WINSTON CHURCHILL'S SPEECH AT BELFAST.

Mr. Churchill's address at Belfast was of a character to quiet the undue excitement which has for some time prevailed in Ulster. Although he did not go into detail as to the precise terms of the bill, he made it sufficiently clear that the Government have in mind something more than the mere setting up of an Irish Parliament, and that England and Scotland as well are eventually to be treated with like consideration to the Emerald Isle.

In other words it is intended that the existing legislative union between the three Kingdoms shall in the future be developed into some sort of a federal union in which each shall have its own local legislature. In this way and as part of a larger scheme Home Rule will not be for Ireland alone, but for England and Scotland also. Ireland will lead the way, as for exceptional reasons it was given the lead in the matter of church disestablishment, which is not likely to end where it began.

We have long thought that the true solution of the many difficulties pertaining to the legislation and government of the United Kingdom would ultimately be found in the adoption of the federal idea, which is at once more flexible and equally secure, when compared with the present system. Over all will be the Imperial Parliament, greatly reduced in the number of its membership, relieved of the cumbersome details concerning local affairs that at present are the cause of tedious delays in legislation and, but still clothed with such veto powers over the enactments of the local Legislatures as shall prevent injustice and secure to minorities their fullest rights.

TELEPATHY.

From two Greek words meaning "afar" and "feeling" or "sympathy" respectively, the psychologists have compounded the word telepathy, to express the direct communication of one mind with another otherwise than in ordinary ways. It is a sort of wireless telegraphy between mind and mind, but more wonderful in some of its aspects, and the laws of which are little understood. An instance occurred only the other day which was related in our news columns. All will remember the recent incident at Niagara Falls in which a Mr. Stanton, his wife and a young man named Heacock met their death in sight of hundreds in the gorge below the great cataract.

Mr. Heacock, father of the young hero, relates that at the time of the accident he and his wife, with some friends were having their midday meal in their home in Cleveland, N. Y., say 170 miles from Niagara, when Mrs. Heacock, in the act of taking a glass of water suddenly took on an agonized look and screamed out, "O there is ice floating there, and people are running. I see my boy; he is in danger." Mrs. Heacock collapsed under the shock, and before she had been fully restored a telegraph message brought news of the death of her son.

Such things are uncommon, but scores of authentic cases quite as striking as that here related are on record. In olden times this would be called a vision, and properly so, for it would seem that the mother actually saw in a mental picture all the surroundings and incidents of the scene in which her son was perishing. Equally vivid pictures of actual, and Ireland will be given for the first ten years a liberal grant from the Imperial treasury as a measure of simple justice. It has been found that for many years past her contribution to the revenues of the Kingdom have been in excess of what she has received. What is now to be given is in part to make good the losses of the past and in part to equalise the burdens of the future. There is a lesson here for the Dominion of Canada in its relation to the smaller Provinces, as it is notorious that the big Provinces have had an undue share of the benefits and the small Provinces have borne an oppressive share of the burdens so far.

Mr. Churchill's speech, taken in connection with what had been before given out with regard to the Home Rule bill, can hardly fail to have a conciliatory and calming effect upon the minds of many alarmed and conscientious opponents of that measure. True, the scheme of devolution from the legislative union to the federal one as contemplated, is a sweeping and almost revolutionary one, but it is no mere experiment. The federal plan has been tried in the United States, in Canada, Australia, and in South Africa with such success that the experiences of the larger English-speaking world outside of the United Kingdom may give sufficient assurances of its safety for trial at home.

An effective passage in Mr. Churchill's speech was one in which he referred to the Dublin and Enniskillen Fusiliers marching up a South African slope against the Boer rifles. "We have made friends of our enemies, the Boers. Can we not make friends of our comrades, too?"

most tragic occurrences, are related to have been transmitted half way round the world in a moment of time and have been afterward verified in a most remarkable way. The so-called "second sight" of certain peculiarly gifted persons in Scotland afforded a more common illustration of this extraordinary power in times past.

Such incidents as that cited from Cleveland need not be regarded as in any way miraculous. They are probably the result of natural laws as yet not understood. Telepathic communications mostly pass between persons closely attached to each other by ties of blood or affection, where both are susceptible to strong impressions and one of them is suddenly exposed to imminent danger. But there are instances recorded where a mental picture has thus been transmitted from mind to mind of scenes that were trivial, and even ridiculous, but in which one of the parties was very vividly impressed at the moment. This would seem to indicate that a high pitch of mental stress or excitement on the part of the sender of the message or picture, and a peculiarly passive or receptive state of mind on the part of the receiver are necessary to telepathic communication.

TAX RECEIPTS.

The provisions of the law which gives to taxpayers the right to vote, and refuse the privilege to those who do not pay taxes, are just. But the provision requiring the production of a tax receipt may be questioned. When a man has paid his taxes he has so far discharged his duty to the city. Business men as a rule preserve their receipts for money paid out by them, but other citizens do not always do so. And a receipt may be lost, in which case it would be unjust to deprive a taxpayer of his right to vote, his taxes being paid. As it is the law requires the production of a tax receipt if called for, and intending voters should go to the polls prepared for such an emergency.

A desirable amendment to the law, in our opinion, would be that the city should prepare a delinquent list of those who have not paid their taxes and who consequently are not qualified to vote. The onus of prov-

Superfluous Hair

A HORRIBLE HAIRY MASK Completely Removed Without One Moment's Pain.

No longer need women suffer the terrible humiliation and embarrassment of a repulsive, hairy growth on the face, neck or hands, which gives the feminine face such a coarse, ugly, masculine and oftentimes positively repugnant appearance. For years I searched for a painless, simple and satisfactory way to remove superfluous hair from the skin, so that it need never return. Endless experiments and the experience of thousands of women who have undergone the barbarous torture of the electric needle, burning pastes and powders prove to me that these widely advertised treatments were for the most part dangerous in the extreme and seldom satisfactory in their results. Usually the unsightly growth returns in greatly aggravated form, and sometimes the victim's face is horribly scarred for life. Yet, I determined there must be a way and that I should find it.

At last a happy thought came to me, and after many long, wakeful hours I emerged triumphant with a wonderful new mode of treatment, different from all others I had ever seen, yet so simple and practical it seems strange it had never been discovered before. A few friends tested my discovery, with instant success. A noted French chemist, to whom I showed it, said it contained ingredients for dissolving the hair-root and all. One lady who tried said: "A single application sufficed to destroy the hair instantly." "Removed every trace of the undesirable growth. I did not suffer one second," said another lady. "Hair completely disappeared, leaving my skin soft and white," said still another woman.

I have put my discovery to the hardest possible tests. I have seen this remarkable preparation put on an arm fairly bristling with disgusting black hair and watched it, fairly wither and die before my very eyes—shrivelling up and vanishing as though touched by the hand of magic. It seems certain now that I have at last discovered a plan which will succeed in producing marvelous results where all other plans have failed, and I believe that no matter how much or little superfluous hair is on your face, neck, arms or body you can, with my simple and wonderful discovery, remove completely every hateful hair, positively, painlessly and with perfect safety.

While I cannot agree to long continue this plan, I will for introductory purposes during the next 30 days send to every interested woman who writes to me information concerning the secret of my discovery absolutely free. If you like, you may enclose a 2c stamp for reply.

Simply address me, KATHRYN B. FIRMIN, Suite 1368B Clark Music Building, Syracuse, N. Y., and I will send you by return mail full particulars in a plain sealed envelope. "Every lady reader of this paper who has the slightest interest in Miss Firmin's wonderful discovery is urged to write to her without delay, for, as she has said, the information is free and you have everything to gain and nothing to lose."

ing that a voter is not qualified should rest upon the city, and the qualified voter who has paid his taxes should not be required to prove himself qualified. The law as it now stands is hard upon the poor, who are not always careful to preserve their receipts. It is to be hoped that no undue advantage will be taken in the polling today which might deprive any honest taxpayer of his right to vote.

FIVE FREED FROM COLONY AT SHILOH.

LISBON, FALLS, Me., Feb. 9—Mrs. Gott, her three children and her aged mother, who made their escape from a house at Shiloh, where they had been confined, by jumping from a window, declare the trouble was caused by the aged woman's refusal to turn over her money to the Holy Ghost and Us colony.

They ran to the house of G. F. Crockett, a mile away, pursued by members of the colony, but reached the place just in time to rush in and lock the doors. The pursuers returned to the "Hilltop."

AMERICAN MAIL STOLEN IN ITALY.

NAPLES, Feb. 9—A number of American mail bags, which arrived here by way of Havre, France, containing registered mail and remittances from Italian emigrants in America for their families in Sicily, and valued at $100,000, disappeared after they left Naples. It is believed that the bags were stolen from the mail boat Palermo, which was taking them to Palermo.
