IN MEMORIAM

In memory of our dear mother, who departed this life March 15, 1918.

Call her back our dear departed,
Anchored safe where storms are o'er,
On the borderland we left her,
Soon to meet and part no more.
Far beyond this world of changes,
Far beyond this world of care,
We shall find our missing loved one,
In our Father's Mansion fair.

To the Island Fox Ranchers

The Fox Industry is today in much better condition than for many years. Island Ranchers have been able this past season to sell many foxes. What has caused this? Outside buying, the result of Publicity, and the Black Fox Magazine has been the chief factor in obtaining this publicity for the industry. Do you want to sell your live foxes at good prices this season? If so, you can do it through our columns. Our circulation is a large one and is constantly growing. We reach those already in the industry and thousands of interested people who will become fox ranchers this following season. Our Magazine is bright and up to date, and every rancher should be a subscriber and get it regularly. By reading the articles on breeding, feeding etc. which are written by the best men in the business, you will be able to obtain information that will save you hundreds of dollars.

We are about instituting a Bureau of statistics which within a short time, will be able to supply more information on every phase of the Fox Industry than you can possibly obtain from any other source.

Write us for advertised rates, and if not already a subscriber send us your subscription.

Yours very truly,

A CRIPPLE FOR THREE YEARS

Helpless In Bed With Rheumatism Until He Took "FRUIT-A-TIVES".

MR. ALEXANDER MUNRO

R.R. No. 1, Lorne, Ont.

"For over three years, I was confined to bed with Rheumatism. During that time, I had treatment from a number of doctors, and tried nearly everything I saw advertised to cure Rheumatism, without receiving any benefit.

Finally, I decided to try 'Fruit-a-tives". Before I had used half a box, I noticed an improvement; the pain was not so severe, and the swelling started to go down.

I continued taking this fruit medicine, improving all the time, and now I can walk about two miles and do light chores about the place".

THE PROMOTER'S WIFE

BY JANE PHELPS

BARBARA HEARS GOSSIP OF BLANCHE AND NEIL

CHAPTER XL

Naturally, I was immensely relieved that Neil had not been with Blanche Orton, yet I knew that in some way Payne Orton's death had been the cause of his excitement, also of his remaining out all night. I wanted to question him, but feared to anger him and so I waited until after he had finished his dinner and was smoking his cigar in the library.

"Aren't you going to tell me where you were last night, Neil? I was terribly worried. I didn't sleep a wink. You ran off without a word, you remember."

"I was attending to business at the club until late. Then I was so tired I turned in there. I had to see a man there very early."

"Business that Mr. Orton's death made necessary?

"Yes," he frowned.

"Can't you explain what it was to me, dear? I have been so anxious."

"No—you wouldn't understand — and talking does no good." The same old excuse, one with which I never could feel satisfied: that I wouldn't understand.

How did he know I wouldn't? I never had he given me a chance to try.

Payne Orton's funeral was to be strictly private. But I knew Neil had sent Blanche Orton orchids, because the day after was the first of the month and the bill for them came that morning.

I saw little of Neil in those days following the death of Payne Orton. I was not very well, and so remained more closely at home than usual. Yet, in a way, I did not think of him as being with her. As far as I knew, Neil never had told me an untruth; and if he had not gone to her the night of her trouble, what right had I to think he was with her now? But that he was terribly anxious and worried was plainly to be seen.

Then came the day when Lorraine Morton disturbed what peace of mind I had. It was a dismal rainy afternoon, and she said that she knew I would be depressed, so she had dropped everything to run over and cheer me up.

Lorraine meant well, but as I have said she was inclined to gossip.

We chatted about various things then she spoke of Mr. Orton's death.

"I'll bet Blanche was relieved. Of course it must have been a shock but I don't think she cared a button for him. She never has acted as if she did, anyway."

"Why did she marry him, do you suppose? Neil says it is she who has the money, so it couldn't have been that."

"I guess she wanted 'Mrs.' on her calling cards so she could do as she pleased." Then she quoted: "Oh, for a love for a year, a week, a day—That's Blanche Orton."

"She's fickle, then?"

"Notoriously so—when she was young. They say she was engaged to half a dozen men before she settled down and married Payne Orton But she did settle down."

"After a fashion,—yes. But, Bab, if I were you I would keep Neil away from her if I could. It was bad enough for them to be seen together so much before; but people will surely say he is in love with her if they are intimate now. And they might say that was the reason Payne was so careless of his health that he went off suddenly, as he did."

She had given voice to the thought which had come to me, when I heard he was dead, but which I had forgotten.

"Nonsense!" I replied, but I felt myself growing pale.

"It isn't nonsense, Bab," she said as she rose to go. "And if I weren't so fond of you I'd never mention it But I saw Neil going there yesterday. I was calling next door, on Mrs. Tenny, and although I remained an hour, Neil was still with Blanche when I left. Watch out for her, Bab!"

"God deliver us from our gossiping friends," I moaned, the tears starting. I had almost ceased thinking of Blanche Orton and Neil—and now this!

When she had gone I sat thinking, wretchedly, about it all. Then my suspicions had been right—Payne Orton had been foolishly careless with his health, of late, and that, perhaps was the cause of his death? I could remember, now, hearing vague rumors about his drinking to excess, keeping late hours, etc. Had he, then, been unhappy over Blanche's friendship with Neil—so unhappy that he didn't care?

Tomorrow—Barbara Is Anxious Because Neil Is Drinking.
