ANYTHING but LOVE by JANET DORAN

CHAPTER XXIII
Your job is in the dye-chemical department. Miss Whitaker, Kenricks explained briskly after Mr. Garrett had gone back to his office. "You'll work under Mr. Sands here, he'll tell you what to do." He took out another printed form, and handed it to the office girl.

SCOTT'S EMULSION

THE COOK'S CORNER

ROLY-POLIES (SLOVAF RECIPE)

1-2 lb. butter
1 lb. sifted flour
1 whole egg
3 egg yolks
1 tablespoon sugar
1 tablespoon shortening
Pinch salt
Method: Rub the butter and shortening into the flour, sifted with the salt and sugar. As you notice most of the foreign recipes give their amounts in weight. One cup of butter is one-half pound, and four cups of flour weighs one pound, so if you prefer to measure with a cup, that is what you'll need.

CAKE IN PLACE OF BUTTER

To go back to Dutch recipes. In Holland they seldom use butter on their bread for breakfast or for lunch. Instead, they slice this cake very thin and eat it on slices of bread.

ONTBITKOEK

(Dutch Breakfast Cake)
4 cups flour
1 cup brown sugar
2 teaspoons baking powder
1-4 tea spoon ground cloves
1 teaspoon cinnamon
1 teaspoon allspice
1 teaspoon ground ginger
1 cup chopped mixed peel
1 cup molasses
1 cup milk.

Method: Sift all the dry ingredients and then add the chopped peel. Add the milk and molasses slowly and mix well. Turn into a well greased loaf pan and bake in a slow oven, 325 deg. F., for about one hour or a little longer. Test it at the end of the hour.

Woman Has Her Place in Business Dorothy Dix

American Women Will Have to Guard Against Movement That is Sweeping Germany and Italy if They Hold Ground Gained

There is no denying that just now there is a strong popular reaction against women in the professions and in business, and that the door of opportunity, which so many women fought to push open for their sex, is being closed to them again. Germany and Italy have boldly shooed women back into the kitchen and the nursery. In America the woman who works outside of her home is being blamed for everything that is wrong from the depression up and down and furnishes the alibi for every Weary Willie who would rather loaf than work.

Well, what about it? Suppose the woman doctor has patients who would have to go to a man doctor if she were not practicing medicine. Suppose the woman lawyer has clients that some man would have but for her. Suppose she fills the places behind counters and in offices that were once filled exclusively by young men. Suppose even rich girls who do not need the money hold down jobs that poor men with families to support do need. What then?

Roughly speaking, 50 per cent of the population are women. They own property. They pay taxes. They are educated. Are they to be deprived of the chance to make an honest living and to exercise their talents just because they have the handicap of having been born workmen?

Perish the thought. Even to entertain it for a minute is just like going back to the Dark Ages when women were nothing but the playthings or the slaves of men and when a learned ecclesiastical body debated long and bitterly over the question of whether they even had souls.

Those who contend that every job with a pay envelope attached to it is the sole prerogative of men go upon the biting assumption that no woman has any real need to earn money, and that heaven automatically provides every girl with a father who is amply able to support her and bestows upon her a rich and indulgent husband. Unhappily this fairy tale existence has not been the lot of one working girl out of a hundred thousand.

The reason Sadie stands behind a counter all day, or pounds a typewriter, or runs a sewing machine in a factory is not because she is so strangely constituted that she prefers to spend her days toiling rather than in amusing herself, or because she prefers hard-earned money to easy money. It is because if she does not work neither will she eat, nor will her father and mother and little sisters and brothers. It is the thin pay envelopes of millions of working girls that keep their families off the bread line.

Such being the case—and none can dispute it—why hasn't Sadie the same human right to earn a living for herself and her family that her brother has? Certainly it is better for the family because girls notoriously give far more of their earnings to maintain the home than boys do, and certainly it is far better for Sadie to be able to make an honest living by the work of her hands than it is for her to have to get it in what is euphemistically called the easiest way.

But, say those who object to women following any gainful occupation, men have families to support. Women have nobody but themselves. Haven't they? In a close association with working women that goes over forty years I have never known but one who was not supporting her old parents, or little brothers and sisters, or sending nieces and nephews through college; or making the bread and butter that her own children ate; or taking care of a sick or no-account husband. Needy hands reach out for a woman's pocketbook just as often as they do for a man's, and it is the woman's pocketbook that opens to them oftenest.

The business girl kills the goose that lays the golden wedding ring content those who would have every young woman sit at home and suck her thumb while waiting for something in trousers to come along and ask her to go to the altar with him. Young men can't marry as early as they used to because women have all the good jobs. Well, even if that were true, the breaks are even because in the old days before girls were self-supporting young men couldn't marry because they had their sisters hanging around their necks. The parasite sister was a liability. The sister with a job is an asset.

Then comes the final indictment of the working woman. She works because she likes to work outside the home. She works because she wants more money to spend on luxuries. Well, what of that? Why hasn't a woman as much right as a man to do the kind of work she likes to do and for which she has a gift? And what crime is there in her spending her money as she chooses? Nobody thinks a boy should be an idler because he doesn't need to work. Nobody admires a man tightwad. So why shouldn't the woman who makes money spend her money on the luxury trades which keep business going?

Fifty per cent of the population are women. What justice is there in keeping them from following gainful occupations? Think it over before you berate the business woman. DOROTHY DIX.

The Bride Was Charming

Brides always are. But will she be as radiant a year from now? Is her marriage to be a glorious adventure or a hopeless failure? Will she always be her husband's pal, doing her share to keep their home happy?

If she is wise she will take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound at the first sign of "nerves" or rundown condition. 700,000 wives can tell her how much it helps them. Liquid and Tablets.

Mrs. E. R. Donaldson, 49 McGill St., Hawkesbury, Ontario, says: "Before my baby was born I was thin, tired and nervous. As soon as I began taking your wonderful Vegetable Compound I could feel myself getting stronger."

The HOUSEWIFE and HER ACTIVITIES

A HOLY STRAIN

There are, in this loud stunning tide Of human care and crime, With whom the melodies abide Of the everlasting chime; Who carry music in their heart Through dusky lane and wrangling mart, Plying their daily task with busier feet Because their secret souls a holy strain repeat. —J. KEBBLE.

MUSICAL SHOES

Here is a new idea for evening shoes. A tiny silver bell will make a pleasant sound as milady moves. Or if she prefers her music to be seen rather than heard, she may wear a bar of her pet dance tune painted across the toe! Dress materials are being widely used for shoes, so that they may exactly match the gown.

VELVET FOR 1937

Velvet will be the material for 1937. The most popular colours will be red, blue, and purple. Ermine will be favored as a fur. Black velvet will be trimmed with ermine fur.

RISE TO MUSIC

The very latest alarm clock does not shatter our ears on rising. Instead it plays a cheery tune. You may choose one out of over a hundred popular songs!

There is still time to order bulbs, and you can plant them as late as December if the ground is not frozen solidly.

SOUTH WINDOW FOR PLANTS

Flowering plants growing in the house are likely to suffer from lack of light unless they are placed in a south window. Many foliage plants will do well in the light of north or east windows, but few flowering plants will thrive there. Temperatures should vary day and night, just as they do outdoors; 70 degrees in the daytime and 50 degrees at night are usually all right.

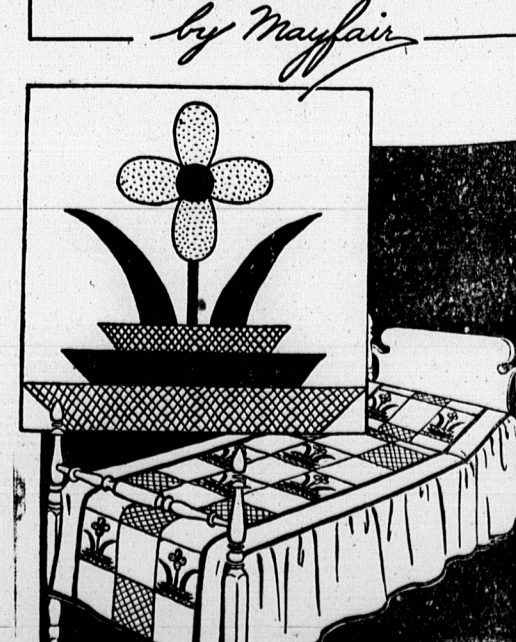

CREAMED GREENS

Did you ever serve lettuce watercress creamed as a vegetable to embellish the meat course? Lettuce makes a mild and decidedly unusual dish—boiled lightly salted water, drained, chopped coarsely and enriched by a light and conservatively used cream sauce. And watercress, cooked the same way, conceals in its rich green mantle a nature piquant and spicy enough to brighten any menu.
