Enemy Ahead But Trouble on His Heels

Gen. T. S. Clee, Winston, talks to a number of Canadian soldiers under the protection of British tanks, in the front line at the front of the Canadian Army Officers Mess through W.D.

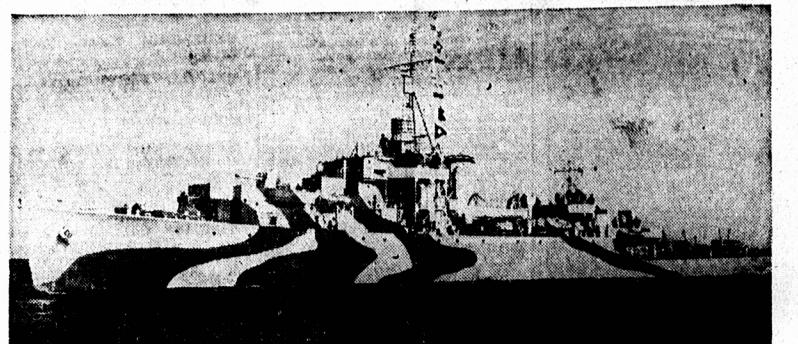

The walls smashed and shell-pocked from the furious battles that raged around the little Norman Channel pictured above provided refuge for the Canadian soldiers who are seen out about the rim of war, the shell-pocked walls and soldiers pictured above to worship.

Only the brave deserve the worst, decide these Yank doughboys as they carry off loads of good German sausages, 'captured' when Allies took Cherbourg.

Canadian Frigate "Swansea" Bags Another German Submarine

OTTAWA, July 6—Only a short time after she had helped H.M.C.S. ST. LAURENT destroy a U-boat, H.M.C.S. SWANSEA, one of the Royal Canadian Navy's frigates, bagged another, the Honourable Angus L. Macdonald, Minister of National Defence for Naval Services, announced today. SWANSEA was assisted by H.M.S. PELLICAN, a Royal Navy sloop.

The kill by SWANSEA brings to five the successes against U-boats announced by the Minister recently. First to score was the frigate H.M.C.S. WASKESIU. The second triumph was rung up by a group of Canadian ships in which the corvette CHILLIWACK played the major role. Then H.M.C.S. ST. LAURENT, a destroyer, assisted by H.M.C.S. SWANSEA wiped out another U-boat with depth charges and gun fire. Next the frigate H.M.C.S. PRINCE RUPERT assisted United States forces in sinking a submarine.

The minister emphasized that the first three frigates to have been built on the West Coast of Canada have all destroyed U-boats, with SWANSEA sharing in the destruction of two. The frigates have made their kills in the order in which they were built. H.M.C.S. WASKESIU was the first to be commissioned and the first to make her kill. H.M.C.S. SWANSEA and H.M.C.S. PRINCE RUPERT made their debuts in that order.

"TEXTBOOK ACTION"

The commanding officer of H.M.C.S. SWANSEA, Commander Clarence A. King, D.S.O., D.S.C., Legion of Merit (U.S.) RCNR, of Oliver, B.C., describes the tussle in which the frigate played the star role as a "textbook action."

Immediately the presence of the submarine became known, "action stations" were sounded throughout SWANSEA. The frigate made her first run and dropped a pattern of depth charges. Shortly after she dropped another pattern and was joined then by H.M.S. PELLICAN. The two ships attacked together and SWANSEA dropped a pattern which apparently split the hull of the U-boat like a coconut and forced it to the surface.

The U-boat, the water about 2,000 yards away from SWANSEA and astern of her. The frigate went round hard to starboard and ran parallel to it, opening up with all guns which could be brought to bear. She was firing from the main battery, the conning tower and a bit of its deck showing. It was badly damaged when it came up. Twelve minutes after it was blown to the surface the U-boat made its death dive, stern first with its bow high in the air.

LOWERED WHALERS

Both SWANSEA and PELLICAN immediately lowered their nets to pick up survivors. The Germans were badly shaken by the depth charges and were inclined to panic. With hurried assistance, the rescuers went to work. Out of the water they plucked most of the U-boat's crew and carried them to the ships where they swarmed up rope scramble nets to safety. A few of the prisoners were suffering from "bends" caused by the submarine's rush to the surface. One or two were wounded slightly.

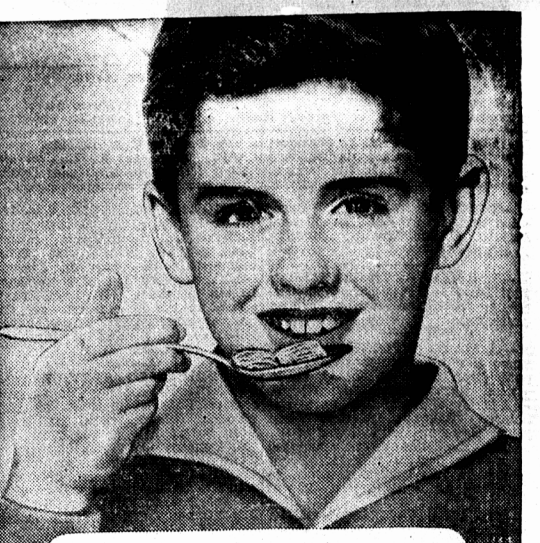

Members of the SWANSEA crew who came in contact with the prisoners characterized them as "typical Nazi types" inclined to be belligerent at first, but docile when they realized they would be treated humanely. The average age of the Germans was about 25, but as physical specimens they were not up to the standard of Germans who had previously taken an involuntary ride in SWANSEA.

"Some of them would never have been accepted by the Royal Canadian Navy," says Surgeon-Lieutenant A. K. Mathisen, RCNVR, of Vancouver, B.C., the frigate's medical officer. "They would have been turned down on medical grounds. One had a heart ailment which would have kept him out of any of our services. I think and others were suffering from minor ailments."

The latest victim of H.M.C.S. SWANSEA brings to four the total of U-boats which her commanding officer, Commander Clarence A. King, has helped park on the bottom. He accounted for his first U-boat in this war while commanding the corvette OAKVILLE. In the last war, while serving in Q-boats, he was credited with one kill and two "probables."

A peacetime fruit farmer from the Okanagan Valley, British Columbia, Commander King gives full credit to his officers and men for the U-boat successes. "The whole ship's company deserves the highest praise," he says. "Any successes we have had have been due to their excellent team work. All they think of when we get into action is 'get him!'"

First Lieutenant in H.M.C.S. SWANSEA is Lieut. Ian Macdonald, RCNVR, Victoria, B.C. Other officers are: Lieut. John Milburn, RCNVR, Victoria, B.C.; Lieutenant J. McCandless, RCNVR, Victoria, B.C.; Lieutenant J. T. Band, RCNVR of 197 Strathgowan Ave., Toronto, Ont.; Lieut. J. E. Sullivan, RCNVR, Timmins, Ont.; Lieut. J. B. Anderson, RCNVR, Victoria, B.C.; Surgeon Lieut. A. K. Mathisen, RCNVR, Vancouver, B.C.; Lieut. A. Stothard, RCNVR, Newcastle, N.B.; Lieut. J. Morrison, RCNVR, Vancouver, B.C. and Lieut. E. Kelgrad, RCNVR, Vancouver, B.C.

HITLER IS GOOD FOR LAUGHS AMONG NEW NAZI PRISONERS

"See, the Fuehrer is Keeping His Promise--- We Are Landing in England!" Cracks One Captive

(By S. J. WOOLF, NEA Artist-Correspondent)

Prisoner Types... captured German soldiers sketched aboard an England-bound LST craft by NEA Artist-Correspondent S. J. Woolf.

ABOARD A U. S. LST, July 5—There are 28 German prisoners on the top deck of this LST on its way back from France. They seem interested in the surroundings as the ship approached a southern base in England.

There are Westphalians, Bavarians, Prussians, East Prussians and Saxons among them. Their ages vary from about 17 to 45. The oldest is a gaunt Bavarian, a dark-haired chap who at times displays a keen sense of humor. There are two or three with whom I try to talk, who are surly and pay no attention to my questions.

Their clothing all shows signs of wear, yet they are by no means in tatters. I can not examine their boots closely but they appear to be in good condition.

According to most of them 1933 marked the crest of Hitler's popularity. This dwindled gradually, when many of his promises were not fulfilled. When the war began many of the older people lost their faith, but the Hitler youth greeted it with enthusiasm. Doubt as to the outcome of the war began to spread when Russia was attacked. Today, say the majority with whom I speak, about 33 percent of the population still follows the Fuehrer.

Hitler Youth Is Still Defiant

When this is said I noticed the youngest of the prisoners shake his head defiantly, but he will not tell me why he disagrees with this and only smiles superciliously.

The square-head from Westphalia says that the Luftwaffe is practically done for; that while there are still numbers of planes, the bombings of factories has made replacements impossible. None of them has seen the rocket bomb and most of them are surprised that it is in use. One of them laughingly remarks that he never believed in its existence and thought Dr. Goebbels was its inventor.

A sad looking peasant type from Frankfurt tells me his name, but asks me not to mention it, as he has a wife and a little girl of seven "at home" and he fears retaliation. For he is particularly virulent in his talk about the Nazis. He says that he had been leading a happy life as a farmer. Although he had little money, he was contented; then he was snatched away and made to fight—for what he did not know.

I asked them when the German people think the war will end. The Saxon pipes up, "Don't you know the Germans have not been allowed to think since Hitler came to power?"

"Even if they did," adds the Bavarian, "they were afraid to say what they thought."

Then, just as we are entering the harbor, he nudges the ribs of the man next to him and says in an undertone, "See, the Fuehrer is keeping his promise. We are landing in England!"

Captured and safe from the Gestapo, these Nazi prisoners dare laugh at a companion's conception of "der Fuehrer's face."
