By Elsie J. Cambridge

Note of Explanation: In order to facilitate the finding of stones or monuments, they have been listed in "rows", and each has been given a number. All rows run from left to right, as one faces Elm Ave. The stones on the left-hand side of the cemetery are listed first, the first row being the one nearest to Elm Ave. In the case of each stone or memorial there is a note of its type (slab {upright}, flat stone, shaft, sacrophagus, etc.) and its physical condition. All stones that are intact, in no need of repairs or levelling, and with good, clear lettering are marked ‖. Stones with faded lettering but otherwise in good condition are marked ‖, followed by the letters "lf" (lettering faint), "lvf" (lettering very faint), or some other comment as to lettering. Family names only are written in capital letters.
