The Wild Bird

CHAPTER VIII

The lift stopped at the fifth floor. Ginnie walked down the long passage. And she thought, there's no reason—there's no reason—there's no reason—she felt like this. As if she were quite suddenly on a bridge, suspended over an abyss and in the bridge appeared a "spinning wheel". She stood outside the lift. She thought, I do hope Etienne is here. Etienne is here. But her heart said, "If only you were here."

"It's so gentle and so much the reverse of gentle. Etienne, whom one observed quickly and instinctively, knowing that it would be better so."

She lit a cigarette. The gesture seemed to give her a kind of courage. Then she knocked on the door. Selly, Aunt Lou's maid, opened to her, giving a beaming smile, dusting her head.

"Aunt Lou is at home. Indeed, she was seldom out. She was seated, writing letters on the pale mauve paper on which was her own initial in gold. Uncle Dick was there too, seated at his writing table, his thick hands busy writing before the desk, with smoke sitting from between his lips. His large iron-grey hands—some head turned toward the door as she entered. "Etienne, dear. Kiss your old uncle."

"Darling!" asked Aunt Lou. "Yes, lovely. Thank you very much, Aunt Lou."

"Where's Jerry?" asked Aunt Lou.

"Oh, the police—" Uncle Dick's hands were suddenly motionless on his papers. "The police summoned us for speeding on Friday. They're talking in the hall."

Uncle Dick rose from his chair. His eyes were a little protuberant as he said, "Ah? Speeding again?"

"Yes, that's all. Etienne, how since this morning you know so well. It came at the slightest sign—at, for instance, Uncle Dick's low voice, the even—now at dear Jerry's entrance."

Jerry closed the door. Slowly, he walked over to the window and stood with his back to it. His face was still white. He didn't look at his sister. "You don't seem very cheery, dear," said Aunt Lou. "Is anything wrong?"

"Just this," said Jerry. "I took a cigarette from his case with fingers that weren't perfectly steady."

"Just this," said Ginnie, smiling. "You nearly ditched everything. So Ginnie's got to be told."

"What's the danger?" asked Uncle Dick.

"Was there?"

"And you'd all listened to me?" Uncle Dick asked. "Etienne, she'd been told last week."

"She's got to be old now," Jerry repeated sullenly.

"You're right, my boy."

In the second's silence, Ginnie didn't stir. "Etienne, she'd been told last week."

LABOUR EXIT PERMITS ARE STILL NECESSARY

Canada Still Needs Manpower For War Work And Other Essential Jobs

Persons at least sixteen years old wishing to leave Canada to seek or enter employment, even temporarily, STILL need Labour Exit Permits, unless they are in an exempt class.

Labour Exit Permits are issued by Employment Offices. Apply at the nearest Employment Office.

Persons leaving Canada on a bona fide business trip, or on a vacation, or on a social visit or call do not require Labour Exit Permits.

For example, persons going to the United States for a short visit or vacation or business trip do not require Labour Exit Permits.

Persons not requiring Labour Exit Permits include among others members of dramatic or athletic organizations leaving temporarily to perform outside of Canada; ministers of religion and commercial travellers.

Any one in doubt as to Labour Exit Permit requirements should consult the nearest Employment Officer who will issue a Certificate of Exemption where appropriate.

Customs Officers at border points have instructions to insist that each person leaving Canada shall either produce a Labour Exit Permit or prove that such a permit is not necessary.

CANADA STILL NEEDS MANPOWER. THEREFORE LABOUR EXIT PERMITS ARE STILL NECESSARY.

SEVERAL TINS WHILE THEY LAST

Terrible Triplets of Sky to Blast Japs

These three are set for an aerial triple play against the Japs with the shift to the Pacific of air power relocated from Europe. Liberators and B-17 Fortresses, which played an important part in pounding the Nazis to defeat, now are joining the mighty B-29 Superfortresses for the final act in the Far Eastern war. Reports spot their base in the Philippines. These mighty triplets of the sky have approximately the same operating range—1500 miles—and all are four-motored, the chief difference being that the Super can carry a heavier bomb load. Bases close to Japan will enable the Liberators and B-17s to blast interior Nippon with effective range of the three sky giants.
