THE CURRIE CASE

The Wesleyan Makes Authoritative Statements

The St. John Telegraph Protests on Mr. Currie's Behalf.

(From the Halifax Wesleyan.)

The discussion of this case through the columns of the daily press makes it necessary in the interests of the New Brunswick and P E I conference that we should make the following statement of facts:

In the year 1885, D D Currie was found guilty of immorality by the proper court of trial of the Methodist conference at its session in June of that year and, in due course, sentence of expulsion was about to be pronounced by the president. Mr Currie appealed to the court of appeal and urgently entreated the conference to grant him a new trial, that he might avail himself of new evidence that he solemnly affirmed he could procure. Rather than refuse him the opportunity to vindicate himself, the court of appeal ordered a new trial, and the conference strained the discipline of the church in his favor and granted him delay to procure the new evidence; but when the new trial had proceeded almost to its final stage, Mr Currie went before a judge of the supreme court and procured a writ of prohibition restraining the conference from finishing the very thing that with tears he had entreated it to grant. To the amazement of those who had heard his entreaties, the very straining of the discipline which was made in his favor was one of the chief grounds upon which he based his claim for the writ of prohibition. This will show the sincerity of Mr Currie's desire to have the conference weigh his new evidence at that time.

When in November of the same year the conference appeared before the supreme court and sought to have the prohibition removed, that the new trial might proceed, he again interposed to prevent it, and the prohibition was made perpetual.

The conference then found itself under the necessity of starting from the beginning again—laying a new charge, and carrying the case through all its stages once more. From this 2nd trial at which he might have presented his new evidence, Mr. Currie absented himself altogether, declining in any way to recognize it or take any part in it. This will serve to show the confidence he then had in the new evidence he had discovered.

When in June, 1887, this second trial was brought to a close and the conference, sitting at Marysville, was about to act upon the verdict of its court of trial and pronounce sentence of expulsion, Mr. Currie was in Fredericton—three miles distant moving the supreme court to restrain the conference; while the conference itself was momentarily looking for the writ of the court to arrive. When, however, the court hesitated and Mr. Currie perceived that any action it might take would be too late to serve his purpose, instead of being in his place in the conference he lingered about the court in Fredericton, hoping against hope, and satified himself with sending a note, that was read to the conference, urging delay to afford him an opportunity to present new evidence. But evidently he then had more faith in the supreme court than in his new evidence.

For five years the matter rested in silence, and it would have been allowed to continue so, had not Mr. Currie forced it upon public attention under the old plea of a new trial to enable him to present new evidence. In pursuance of this object, he published in July, in the Shelburne Budget, of which he is the editor, an editorial to the effect that the offence of which he had been found guilty, and for which he had been expelled the conference, had first been charged against the Rev. R. S. Crisp, by whom said charge had been diverted to him. On Aug 3 there appeared a long letter from Mr. Currie, in Evening Gazette of St. John, giving an outline of the various things "he will prove if he is permitted to meet the Rev. R. S. Crisp in the presence of the conference." They are summed up under ten heads, and are sufficient, if proved, to cause Mr. Crisp's expulsion from the conference. The letter closes with the following sentence: "Let me ask the men and women of this country if, in view of every sense of justice,——it is not time that the conference of N. B. and P. E. Island cease its antagonism to me and permit me to confront Rev. R. S. Crisp on the floor of the conference, that the question at issue may be thoroughly traversed?" If Mr. Currie could prove these charges against Rev. R. S. Crisp, the conference would be compelled within twenty-four hours to discover some way of relieving Mr. Currie of the penalty unjustly imposed upon him. This Mr. Currie is too well informed not to know.

Mr. Crisp asked the chairman of his district, Rev. Isaac Howie, to take the steps necessary to have the charges investigated.

The opportunity of his whole life came to Mr. Currie of proving the offence for which he is suffering was committed by another man whom he most passionately demands the opportunity to confront, and when the opportunity offered he answers that it is no part of his business to prosecute for the conference. He goes further, and in a letter to the Evening Gazette of St. John of September 15, says that he wants Mr. Crisp as a witness, he does not want to charge him before the courts of the conference—and yet, almost without cessation, he has been charging him in the public press with the most damning offences which would rob his testimony of any value whatever.

Mr. Currie knows that the conference of N. B. and P. E. I. has no power to reopen his case and that it is perfectly safe for him to make the demand which he repeats with varied reiteration. When in the courts of the country a person has been found guilty of a crime and he has carried the case through all the courts that the government has provided and has been finally sentenced and is enduring the penalty of the crime, it is in vain for him to appeal to the courts to re-open his case. He may successfully appeal to the government, but it is a waste of time to demand of the courts that the case should be re-opened. It may serve the purpose of misleading the uninformed. If, however, the person should be able to go before a competent court and show that the crime, for which he is suffering, was committed by another, then the way of escape is opened through the power that created the courts. Now, Mr Currie knows that the conference of N. B. and P. E. I. has no power to do aught but administer the discipline in a case like his. It did that, heard all his witnesses and gave its decision and has no further functions in the matter.

If the discipline or the courts under it wronged Mr. Currie and he can show that to the satisfaction of the general conference which conferred upon the conference of N. B. and P. E. Island jurisdiction in the case, then general legislation could easily be had. That is not, however, the course upon which he ventures.

The courts of the conference are open, however, and if he can prove the charge he makes, to use his own statement, that he is now suffering for the immorality of Rev. R. S. Crisp, who has confessed that he committed the crime for which the conference punished him, then the conference will not need any urging to do its duty and approach the competent authority to have his name cleansed and himself re-instated.

To sum up this statement, which, after prolonged silence, under most trying circumstances, we are compelled in the interests of the conference of N. B. and P. E. I. to make, we have shown (1) Mr. Currie's case passed through all the courts of the conference. (2) He had every opportunity to present all his evidence. (3) When the conference strained the discipline to give him the opportunity to present new evidence he made its very indulgence a ground upon which to base an application to the supreme court of N. B. to prohibit the conference from giving him the chance to present the very new evidence he asked the opportunity to offer. (4) When in spite of his own opposition there came the opportunity, through an entirely new trial, he ignored it altogether. (5) And now, once more, he has discovered new evidence, and when the way is opened up for him to utilize it for his own relief, he simply offers a technical excuse for not taking it.

The St. John Telegraph refused to publish the above article, advance copies of which were sent to the daily press on behalf of the Methodist Conference, declaring it to be a needless reiteration of charges. It says:—

To our mind the paramount question is whether Mr. Crisp is innocent or guilty. Why then should the conference seek thus by wholesale to discredit in advance the man making the charge?

* * * * * *

The natural expectation of most readers when these statements were published was that Mr. Crisp would have called his accuser promptly to account in the courts of law, either in an action for criminal libel or for civil damages. * * * But to the surprise of Mr. Crisp's friends, and those of his accuser alike, Mr. Crisp has not thus responded to the challenge. He has, however, denied the charges, after some delay, and he has asked an investigation by the body to which he belongs.

It is not surprising that Mr. Currie did not choose to appear there as Mr. Crisp's accuser. Common ideas of justice and fair play would suggest that a fair court for trial of differences between men must be a court where both can appear on equal terms. No fair minded person would say that in the church court Mr. Currie and Mr. Crisp could now meet on such terms. Mr. Currie has been expelled; he cannot make a charge in person, or even give evidence to sustain the charge made by another in the body of which Mr. Crisp has been and is a member. These facts lend additional force to the contention that Mr. Crisp should have met his accuser face to face before a judge of the land and a jury of their peers to settle the question whether the minister is guilty or not guilty of the shocking charges against him, and whether his accuser is telling the truth or formulating most vile and slanderous falsehoods.

We need not say that we have the highest respect for the influential body which the controversy so intimately concerns. But we do feel that this is not a good time for any one to strike again at a man who is down, long punished for a crime, but still claiming, and as some at least believe justly claiming, to be innocent. What if he is innocent? What if the other is guilty?
