BARBARA PLANS RETRENCHMENT

CHAPTER LXXXVI. I meant what I said to Lorraine Norton when I met her in the park; that I should have made it my business to know where so much money came from; how so young a man as Neil could make enough to afford such luxuries. Yet when I had tried to find out, I had accomplished nothing, only angered Neil.

Suddenly there came to me the murmured sentence I overheard when father was leaving us, and had warned me to try and persuade Neil to go slowly. "A house of cards!" "Who else had used that same expression? Why Mr. Frederick, of course. He had said he was afraid Neil was building 'A house of cards' that afternoon we drove in the park, and had our first talk together. Lorraine insisted upon walking home with me. She was really distressed and plainly showed it. "You are not to blame," she repeated, when she finally left me. "And remember I know you are not and will be just the same friend no matter what people say. I will do all I can for Neil too. I shan't allow anyone to malign him when I am around."

"Thank you Lorraine. That makes two." "What are you talking about, what makes two?" "Nothing—I was talking to myself. Pardon me." I meant it made two real friends I still had, Lorraine and Frederick. I think I perhaps might have felt all that had happened more even than I did had I been the sort of woman who has many intimates. I wasn't. Most of my friends were out of the city, so I heard little gossip, as while I had many calling acquaintances, Lorraine was almost my only intimate friend.

Ought we not to give up our beautiful home? Had we the right to live in it? Would Neil consent to retrench to an extent that would amount to anything? I walked back and forth, from room to room, restless, uneasy, waiting dinner time to come so that I might see Neil, talk to him, and at the same time dread to again accuse him of being— not quite fair in his business methods.

"Perhaps we will rent the house," I said to myself; then took pencil and paper. I would make a list of everything we owned. It might be necessary some day. I would have it ready. It would at least keep me so busy I couldn't think.

I knew we owed many bills, I had fingered a sheet of them when I was looking for a pad to use for the inventory I was going to commence. Neil never talked in small sums, he seldom paid small bills, unless they happened to be at some place, we weren't accustomed to trade, and not always then. I ran them through. I saw that the total amount was very large. I must speak to Neil about them, and we must not run any more. So I laid them on top of the desk. If they were in plain sight I would not forget them.

Then I went up stairs—I would commence the inventory with my own room. I became so engrossed in my task that time passed unheeded. Each article I put down held some association. I lingered over many, admiring them, wondering if the time ever came when others had them if they would appreciate their beauty as I did.

"Where are you, Bab?" Neil called the first intimation I had that he was at home. "Up stairs, I'm come right down." Neil was in the library pouring himself a drink from a bottle in the

WHAT MANNER OF MAN IS LENINE

Lenine is by no means an easy man to know, writes a correspondent of the London Times who has met him. For years he has enveloped himself in a veil of mystery—a policy dictated as much by personal inclination as by political motives, and outside his own small circle of disciples and admirers there are not only very few Russians who may be said to know him intimately, but even comparatively few who have ever seen him. If, therefore, he appears to the average Englishman as a red-shirted, high-booted pirate chief, the fault is chiefly of his own making. His all-absorbing passion is the gospel of world-revolution. Born at Simbirsk on April 10, 1870, Vladimir Ilich Ulianoff, alias "Lenine," "Ilich," "Iln," "Tylin," is a hereditary noble, and the son of a State Councillor. His mother had a small estate in the Kazan Government, and after her husband's death was in receipt of a State pension. Lenine's two sisters and his brother Dmitri were at one time all under police supervision, while his brother Alexander was executed in 1887 for complicity in a terrorist plot against the life of Alexander III. Brought up in the Orthodox Faith, Lenine is one of the few genuine Russians to be found among the Bolshevik leaders. After completing his course at the Simbirsk Gymnasium in 1887, he entered the Kazan University, only to be expelled and banished from Kazan a few months later for participating in an anti-Government student riot.

THE LIMERICK STRIKE

LIMERICK, April 23.—The five hundred strikers, who went outside the military limits of the city, yesterday, and who were not permitted to return over the Sarsfield bridge, last evening because they would not show military permits, spent the night on the bridge and resumed their demonstrations this morning. The soldiers were still obdurate and would not permit the strikers to cross the bridge. Up to noon today there had been no clashes between the opposing forces. The break of day found a worn and hollow-eyed crowd of men and women shivering in the chilly weather. They were taken to cottages on the Clare side of the River Shannon and given breakfast by friends and sympathizers. Some of the older ones had been provided with beds during the night on cottages floors, but most of the crowd spent the night in the open. The attitude of "passive resistance" was continued during the night by the strikers. The military maintained a strict guard, with large forces of sentries, and the guns in the armored tank were fully manned. The plan of the strike leaders is to continue to demand entrance into the city without passes in the hope that the military will finally yield and thus bring the pass system to an end. If this plan fails, the leaders say they have other plans to try tonight or tomorrow. The "treasury notes" issued by the labor council appeared in Limerick today. The notes which will be used in the purchase of food, it was announced, will be redeemed in regular money once a week. Mayor O'Mara came from his home, four miles away, and conferred with the leading members of the clergy near the Limerick end of the bridge. It is understood he made a formal protest to the commander and asked that the people be allowed to enter but his appeal was in vain. The crowds gathered at the Limerick end of the bridge, but there was no disorder. Some of the marchers, tired out, were grouped under the trees at the Clare end of the bridge, and were singing songs, including the Red Flag. The strikers said they would stay all night and all of today, if necessary. Among them are many women, who say they will stay as long as the men. LIMERICK, April 23. (By the A.P.)—The entire town of Limerick was set laughing this afternoon over the manner in which the strikers who on Monday afternoon attended a hurling contest across the river and in the evening were refused permission to return home over the Sarsfield bridge outwitted the military and got home. Marching from the Clare end of the bridge to a long pavement, they boarded a train for Limerick. When the station was reached four persons left the cars and tried to pass the soldiers at the gate. While the argument was proceeding, the other passengers, who had remained concealed in the train, darted for other doors and windows and scattered in every direction. The guard was unable to halt them, and they all soon were home. The strike leaders promise further developments, but it is believed nothing will be done until the Irish Labor Congress leaders arrive from London. The time for their arrival is being kept secret.

Honest and Intellectual

Is Lenine a genius? Many Russians have denied it, and certainly there is nothing in his personal appearance to suggest even faintly a resemblance to the superman. Short of stature, rather plump with short, thick neck, broad shoulders rounded, red face, high intellectual forehead, bald head, nose slightly turned up, brownish moustache, and short, stubby beard, he looks at the first glance more like a provincial grocer than a leader of men. And yet, on second thoughts, there is something in those steady grey eyes that arrests the attention, something in that quizzing, half-contemptuous half-smiling look which speaks of boundless self-confidence and conscious superiority. His knowledge of languages is above the average. He is a proficient German scholar, while he writes and speaks English with tolerable accuracy. He is certainly by far the greatest intellectual force which the Russian Revolution has yet brought to light. It is not, however, to his intellectual powers that he owes his predominant position inside his own party. The almost fanatical respect with which he is regarded by the men who are at least as jealous of each other as politicians in other countries, is due to other qualities than mere intellectual capacity. Chief of these are his iron courage, his grim, relentless determination, and his complete lack of all self-interest.

JUST FOR FUN

"Charles," said a school teacher, "what are the effects of heat and cold?" "Heat expands and cold contracts," answered Charles promptly. "Now give some examples." "In summer the days are long, and in winter very short."—Selected. Minard's Liniment Cures Colds, Etc.

leagues as the one man who is above suspicion. To Lenine the stories of Bolshevik orgies and carousals have no relation. His own worldly needs are more than frugal, and his personal budget is probably the most modest of all the Bolshevik Commissioners. Dishonest, treacherous, guilty of the worst forms of secret diplomacy as the Bolsheviks have been in all their public dealings, Lenine himself on the rare occasions on which he has consented to see a foreign journalist or a foreign official, has always been extraordinarily frank. Bolshevism's Driving Power

Where Trotsky and other Bolsheviks have pursued their enemies with a bitter, personal hatred, Lenine in certain cases, where the individual has been of little account, has even been guilty of acts of clemency. But where Trotsky might shrink through fear of the consequences from shooting 10,000 men in cold blood, Lenine although he is not one of the chief advocates of the terror, would assuredly not hesitate if he thought such an action were essential to the advancement of his cause. No one who has ever been present at a Bolshevik Congress can have any doubts as to the real driving power behind the Bolshevik movement. In the numerous political crises through which the Bolsheviks have passed during their 18 months' tenure of the Russian political stage, Lenine's time and again has averted the most inevitable disaster and restored the fallen fortunes of a party that had temporarily lost both its head and its heart. In debate he is an unrivalled dialectician, facing his opponents with an unruffled temper which is provokingly irritating in its serenity.

The Complete Socialist

In 1891, however, we find him attending the University of Petrograd where he studied law and economics. In 1895 he made his first journey abroad to Germany, returning in the same year to Petrograd, where he was again arrested on account of his Socialist activities. On this occasion he was exiled for three years to the village of Sushenskoe, in Eastern Siberia, being forbidden to reside in any of the big cities, factory centres or university towns of Russia. After his release in 1900 he again went abroad. From this period begins his real career as a Socialist leader, and the next 17 years are a long cycle of Socialist Congresses abroad, culminating in the Zimmerwald Conference of 1915, and his dramatic return to Russia in the notorious "sealed" wagon. During this period he visited many countries, including England, and made the acquaintance of all the revolutionary elements in Europe. His favorite residence however was at Poronin, in Galicia from which point of vantage he was able to maintain a close contact with the revolutionary movement in Russia.

His Private Virtues

To him Capital is the Fiend incarnate, and with such an enemy he neither gives nor asks for mercy. Yet as an individual he is not without certain virtues. In the many attacks, both justified and unjustified, which have been made against him, no breath of scandal has ever touched his private life. He is married—according to all accounts singularly happily married—and, in a country where corruption has now reached its apogee, he stands out head and shoulders above all his colleagues.

WOMAN SUFFERED 12 YEARS

Finally Made Well by Taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Emmitsburg, Md.—"I suffered for twelve or fifteen years, and was treated by a physician, but got little relief. I saw an advertisement of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound in my newspaper, so I thought I would try it, and it did me more good than all the doctor's medicine. I am a farmer's wife and do my housework all the time, and I am better now than I have been for years. I am never without Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound in my house and have recommended it to several of my friends. You are perfectly correct to publish my letter for the good it may do other women."—Mrs. ETTIE WARREN, Emmitsburg, Md.

Backache and nervousness are symptoms of nature's warnings, which indicate a functional disturbance or an unhealthy condition which often develops into a more serious ailment. Women in this condition should not continue to drag along without help, but welcome to Mrs. Warren's experience, and try this famous root and herb remedy, Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound—and for special advice write to Lydia E. Pinkham Med. Co., Lynn, Mass.
