Marriage Scales

CONCERNING THE ACTION AND THE CHARACTERS

Mariana Page, beautiful, idle, romantic has reached the disconcerted stage of matrimony, and finds her husband, Charles, dull, uninteresting, particularly when contrasted with Craig Cullum, a young actor-star whom Mariana has seen but not met. She quarrels with Doris Sumner, her pretty, active young sister, who tries to interest her in charities.

MEETING THE STAR

Doris's first impression, on stepping into Craig Cullum's dressing room, was of a bewildering array of reflections coming from the enormous full-length wall mirrors. At least half a dozen Dorises, slim and modish in dark frock with a corsage of violets nestling against silver fox furs, confronted her from various angles. The manager seemed to have as many images as the hydra-headed monster of fable.

She blinked a little in the full glare of powerful electric lights. And then a tall young man rose from the makeup-shelf at the end of the room, around the corner of an up-ended wardrobe trunk, and came toward them, silently.

Doris's heart gave a queer, unexpected flop. She caught her breath, involuntarily. It was incredible that anyone could be so attractive looking! The manager was presenting the young man to her and explaining suavely the nature of her errand and Craig Cullum was bending over her hand and listening gravely to what his manager was telling him.

But his eyes were clinging to Doris's face and his expression was that of a man suddenly awakened out of abstraction to something powerful, thrilling, dynamic. He tossed a dressing gown out of a deplacated case-seated affair without a back and seated himself, letting it comfortably against the wall.

"Now," he said, with the smile that was beginning to fascinate her, "tell me, please about this pageant. I'll be very happy to help you, if I can."
Under the full concentration of his remarkable eyes, Doris found herself blushing absurdly. The color was creeping up and up, to her diadem and annoyance, and her own eyes were veiled with her curling lashes.

She was acting like a silly school girl, she told herself angrily,—she was distinguished for her poise and coolness.

With a distinct effort, she began to explain about the charity for which the big pageant was designed, the tentative plans for the Greek tableaux on the steps of the State Capitol building, the need for a truly magnificent voice to sing the solo number which would later be taken up by a chorus which she hoped to get from the musical clubs of the city.

All the while that she talked, she was acutely conscious of how tall and slim and graceful her listener was, how broad and strong his shoulders, how black and thick the hair above his handsome olive-tinted face. In the dazzling uniform he wore the day, his little strength was admirably accentuated. She liked his hands that were long and brown and slim, the hands of a sensitive temperament. She liked the suggestion of a wave in the dark hair brushed carelessly back from an admirably proportioned brow. She found his eyes magnetic, disconcerting, a clear, dazzling grey so well set under dark brows and lashes as

$164.00 for Cleaning an Electric Motor

An awful price you will say. Nevertheless it cost an organization $164.00 for cleaning and putting an Electric Motor in proper running order. Of course this is an unusual case but it applies in a moderate way in many instances where firms neglect to have their Industrial Motors cleaned regularly.

A few dollars spent at occasional periods will save many dollars later on in clogged parts and general depreciation of the most valuable parts.

Have your motors cleaned regularly. Phone us now and we'll tell you whether or not they need cleaning. The cost is trivial.

Good News For Ailing Women

Much has been said for and against proprietary medicines by the medical profession. It will interest every woman to know that in a recent country-wide canvass of over 121,000 purchasers of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound as to the results received from its use, the replies received showed that ninety-eight out of every one hundred women had been benefited by its use. Therefore every sick and ailing woman owes it to herself to give this remarkably successful remedy a fair trial.

Different Now Than Then—Adam And Eve Return

(Canadian Press)
NEW YORK, June 4.—Adam and Eve up to date returned here today after spending three days and nights in the Wawayanda mountains of New Jersey in an unsuccessful attempt to prove they were as hardy or even more resourceful than their early ancestors. They were Miss Helen Cole and Charles Carter who were guests at a fashionable New Jersey home party.

They boasted that they could live without the conveniences of modern civilization and Miss Cole said she could catch rabbits for food. They left in their party clothes which in Miss Cole's case were flimsy. When found they were already hungry and ragged.

Postmaster McCarey Renews Friendships

Mr. Joseph McCarey who returned from the South on Saturday after an absence of six months has favorable reports from islanders abroad whom he met in his travels.

In Baltimore, Drs. E. G. McQuaid and J. Bell, formerly of this City and Arthur Irving Bell of Cape Traverso, are very successful dentists. Mr. Hector Campbell McRae, from Pinetia has an extensive business manufacturing Batteries, Switch-boards and all appliances in connection with the same, for use on Cars and Boats. On St. Paul Street in a central business location "McRae Batteries" is a very prominent sign.

In New York Dr. J. J. McPhoe, formerly of St. Margarets, and Dr. Chas. Kennedy, stand very high in their profession and John C. Biffin, Esq., nephew of Mrs. A. J. Biffin, continues the legal business of his late father in the Woolworth Building. The late Mr. James C. McEachen was one of the most successful of our islanders and seventy links in the chain of the west boundary of the Greenwich Estate, thence south to the place of commencement containing an area of ninety-five acres of land a little more or less.
