Malt Breakfast Food

Is Not Flat and Mushy Like The Ordinary Cereals.

It Gets Its Delicate and Delicious Flavor From the Malt in it.

You will surely like Malt Breakfast Food as well as the thousands who are now using it regularly every morning.

Malt Breakfast Food is not a flat, mushy food like the ordinary cereals now seeking recognition. It is a concentrated food loved by young and old—a food that bestows a vigorous health, making you happy and contented.

Malt Breakfast Food is the only grain food scientifically combined with pure and healthful Malt. This scientific combination produces the delicate flavor peculiar to Malt Breakfast Food. This food is as economical as common oatmeal. One package makes twenty five meals. Do not accept inferior foods; ask for Malt Breakfast Food and see that you get it. All Grocers.

ASSAULTED THE JEWS.

NEW YORK, August 19.—The grand jury returned three indictments to-day against police officers. on charges growing out of the riots recently at the funeral of Chief Rabbi Joseph. Two of the indictments are against Roundsman James M. Jackson, and charged him with two assaults in the second degree.

GIBSON BOWELS' VIEW OF THE BALFOUR GOVERNMENT.

A Sarcastic Reference to Lord Salisbury's Nepotism by a se rvative Member—Criticism of the Balfour Administration at its Formation.

Mr. Gibson Bowles (Con.), speaking of the Balfour Government, expressed himself as follows:

Four weeks ago Lord Salisbury, for reasons which were still mysterious, but which must have been grave, suddenly resigned the Premiership—so suddenly, and indeed, so secretely that even his visit to the Sovereign was unknown until three days afterwards. Lord Salisbury's adminstration having ceased to be, and the First Lord of the Treasury having been charged with the formation of another adminstration—very properly, no doubt, because, certainly, with his previous history and traditions, the Colonial Secretary could hardly have taken up as Premier the conduct of the education bill (laughter)—the country was still without the smallest knowledge or hint as to what the new adminstration was to be, or on what principals it was to be formed. All they knew was that two principal members of the old adminstration were not to be embraced in the present one—Lord Salisbury and the Chancellor of the Exchequer were to go and leave the rest sitting on the front ministerial bench. It reminded him of the story told by Sheridan on a somewhat similar occasion—the story of the cobbler of Athens who had cobbled so diligently and well, and sat so long in the same place, that when he rose to go away the sitting part of him remained attached to the bench. (Much laughter.) Some changes would have to be made, and he thought the time had arrived when the First Lord would have to take the House and the country into his confidence. On what principle was this new adminstration to be founded? The outgoing adminstration had outlived some and wearied many of its friends. (Laughter.) It certainly showed a cynical contempt for all those qualities which had hitherto been held to constitute Parliamentary ability, and in fact, for all qualities except those founded on consanguinity (Renewed laughter.) They took some and left others. Why was Lord Hugh Cecil left? Why leave him out? He was full of ability and bursting with Parliamentary capacity. He was too indipendent, perhaps disposed to be too difficult and too little pliant in fact for administrative purposes. That well-defined sharp edging which would represent his portrait, etched in with the very vitriol of ecclesiastical conviction, would ill consort with the tame gallery of family portraits of the late adminstration. But of that gallery he would say no more; some of them were about to have their faces turned to the wall (laughter), others were to be clean cut out of their frames. It was as to who was to succeed them that he respectfully asked for information. Was the First Lord of the Treasury to be the real or the nominal head of the administration, and was the ruling policy to be ordained and was its conduct dictated by the chiefs of the party which contained extreme Socialists and Radicals? Was this to be his administration or somebody else's? What sort of partnership was it to be, if it was to be a partnership? Was this new administration founded like the last upon the principle of the domination of one family, or on a similar principle—the domination of two families? (Laughter.) Or, finally, did the right hon. gentleman mean to take a broad survey of all the talent he could find on those benches? (Loud laughter.) On the composition of the new ministry some of the support of the party would depend. Five-sixths of the Premier's supporters were Conservatives, and, although a proper proportion of power should be given to the other sixth, it should not be an undue proportion. If the right hon. gentleman would give them such assurances as would lead them to believe that he meant to form an administration which would conduct the affairs of the Empire, they would be satisfied: but if any of the other principles which he had referred to were to guide its formation, he would prepare a disaster more general and complete than had ever befallen any party, and he would prepare for the country a period of unrest, strife and confusion. (Opposition cheers.)

A SERIOUS GRIEVANCE.

The removal of the Anglo Rustico School from Commercial Cross, the centre of the district, to Clark's field, a distance of about two thirds of a mile from its original position, has created a serious and unfriendly feeling among the ratepayers of that district, and the indignant parties demand from the Chief Superintendent of Education and the Board of Education an explanation for the sanction of so unfair a removal. On May 3rd the Secretary of the school trustees, by order of trustee, called a public meeting to transact important business in connection with the school. At this meeting a motion was put "to move the school." Those at the south end of the district, surprised at the proceeding, sent a memorial to the Chief Superintendent of Education objecting to such an action. At the regular meeting of the district this year however, this same Secretary of the trustees submitted the annual report, which indicated that all taxes had been "settled for and paid." Pleased with such a report we dared not deny the right of any man to vote. The motion to remove the school was again brought up, and carried by a majority of two, but since that however it was discovered that two of the rate payers had not paid their taxes in full and consequently were not qualified to vote. Indignant at such an action on the part of the Secretary the declared minority submitted the following protest. Needless to say nowever the Chief Superintendent of Education ignored the protest and so allowed the injured parties to become the victims of a wrong and the average attendance of pupils in the district apparently considerably reduced.

PROTEST.

The Chief Superintendent of Education:—

DEAR SIR,—We a portion of the rate payers of the Anglo-Rustico school district beg leave to enter a protest against the movement of the school so great a distance from its present position and would humbly request you and the Board of Education to kindly investigate the circumstances. Our grounds for objection are:

I. The distance instead of being one-third of a mile is nearly 1085 yds. or nearly two-thirds of a mile.

II The children of Mr. Ethan Craswell, who at present is about two miles from the school will be required to go the additional distance which we consider to be too far, and also Mr. Jas. Mutch who sends his children here will be too far from any school.

III. Only one pupil comes from Mr. Bantain's near the Seaside Hotel.

IV. We consider that the majority, which carried the motion to move the school is illegal. Our reasons are that the Secretary of the school trustees admitted today (July 14) that two of the ratepayers who voted have not paid their school taxes in full and at the annual meeting he declared that all taxes were paid.

RUSTICI.

N. B. The average attendance in the school at present is we hear about 7 or 8 for the week.

Flowers a Bride Should Carry.

The flowers the bride shall carry, writes Martha Coman in "Leslie's Weekly," is a question to be decided by her own individuality, for every girl has her favorite, and her wedding day is a welcome opportunity to make her choice a public one. The bride's bouquet is not invariably of pure white, though the paler colors are more effective and much more acceptable than the deeper ones of red or pink. Lilies of the valley made up into one of the beautiful shower bouquets are about as appropriate for the fair maiden as anything, though there are innumerable combinations possible in the way of orchids and violets.

The shower bouquet is rarely successfully turned out by an amateur, and those persons who save the last sweet service of personally arranging the bride's flowers for their own fingers had best not attempt much in the way of a shower. But the palest of pink roses or the beautiful bride roses are at hand and can be easily arranged. The sweet, old-fashioned white lilac is a most acceptable flower to use when the bouquet is put together by loving hands rather than by busy professional ones, and it lends itself easily to an admirable result.

White orchids combined with the delicate green of the Farleyenes fern make a stunning bouquet, especially when the whole is tied lavishly with broad, soft velvet ribbon that matches exactly in shade the delicate petals of the rare exotic. This flower and fern, put together in the form called the "Princess Plume" bouquet, is a most beautiful and effective accessory to the bride's attire.

The violet cuff bouquet was a fad for a time, as was also the Du Barry collarette of the same modest but popular flower. The collarette and cuff effects were generally used only for the bride's attendants, the bride herself carrying a huge shower bouquet of white violets. Leghorn hats of white, lavishly decorated with pink roses and tied on with broad streamers of ribbon to match, are very pretty for bridesmaids, and it is then a most effective idea to have the attendants carry only large bunches of waving, feathery, maidenhair fern. Wild sweet-brier roses and apple blossoms are very lovely for floral decorations, but they are rather difficult to manage when it comes to the bouquets, and so they are both more popular for wall and aisle decorations.

"FORCE" FOOD CO.,
Buffalo, N. Y.

Gentlemen,—I took home a package of "FORCE" yesterday and the children were anxious to try it for supper. We found it suited our palates and our little two-year-old girl cried for the second dish. The first thing this morning on reaching the breakfast table, she, in her baby English, made us understand that she wanted "FORCE" for her breakfast. We are all in love with it, but I am fearful you have got me into a "peck of trouble," as the children want "FORCE" for dinner and supper as well as breakfast.
