Economy and Convenience in the new Fairbanks Globe Valve

The new Fairbanks Globe Valve has a disc holder that can be replaced quickly and easily which means a decided saving of time and money.

The improvement in design of this valve has been made without sacrificing any of the features that have made Fairbanks Globe Valves famous for their trouble-free service and long life—the best of bronze, more threads always engaged in the bonnet, rounded corners to prevent lodging of sediment and to ensure perfect contact.

NOTICE
Owners and Operators of Motor Vehicles

Please take notice that registrations and operator's licenses issued during 1927 expired on 30th April, 1928.

Warning is hereby given that licenses will be cancelled for the following reasons:

1. Operating a motor vehicle while under the influence of liquor.
2. Reckless and furious driving.
3. Passing at high speed a stationary or moving vehicle.
4. Swerving to the left when turning a corner.
5. Passing a vehicle travelling in the same direction when view in front is not clear for at least fifty yards.
6. Passing a car when nearing the top of a hill.
7. Failure to give half the road to a passing vehicle.
8. Failure to stop when signalled by an Inspector under the Motor Vehicle Act.

The public will take notice that the provisions of Section 69 of the Motor Vehicle Act will be strictly enforced. For guidance of all concerned the Section is printed hereunder:

Sec. 69. In the event of any person holding a chauffeur's or an operator's license contravening any of the provisions of this Act by reason of reckless or negligent driving or by reason of the use of intoxicants or for any other reason becoming, in the opinion of the Secretary, unfit to act as a chauffeur or operator, the Secretary shall upon proof to his satisfaction or the fact or existence of such contravention or unfitness and without the necessity of holding any formal or public or other hearing, either cancel the license of such chauffeur or operator absolutely or suspend the same and all the rights of the licensee thereunder for such period as the Secretary may think fit. In the event of cancellation of license all the rights of the licensee thereunder shall forthwith abate and cease absolutely.

"Jealous Hearts"
 By
MILDRED BARBOUR

THE SECOND SUMMONS

It was Millicent herself who answered the telephone call by which Elinor summoned Tony. Old Jasco had misunderstood the operator and thought that she was asking for Mrs. Anthony Deering, instead of Mrs. Deering.

Millicent's heart pounded madly while she waited for the connection to be put through. It seemed to her eternities since she had heard the voice of her foster-sister. She still loved Elinor, despite herself. Elinor's cool drawl, when it came, exhibited surprise.

"Oh, hello, Millicent, old dear! However are you?" And scarcely waiting to be told, she added: "Where's Tony? I want to speak to him."

The color rushed into Millicent's pale cheeks. She caught her breath; the joy died out of her voice: "I'll send for him," she said quietly.

"Good girl. Tell him to hurry. I'm in a frightful jam."

Very slowly, Millicent laid down the receiver. Her lips formed themselves into a bitter line. But she went into the hall and summoned Tony, just as he was going out of the door on his way to the stables.

"Elinor is on the wire," she said tonelessly. "She wishes to speak to you."

He looked at her for a moment, without word. Her face was like a mask. He shrugged.

"Thank you," was all he said, as he went into the library and closed the door behind him.

Millicent stood where he had left her in the hall. She was deadly pale and her eyes burned like fire. Her hands were clenched and she breathed hard, as though she had been running.

She was still standing there, a few minutes later, when Tony opened the door and called:

"Millicent, do you want to talk to Elinor?"

She answered quietly: "No. Tell her I'll wait."

Her throat seemed to be closing. She couldn't have talked to Elinor, at that moment, if her life had depended on it.

A moment later, as she was slowly mounting the stairs, Tony came out of the library and stood in the hall, looking up at her.

"I'll have to go to New York tonight. Elinor is in some sort of trouble. She couldn't tell me over the telephone." He hesitated and added, with an effort at carelessness: "Care to come along?"

Millicent shook her head, not trusting herself to speak. He noted her dry, burning eyes, her ghastly pallor, and he frowned.

"Aren't you feeling well?"

"I'm quite all right, thank you."

He hesitated again.

"Perhaps a change—the trip to New York—might do you good."

She cried, shrilly, hysterically: "I tell you, I'm quite all right!"

Her voice broke, and she sped up the stairs, not once looking back, although he called to her several times.

He stared after her, perplexed. He was thinking that she must be really ill; he had never known her to be so unstrung before. But she had been changing for months; ever since their marriage, in fact. The gay, pleasant companion of a few years ago had given place to a silent and irritable wife.

Curiously enough, the fact that she was jealous of Elinor never crossed his mind. His love for Elinor was too deeply buried in his heart, too carefully guarded from others, for him to suspect that Millicent had guessed his secret. The stolen letter episode had long since passed from his mind; he had dismissed it as one of those inexplicable incidents by which Man in general is destined to be perplexed by the action of Woman.

When the car came to take him to the train, Millicent bade him a sad and indifferent good-by, and he went off in something of a huff, pitying himself because he had such a capricious wife. And Millicent, after humming a gay little tune for the benefit of Colonel Deering and the servants, ran upstairs and, from the west windows, watched the car until it was out of sight.

"You were horrid—everything a man detests—and you've let him go to Elinor, who'll love and allure and flatter and sweet," she thought despairingly.

It was as if some demon rode her these days when she was with Tony. She was carried away by the force of primitive impulses that were too strong for her to resist. She knew she was driving him farther and farther from her at the very time when she should be doing all in her power to win him from Elinor.

"What's the use?" she asked herself, with a shrug. "It's too late now. He's always belonged to Elinor; never to me!"

Tony reached New York the following morning.

Pep Makes Winners of Us All

THE race is on! The start is even. The finish—that is where pep tells. Healthy, peppy, youthful vigor must win in the race of life.

Eat Pep for breakfast these mornings. Know the delight of its energizing and health-giving elements. Pep will pep you up for the whole day.

For Pep gives pep. Crisp, whole-wheat flakes. Ready to eat. Rich in nature's own vitamins and mineral salts. A package just packed with health. With just enough bran, too, to make it mildly laxative and help prevent constipation.

Pep up the whole family with Pep. For breakfast, lunch or dinner. Serve with milk or cream. Add a little honey or fresh fruits for variety. Pears, prunes, bananas or raisins are especially delicious and healthful. Your grocer has Pep.

LAWYERS WOULD EXCLUDE INDIGENT IMMIGRANT

OTTAWA, May 16.—Commenting on the proposal of the Bermundsey Board of poor law Guardians to spend £118 in sending to Canada a Bermundsey shoemaker, his wife and family who are unemployed, the minister of immigration to-day told the star "charity-aided immigrants are not admissible to Canada; it is therefore evident, from the information contained in the communication, that this shoemaker and his family cannot be admitted."

The question of assisted passage does not enter into this case as the man is not a farm laborer or farmer coming to Canada to settle on the land. Therefore he and his family can only be considered as immigrants.

The federal immigration regulations are quite explicit on the point of excluding charity-aided immigrants. If the shoemaker means to sustain himself and family, and could give satisfactory assurances that he could obtain employment and earn sufficient to maintain himself and family after their arrival in Canada he would be admitted.

Peters Road And Vicinity

Farmers are having their fertilizers hauled in readiness for the season's use in the growth of certified seed potatoes, table stock and other crops requiring the needed impetus. Presumably the weather-man has a rather scant supply of "Ultra Violet" rays, and we are being treated to somewhat cool, dark and gloomy days. Rays of any kind would be welcome.

Among the recent arrivals at Peters Road from the neighboring Republic are: Mr. Willard McLean of Watertown, Mass., and Miss Stella Jenkins, of Newton Centre, Mass. They are glad to again imbibe the refreshing freedom of their native air, with all its invigorating qualities.

From Halifax, N. S., we are pleased to note the arrival of Mrs. A. M. Johnston to her home at Peters Rd. after spending the winter months with her daughter and family, Mr. and Mrs. Hugh McPhee.

Rev. D. V. O'Meara, Pastor of the Murray Harbor North and Peters Rd. Presbyterian Congregation, has returned to his charge after a short vacation spent on the mainland.

Miss Genevieve McCormac, teacher at Peters Rd., Mr. C. J. McLean, Teacher at Cambridge, and Mr. Archie Lanigan, Teacher at St. Mary's Road, attended the Teachers' Convention recently held in the city.

We congratulate our esteemed citizen, Mr. Harry Butler, on his appointment to the important position of Superintendent of Roads for a section of Kings County.

Mr. Butler has already given his territory much attention.

The fishermen of our Southern and Eastern coasts report lobsters, quite plentiful, which is highly encouraging in the face of so much outlay and hard work.

Mr. Joseph G. Jenkins, having sold one of his horses, has purchased another from Mr. James A. Dawson, Murray River. We are not yet informed as to the "speeding" qualities of this latest acquisition, but Mr. Jenkins likes a speedy one.

With regard to the facilities of the Murray Harbor, R. R. if the standardizing of the same can not be done now, surely the request of Mr. S. A. Macdonald, Pres. Board of Trade, Ch'town could be acceded to, and a light passenger service as outlined by Mr. Macdonald given on this important branch until the "fulness of the time" has come for its standardizing.

Mr. J. B. Finlayson, proprietor of Point Pleasant Mills, has about completed the bulk of his work in sawing lumber, boards, shingles and the many accessories of the lobster fishermen's traps, beside the operation of his planing mill, a machine of much utility in the preparation of finished lumber.

Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Campbell, and Mr. and Mrs. Harry Davidson and family, motored from the city recently visiting relatives and friends in Peters Rd., Alliston and Cambridge.

MAINE TO STUDY PRODUCTION IN P. E. ISLAND

AUGUSTA, Me., May 16.—Governor Ralph O. Brewster and executive council have passed an order enabling the state department of agriculture to send a representative to Prince Edward Island and other points of eastern Canada to inquire into the cost of producing seed or table stock potatoes, in event such information may be deemed helpful in the course of the forthcoming potato investigation by the United States tariff commission.

The suggestion that information or producing costs of Canadian potatoes as well as Maine potatoes might be of value in the Commission's investigation was made by Frank P. Washburn, state commissioner of agriculture. Commissioner Washburn explained to the Governor and council that his department could collect such information within the state but had no authority to go outside its borders. He requested such authorization with the understanding that it would be used only in the case there was need for further information.

The order passed by the Governor and council provided that expenses for the proposed inquiry should be paid from the 1928 balance for seed certification.
