MIRACLE BILL SAYS I was over to the library in town yesterday. I wanted to find out something about how fast calves grow. The lady librarian was mighty nice—she hunted up the information for me out of one of the feed books. Well, it seems that ordinary, everyday calves with the usual kind of feed, don't grow more'n around a pound a day on the average. A good calf will gain, maybe, a pound and a half. It depends on the breed and the strain. That made me feel pretty good. My calves don't come from any extra good strain, but one of 'em has gained over a pound and three quarters a day—that's in six months—and the other two pounds a day, in eight months. I guess you know why that is—yes, I'm bringing 'em up on Oglivie "Miracle" Calf Meal. Both of those critters look like yearlings already. I got photographs made of 'em to show people when I tell how good "Miracle" Calf Meal is.
