A Job Only You Can Do Price Control Questions And Answers

Dorothy Dix Says— A MAN AT 40 REACHES PEAK OF ATTRACTIVENESS

Questions and answers on Price Control will appear in The Guardian as a regular feature for Saturday. The questions are those which have reached the Wartime Prices and Trade Board from housewives in this region.

Suitor Loses Interest In Life Because He Was Rejected DEAR MISS DIX—I do not ask for advice, for none that anyone could give would help me. The woman I love has refused to marry me and I know that I shall have to remain lonely the rest of my days—if I can find sufficient nerve to continue facing loneliness, which I doubt, for I would rather do away with myself.

New Potatoes From May 1st until August 1st the maximum price that retailers may sell new potatoes, Canadian imported, will be 5 cents a pound.

Up to the age of 40 I had so many burdens on my shoulders that I could not think of marriage, but time relieved me of them, and I fell deeply in love with a woman who was all that I wanted in a life companion, but she failed to respond to my feelings. With her I know there is definitely no one else; and there never will be another for me.

This is Not Hoarding: Buying your next season's coal in advance is not hoarding. Owing to the movement of war materials, transportation is overtaxed in all parts of the country. Dealers are trying to get their supplies in early, and early you can help by giving your order as soon as possible, and taking delivery of all you can. Coal yards will not hold a season's supply, and by getting your coal into the Consumer's bins the dealer has room to take more into his yard. Advance sales will help the war programme as a whole.

ANSWER—To marry too young is even more disastrous to a man than to a woman. The chances are that if you had married when you were 20 and weighed yourself down with family burdens before your shoulders were strong enough to bear them, you would be a crushed old man at 40 instead of being a man in your prime.

SEASONAL GOODS: These are goods which are sold only at certain times of the year, such as bathing suits, straw hats, garden furniture etc. If they were not sold at all during the basic period, the price for them is based on that charged for similar kind and quality on sale during the last season prior to the basic period. Prices may be higher where the cost of raw materials and manufacture has increased between the last preceding season and the basic period of Sept. 15 to Oct. 11, 1941. Any increase in price must be sanctioned by the Board, and this is done only after careful investigation by expert advisors.

DEAR MISS DIX—I have been married for the second time for almost a year to a man several years younger than I am. We have established a very pleasant home for ourselves and my 12-year-old son by my former marriage. At the outset of this arrangement I deluded myself with the thought that my son and I would hold a mutual affection for each other but, on the contrary, they hate each other.

BOARDS: These are people who stock up or buy more than their current needs of any commodity with the idea of being in a better position should a shortage of that commodity develop. Hoarders are definitely public enemies. No one should buy more than their need of any commodity unless advised to do so by a responsible officer of the Board, as in the case of coal, referred to elsewhere in this issue. LOYAL CITIZENS DO NOT HOARD!

ANSWER—The only thing you can do in the situation is to choose between them and decide which is the more important in your life. And this is like asking a woman to cut her heart in two. It isn't a question of which one you love the more, because the love you give your husband and the love you give your child are so different that they do not conflict, though neither one of them will believe that. It is a matter that involves not only the affections and the almost unsolvable problem of to which you owe the greater duty, the son or the husband, but also your own personal security and your future well-being.

Lively, New Games Mean End of Stuffy Evenings Clever Card Game Makes Hit Yours is a popular game when you know lively games, can keep the fun going for a two-some—or foursome—or more! No stuffy evenings then—wondering what to do.

ANSWER—Your mind must be more affected than your friend's if you even think of marrying him under such conditions. Don't do something that is bound to end in tragedy for you both. Don't marry a man just because you are sorry for him and want to mother him and take care of him for a marriage that is founded on pity doesn't last.

Queen Elizabeth is Commandant of the Queen's Own Rifles, a unit of the Royal Naval Service. Recently she accompanied the King on a visit to Plymouth. When she embarked on a motor launch at the dockyards she was taken to the Royal Naval Barracks she found the craft was manned entirely by members of the organization. As she stepped aboard a Wren broke the Queen's standard in the bow. It was the first time it had ever been flown in a small vessel. Two launches also manned entirely by Wrens formed an escort. At the landing the Queen congratulated the coxswain on her expert handling of the boat and shook hands with all five members of the crew. She then learned that the Wrens had been handling launches for harbor duties for some time. Later, with the King, Queen Elizabeth visited Y. M. C. A. centre in the town, where she met an Australian pilot to hold a bunch of lilies of the valley while she signed the visitors' book. Then she turned to him and said: "Now you can send the flowers home and tell your family 'I'm from me.'"

Queen Wilhelmina and Princess Juliana attended religious service Sunday morning at St. Bartholomew's Church, Ottawa, and on Monday, Majesty's Sunday was a day of complete rest. She lunched with Prince's Juliana, at the latter's home on Landowne avenue, Rockcliffe, and the merry little princesses from the Queen and her daughter went for a short ride in one of the Governor General's cars. The Queen again left Government House about five in the afternoon, going to her sister's house, where she saw to it that her little granddaughters were safely tucked in bed for the night. The Queen and her daughter then returned to Rideau Hall. The Queen did not receive the press during her present stay in Ottawa, but posed for the press photographers. Upon her return to Ottawa from the United States, on her way back to England. It is quite likely that she will have a press conference.
