BEREFT.
Oh could we wish him back again
Again to join our number,
Oh could we wish him back again
Back from his quiet slumber.
He was so beautiful, so young,
So brave, so strong, so steady,
To help the right to check the wrong
With hand and tongue he was ready.
He was the sunshine of our home
He was our precious treasure
He cheered our hearts, he banished
bloom.
He filled our lives with pleasure.
But when our Father called our son
To be with Him in heaven
He meekly said "Thy will be done"
Oh may I be forgiven.
He said, then bade us fond farewell,
We love to tell the story,
"Oh think of me and where I dwell
Rejoicing home in glory."
Oh would we wish him back again
Back to a world of sorrow?
We could not wish him back to pain
We'll go to him tomorrow.

PERFECT THROUGH SUFFERING.
God never would send you the darkness,
If He felt you could bear the light;
But you would not cling to His guiding hand
If the way were always bright.
And you would not care to walk by faith,
Could you always walk by sight.
'Tis true, He has many an anguish
For your sorrowful heart to bear,
And many a cruel thorn-crown
For your tired head to wear;
He knows how few would reach heaven at all
If pain did not guide them there.
So He sends you the blinding darkness,
And the furnace of seven-fold heat;
'Tis the only way believe me,
To keep you close to His feet—
For 'tis always so easy to wander
When our lives are glad and sweet.
Then nestle your hand in your Father's,
And sing, if you can, as you go;
Your song may cheer some one behind you,
Whose courage is sinking low;
And, well, if your lips do quiver—
God will love you better so.

TO HOLD SUCCESS.
Some years ago, in a poor school-house in a back district, a boy at the foot of the class unexpectedly spelled a word which had passed down the entire class.
"Go up to the head," said the master, "and see that you stay there. You can, if you work hard."
The boy hung his head. But the next day he did not miss a word in spelling. The brighter scholars knew every word in the lesson, hoping there might be a chance to get ahead, but there was not a single one; Dave stayed at the head. He had been an indifferent speller before, but now he knew every word.
"Dave, how do you get your lessons so well now?" said the master. "I learn every word in the lesson, and get my mother to hear me at night; then I go over them in the morning before I come to school. And I go over them at my seat before the class is called up."
"Good boy, Dave," said the master. That's the way to have success; always work that way and you'll do it.
Dave is today the manager of a big lumber company, and he attributed his start to the words: "Go up to the head, and see that you stay there; you can if you work hard."—Selected.

THE CURE.
She was not an attractive girl in any way, and she knew it. She was restless, and cross, and unhappy and growing more unattractive in looks and manner as she became older. Then an aunt, visiting at her home after a long residence in a distant city, sized up the situation, and out of pity for both the girl and every body with whom she came in contact undertook to prescribe the sure cure.
"Madeline, do you want to be a torment to yourself and everybody about you all your life?" was the blunt and astounding question she put to her niece one day.
"No, of course not!" was the prompt and half-frightened reply from the astonished girl.
"You'd rather be sweet and lovely and happy?" came the next question, and it brought a more affirmative time. The aunt handed her a folded paper and smiled as she said, very kindly now: "Follow this magic prescription, and you will be what you want to be." And she was gone.
Madeline read: "Every time you want to frown, smile. Every time a cross thought comes, think a pleasant one. Every time something nice is done for you, do something nicer for someone else.
For a few minutes she was crossed than ever. Then common sense saved the day. She tried the cure, honestly, sincerely, prayerfully, and to her lifelong joy, to say nothing of everybody else, there was soon no longer any cross thought, no more lovable girl in the place than she.—Oward.

HE SMOOTHED THEM.
They were as sociable a set of passengers as ever sailed together, and talking and laughing were going on merrily when they sat down to the first dinner aboard. Suddenly there came a terrific uproar from the neighborhood of the forecastle. The sailors had been a trifle merry before starting, and were now engaged in pummeling each other for all they were worth. The first officer rose from the table to go and quell the disturbance, and in a few minutes all was quiet.
"Things seem smoother now, Mr. Bradley," said the captain approvingly, when the mate returned.
"Yes, sir," was the reply. "I've just ironed the crew, sir."

ON THE THIN SIDE.
Not much cider is manufactured for sale in a certain Midland town, nearly all of it being consumed at home. Two farmers were comparing notes.
"How many barrels have you put up this year, Joe?" asked one.
"Only seven, Silas," was the reply.
"Got any handy?"
"Certainly." And Joe went down into the cellar, returning with some of the apple fluid in a big tin dipper.
"There," he said, "try that." And Silas sipped.
"Well, what do you think of it?" inquired Joe.
Silas shook his head dubiously.
"How many barrels did you say you put up, Joe?" he asked.
"Seven."
"Well, Joe, if you'd had another apple you might have made eight."

"SMILE AND 'SPLAIN."

"How in the world do you get your children to act so quickly?" inquired a friend who had just dropped in, as she watched the busy, bustling youngsters of her neighbor as they were setting the table for their mother. "My children just 'dream' over everything. I give them to do; it makes me fairly tear my hair with desperation sometimes."
"Yes, isn't it terrible the way a child can dawdle? Mine used to be fairly maddening. I think I made them numb with my continual 'Hurry!' 'Now hurry up!' 'Oh, don't be so slow!' One morning, the littlest one looked up plaintively from her shoe-buttoning and said:—'Mother, when I get a little girl I am not going to tell her 'Hurry! Hurry! Hurry!' all the time."
"Of course I laughed, and, still laughing, asked: 'When you get two little girls and two little boys, and have to get them all up and dressed in the morning, and put up their school lunches, and get their breakfast ready so they will be in time for school, and then wash the dishes and get to the dressmaker's at ten o'clock, what will you do if those boys and girls just won't help a bit?'"
"To my surprise she began to button as if her life depended on it. 'Why mother,' she answered, 'I would just smile and 'splain.'"
"That gave me an idea. Instead of telling them to hurry until my words were absolutely meaningless I have 'smiled and 'splain'd and given them the feeling of being busy and having lots to do. It works pretty well and we are all much happier. 'Smile and 'splain' would be a good motto' in any home."—Ladies' Home Journal
