

"THE LOVE PENDULUM"

dwellings and later the earlier type of apartment house.

I looked up at the windows idly. It was a beautiful warm day, the sort of very early spring day that is so tantalizing in the country. The sun was warm and the sky blue. In the country melting snow would make the roads impassable; in the city, the streets seemed brown and dirty of rubbish.

Fat women in dreadful house dresses leaned from open windows and watched the street below, or talked with each other, calling from window to window, their red elbows resting on cushions placed on the window sill.

There were, at least, no slovenly figures in the boarding house windows—only blank expanses of coarse lace curtains, gray from the winter's soot and smoke.

I wondered whether I would have to live in any such dreary place if I left Win? I had given up my allowance when I married, and I would not take money from Win if I went away. I wondered how much the rooms in the boarding houses cost, and once I stopped and rang a bell and asked, I was offered a parlor with a dreadful piano, a great many lace curtains at each window and a great iron bed that thrust itself far into the room, and red carpet and shiny oak furniture for $10 a week. The lady suggested I might give music lessons and looked curiously at my fur coat.

As I walked back I suddenly understood the reason why so many women stay married to men they hate—simply for the physical comforts of life. I knew I was spoiled by luxury, by comfort, sunlight and a cheery home to stand the dreariness of this alternative. I hated myself for my weakness.

A little nearer my own part of the city was the next stage in the city's growth. Here the huge old time houses had been made into modern apartments, studio apartments they were called. Colin had one of these a few blocks away. I had been there often when he had given teas to friends.

I remembered he paid very little for it, short about $50 a month, I thought. He had had it in the days when he was comparatively poor.

Looking up at the windows, I saw a sign "Studio Flat for Rent" and on an impulse, I rang the janitor's bell and went in. "Living room, bedroom, bath and kitchenette," the janitress told me, and showed me up to a tiny apartment that still smelled of new paint and plaster.

Lots of sun, more'n most of 'em have," she went on. Evidently she felt her duty was over when she made that statement. I looked about. It was small, but the front room faced south and was sunny; the little bedroom had a window looking over roofs, but would get plenty of air; the shape was irregular because part of the original room had been cut up for a tiny tiled bath and a still tinier kitchenette.

I looked in my purse. I had $50. The rent was $60. I took the place, paying the $50 and promising to mail the rest. She gave me the name of the agent to see about the lease.

So I found myself with the first step taken with a home entirely my own. I was committed to my decision now. I could not go back. I went to some furniture and gave a check for it—I had a little money in my personal bank account.

For several days after that I went to the new flat and arranged chairs and hung curtains and bought linen and worked hard making an attractive home of the two rooms.

When it was done I took Colin to look at it.

"So you are going to leave," he said, looking about him. "Well, I think I'm glad of it."

"I thought of the Rawleys—Mr. Rawley who talked of the way he made money and Mrs. Rawley who used an inch of make-up and talked of how she spent money. We would talk and dance, and go from one restaurant to another—and I was tired. I could not do it."

"If it's a casual affair, drop out and stay home tonight—just this one evening. We might come to some agreement if we talked this over."

It was my last chance. I pictured an evening at home, where we really might forget, and make up our differences.

"Sorry," Win's voice came evenly. "I'm afraid we would only quarrel again. We agree best when there are other people around." The door closed.

Presently I heard him moving about his room. Later the other door leading into the hall way opened. Win was going out. Then the hall door closed and there was silence. He had gone out for dinner.

I went into my room and began pulling out things from all the drawers. I rang for Ellen to bring in my trunks, and packed in every thing I could, thinking only to get my possessions in as fast as possible. Then I sent for a taxi, and taking a trunk and some bags, and ordering Ellen to send the rest after me, I went to the little apartment I had furnished.

Its door closed behind me with a clang—I was alone, alone to face the gossip and a new life.

on the door leading into his bedroom. He never moved as I walked toward him.

"I'll make all the bargains you want. I never start the quarrelling. I know we don't get along anymore. Somehow I always want to say mean things when I see you. I seem to affect you the same way."

"Win," I said suddenly, "would you be happier if we were not living together?"

He looked at me steadily for a moment, and I stood there looking back at him. I had to steel myself not to cry. He hated that. Besides, I was not going to give way and show my weakness. So I suppose I set my face in rigid lines.

In any case, he did not understand how I felt. I know that now.

"If you wish to leave me, you are at perfect liberty to do so," he said finally. "I'll give you any allowance you think right. Thank Heaven, I'm making enough to do that. I suppose living apart would be better than seeing each other every day, feeling the way we do."

To me that sounded like a dismissal. I felt cold all over, and weak.

It was the end then! He was taking my suggestion eagerly. He wanted me to go! Very well, I would. There was nothing else to do.

I turned away and walked back to the table so he would not see my face.

"It's too bad we could not make it go. I don't know of many happy marriages, but I thought ours would be different from the others."

"It would have been, if you would only do some of the things I wanted. You've nothing expected of you except to dress well and go about and entertain. That's little enough to ask of a woman."

"But don't you see, that's what I don't like! I like—worth while things. This is so—so useless."

"It happens to be what I expect of you. I lived your way—last summer in the country. You know how mer in the country. You know how I tried to hear his door close. But he spoke again.

"I'm going off with the Rawleys on a party. If you'd like to come, it's a casual affair and I can take you."

I thought of the Rawleys—Mr. Rawley who talked of the way he made money and Mrs. Rawley who used an inch of make-up and talked of how she spent money. We would talk and dance, and go from one restaurant to another—and I was tired. I could not do it.

OPIUM CROP IS SMALL
BELGRADE, Yugoslavia, Aug. 23.—The opium crop in Yugoslavia this year is the smallest in several years past. The present crop, it is estimated, will not be enough for seed purposes. Planters are asking the government to help them import seed from Asia Minor.

MRS. BUDGE SO WEAK COULD HARDLY STAND
Tells How Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Restored Her Health

River Desert, Que.—"I used to have a severe pain in my side. I would be unable to walk fast and could not stand for any length of time to do my ironing or washing, but I would have to lie down to get relief from the pain. I had this for about two years, then a friend told me to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound as she had had good results. I certainly got good results from it, too, as the last time I had a sore side was last May and I have not had it since. I am also glad of having good nursing for my baby, and I think it is your medicine that helped me in this way."

L. V. BUDGE, River Desert, Quebec.
If you are suffering from the tortures of a displacement, irregularities, backache, headaches, nervousness, or a pain in the side, you should lose no time in trying Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Private Text-Book upon "Ailments Peculiar to Women" will be sent you free upon request. Write for it to the Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co., Cobourg, Ontario. This book contains valuable information that every woman should know.
