CONSERVATION

A WEEKLY COLUMN OF PRACTICAL OPINIONS OF THE VITAL ISSUES AFFECTING THE USES AND ABUSES OF NATURAL RESOURCES BY MR. LUDLOW JENKINS MARSHFIELD.

EXTRACTS FROM "FUR IN CHURCH"
(ASSOCIATION FOR THE PROTECTION OF FUR-BEARING ANIMALS)
There are many strange and perplexing things that have been so often and so repeatedly seen that familiarity with them has deprived us of all sense of their strangeness. Of such nature is the sight of persons praying in Church clad in the fur of wild animals. No doubt the majority of these offenders are so blinded by custom and so satisfied with conventional ideas of what constitutes morality that they are quite unconscious that there is anything incongruous in the act of praying to Him from whom they are praying to Him for mercy or favour be- decked in the skins of animals to which no mercy or favour has been shown.

Doubtless of many church-goers are ignorant of the horrible cruelties incident to the pursuit of the fur-trade and are so deficient in imagination that they can enjoy the soft feel and beauty colour- shades of fur without giving a thought to the way in which it is obtained. But though in the judgment of men, ignorance and want of thought may seem a good excuse, at a higher tribunal, judging not those who asked "Lord, when saw we thee hungered, or athirst, or in a stranger, or naked, or sick, or in prison and did not minister unto thee?" and were answered: "Inasmuch as ye did it not unto one of the least of these ye did it not unto me," such an excuse is not ad- missible as valid. But it may be objected that this is only a parable; quite so, but every parable illustrates some truth, and in this case the truth is that the Law of Compassion even though ignorance of its all-embracing application will be followed by punishment from which there is no escape. And in such words, we shall say we saw, so that to participate in cruelty is to ensure for ourselves a crop of pain: "With what measure ye mete it, shall be measured to you again." But though, among humans, we may feel that the ignorant sinner should be held blame- less (though, as Nature shows, no such leniency with regard to phys- ical laws, I don't know why we should expect it with regard to moral laws), what can be said for those people who refuse to look at any article or pamphlet, or attend any lecture that they think might contain allusions to the cruelties practised upon animals less their sensibilities should be shocked or their peace of their hearts, contin- ued, who seem to think that the feelings of people who speak of such things must be of coarser fibre than their own, yet, nevertheless, in spite of the softness of their hearts, contin- ued to pander to self-indulgence and vanity by using products of the very horrors they so dread to hear men- tioned?

But perhaps we should not be hard on people who, never much given to looking beneath the surface of things or to exercising imagina- tion, thoughtlessly follow a custom to which they have been habituated since their earliest childhood, and towards which those to whom they look for guidance show only ap- proval or complacent acquiescence. No such plea, however, can excuse the occupants of pulpits whose busi- ness it is to discover the wishes of their God and His Son and to trans- mit them to those whom they have been called to instruct, for if they too, are ignorant of the truth about the fur-trade their ignorance, in view of the wide publicity that has been given to the exposure of undeniable facts, is culpable to the last degree. Humanitarian periodicals have repeatedly referred to the cruelties of fur hunting that ought to be stopped by law—the long drawn-out agony of animals held often for days together in the steel jaws of spring traps, and the ruthless barbarity of many trappers. Strange and incongruous it is that those who preach of the mercy of the Father of All and the compass- ion of His Son, should be more shocked at the sight of a woman in church with her head uncovered than at that of a suppliant craving divine mercy while flaunting upon her head a token and witness of a man's denial of mercy to the crea- tures whose God-given instincts he cunningly uses for their betrayal and capture. Thus once more the great is strained at and the camel swallowed. Yet what greater insult than such effrontery could be offered to the God whom a clergyman serves, to his church, or to his holy office, by men and women who are taught that their lives should be guided by the precepts and example of One who proclaimed that Love, Mercy and Compassion of the great- est of all the virtues—without which the practices of religion become nothing better than idolatry.

And if it be contended that this teaching refers to dealing with each other among members of the human family, and does not necessarily apply to the treatment of animals over whom man has been given dominion, I would reply that imper- sonal Love, Mercy and Compassion are of a universal quality and can not be confined within any limits. They cannot be developed in some directions and, at the same time, re-
