

FOR ACID STOMACH

The first glass gives comforting relief, and the regular daily draught quickly corrects the evils of intestinal toxicity. Gentle, soothing, non-habit-forming, ENO'S eliminates poisonous, trouble-making waste matter from the inner system. But remember, there is only one ENO.

SMILES

"It's silly to give a prospective bride a shower if she's able to take one herself."

Mr. Slowwit: I-er-er-am going to tell you something that er-er-will no doubt surprise you. I-er-er-think—Miss Knutting: Well, that is a surprise. Funny I never noticed it before. How long have you been thinking?

Tom: What do you think of the view from the hotel veranda?
 Harry: I don't know. I can see four hills. How do they get from where I sit.

Ruth (poetically): Isn't this glorious? Couldn't you just drift thus forever, down Life's long, shadowy stream?
 Jack (pragmatically): Well, yes, I could drift down all right, but it'd be no joke paddling back.

THE WIFE-SHIP WOMAN

Continued

With a side-glance I directed the girl to second invitation. She returned my look rather defiantly, but was warm and gracious in adding: "I also ask it. You will not refuse me, monsieur?"

"God pity a mad-ess which would permit me to refuse you, mademoiselle," he piously exclaimed. "Now we will take the creature from the brandy, or the king of Acaanibas will go with a dry throat. It is incredible, monsieur, the amount of drink that withered old man can hold."

"Of course you do not really believe there is any land called Acaanibas?"

"No Acaanibas? Impossible."

"There is no such land, monsieur. I have been through the region—the Falls of St. Anthony—where he located the fairyland. It was no there. It never was there."

"Mon Dieu!" he muttered, wiping his forehead. "Is there anything true about this country?"

"All you have seen is true. It continues the same to the Great Lakes in the north. Wild waters. Wild woods. Wild men and beasts. No diamonds. No gold or silver as yet found. No giants nor dwarfs. No place where the Indians are anything but Indians. No land of plenty until you clear the ground, plant and reap."

"Ah!" he muttered. "Monsieur, I am shocked. My hundred thousand lives will never come back to me. Ah, well. We must say nothing to the old rat below. He shall think the land is still there; and he shall go with me."

"You will go on?"

"Pardieu! I must. And after all, there are many things not known about this country of the damned. Perhaps I, Francois Narbonne, may find riches after all! If not, I will be as well off as at the start. Ho, ho! Down hill there, old rat! Are you lost?"

"I hear you. But, batten down your hatch, or we'll have a boarding party after our brandy. A canoe passed downstream a bit ago. Too dark to a foreign lingo, neither Spanish, French nor good old English. Wild Indians, I've logged it."

"One of my enemy's canoe, scouting the back-trail," I whispered to Narbonne. "His Choctaws must have discovered my smoke, and some of them are out to locate it. I must make the cut-off at Point Coupee as quickly as possible. If you are still minded to help mademoiselle forget her fears—"

He was as poisonous as a swamp-moccasin, but age had drawn his fangs; he was merely a shell filled with wicked memories and evil longings. If not for the danger of his babbling to Damaon I would have set him adrift with his brandy with an alligator. When I came to the fire the girl and Narbonne were seated side by side before the dying bed of coals, the ruddy light playing on their faces and giving me the impression she was more at ease in his company than in mine. She asked: "Are we to move on tonight?"

"It is best. If we can travel till near daylight we can camp for the greater part of the day and reach Point Coupee a twilight. You can sleep in the pirogue while we travel tonight."

"I was not thinking of myself," she reproached. "I was thinking of you, monsieur, who must be so weary. And I know all this extra labor is because of me."

A man never takes amiss the pity

I would gladly paddle through hell to ease mademoiselle's mind, monsieur," he gravely interrupted.

I waited for Six Flangers to come up the bank, which he mounted with the agility of a monkey. He reeked of brandy and was in a beastly humor.

"Cheer up," I said, with malicious enjoyment. "There is gold ahead, a gold mine."

"Aye? That's why the devil bites me," he grunted. "There's two gold mines ahead, and I can't take both of them. This Narbonne's a crazy fool. If he'd told the yarn I'd laughed at it. But the second officer of the Maire believes it. He had talked with this Sagean, who visited the land."

"And the second gold mine?"

"Don't you wish you knew, my brave cock?" he mocked, his brandy giving him assurance. "Hark 'ee! A man who helped sack St. Augustine, and who has seen many a stout lad—some women, too—try to walk on the ocean with their eyes blindfolded, knows how to keep his hatch closed."

He swung on ahead of me, and I knew the brady had stirred up thoughts of the old days; for in a low voice he was whining something about:

Low down, hull down,
 We're off for Portobello-O
 Women, and wrink, and the isthmus sink,
 And our cap'n's very mellow-O.

Countless remedies are advertised for constipation. Many relieve for the moment but they are habit forming and must be continued. Others contain calomel and dangerous mineral drugs, which remain in the system, settle in the joints and cause aches and pains. Some are harsh purgatives which cramp and gripe and leave a depressed after effect.

Avoid lubricating oils which only grease the intestines and encourage nature's machinery to become lazy.

A purely vegetable laxative such as Carter's Little Liver Pills, gently touches the liver, bile starts to flow, the bowels move gently, the intestines are thoroughly cleaned and constipation poisons pass away. The stomach, liver and bowels are now active and the system enjoys a real tonic effect. All druggists 25c and 75c red pkgs.
