YORK SCHOOL

The semi-annual examination of York School was held on Dec. 20th, before a very large attendance of parents and visitors. The school presented a pleasing appearance, being tastefully decorated for the occasion. The various classes were thoroughly examined by the teacher, Miss Pearl Vessey, assisted by Rev. F. E. Boothroyd, and Mrs. George Watts. The results were very creditable to both pupils and teacher, showing much careful thought and work in the conduct of the school. After the examination, a long program was given by the scholars, which was exceptionally well rendered and much enjoyed. Complimentary remarks were made by those present, expressing their decided approval of the progress of the school. A pleasing feature was the reading of an address to the teacher

MAMMOTHS IN NATURE'S ICE-BOX

What is the world's oldest refrigerator? That sounds like a riddle, but I am not speaking in play. The oldest "ice-box" which has ever saved meat for man to find is the icy region of northern Russia.

covery, and a party of men came to the spot. They saw that the animal had the general shape of an elephant; but no elephant of which they had ever heard was covered by such long hair.

The animal is a mammoth, a member of a race which has perished from the earth. There were mammoths in Europe during the Stone Age, as we know from bones found there and from drawings Stone Age people left in their caves. Yet there is no record of any living mammoth having been seen since people learned to write, about 8,000 years ago.

Two other well-preserved mammoths have since been found in Siberia. Their skin was there, along with the hair, bones and muscles. In one case "the eyes still stared from the sockets," and the brain was in the skull. In the stomach of another one, the young shoots of pine trees were found.

Most mammoths were about the same size as modern elephants, but some reached a height of 13 feet. The tusks were long, sometimes measuring more than 12 feet. A single tusk has been known to weigh 200 pounds.

A mammoth or "hairy elephant"

In 1808 a Russian fisherman was trying his luck near the mouth of the Lena river which flows into the Arctic ocean. Suddenly he spied some kind of monster animal partly encased in ice. He walked closer and watched to see whether it would move.

The beast did not move—it was dead. Part of its flesh had been gnawed away by wild animals, but the form was almost complete. Long curved tusks came out from the head, and there was hair over parts of the hide which had not been destroyed. The fisherman reported his discovery.
