in co-operation with the other Maritime Provinces by the MacMillan Government. The annual subsidy payment for all time, from this capital fund, will be $150,000—the largest subsidy increase since Confederation.

Coupled with the increases received under the Mathieson and Stewart Governments of $100,000 and $125,000 respectively, this represents A CAPITAL AMOUNT OF $3,750,000, OR AN ANNUAL SUBSIDY INCREASE OF $3,750,000, obtained by Conservatives after Laurier, in 1907, had "bolted the door" against further claims settlement.

A MILLION ADDITIONAL REVENUE

But the White Commission award by no means represents all that the MacMillan Government achieved in the matter obtaining Dominion revenue. Here are additional amounts, obtained during their term of office from the Bennett Government:

Table listing various revenue items and their amounts, including Direct relief (City), Direct relief (Provincial), Unemployment Projects, etc.

These amounts are the concrete result of "Tory picnic trips" to Ottawa which Liberal apologists condemn because of the few hundred dollars paid in transportation and hotel accommodation!

In addition, the Government obtained from the Carnegie Foundation over $100,000 for demonstration library purposes for the benefit of every rural community in the Province. Also $88,000 for establishment of a chair of Economics and Sociology at Prince of Wales College.

The late Liberal Government obtained NOTHING in the way of subsidy increase and "on different occasions", according to Ex-Premier Saunders, "DECLINED TO CO-OPERATE" with the Conservative Premiers of Nova Scotia and New Brunswick, and with the Maritime Board of Trade.

They obtained NOTHING in the way of unemployment relief from the Mackenzie King Government.

They obtained NOTHING from the Carnegie Foundation.

"We are not concerned with the past," says Mr. W. M. Lea.

Why should they be? Their past is as barren of achievement as their platform is of hope.
