TO PERPETUATE CANADIAN LEGION
(Canadian Press)
REGINA, Sask., Nov. 20.—Perpetuation of the Canadian Legion as a vital force in the national life of Canada after the last of the Great War veterans have passed away is a subject that will arouse no little controversy at the coming convention of the Canadian Legion to be held here from Nov. 25 to 28. This subject was before the last dominion convention at Saint John, N. B., but it was shelved for a year's consideration by the branches, and it appears on the agenda as a notice of motion from the 1928 gathering.

The notice of motion provides for two methods of perpetuating the legion. The first is by the acceptance into active membership, on reaching the age of 21 of all sons of men who served in the Allied forces during the war. This plan is favored by many of the legion branches as a means of continuing the organization after the present membership has answered the last call.

The other plan included in the notice of motion provides for the nomination of successors. By this plan, every active member would have the privilege of nominating in his will, a successor to take his place in the ranks of the Legion after he dies. This would enable men who are unmarried or without children to have a share in the legion of the future.

It is known, however, there is considerable opposition to these plans at the present time, many branches of the legion being of the opinion they are premature, and it would be a wiser policy to wait for a few years before adopting any policy of widening out the organization.

An important Canadian question about to come under consideration here is the appointment of a new Archbishop of Regina.

Called Upon To Take Action

The following comment is from the Summerside Journal of recent date: "For some time past this paper has drawn attention to the conditions pertaining to the prisoners in Prince County Jail. It will be remembered that it was openly charged that the prisoners being taken to Dorchester Penitentiary last June were intoxicated. This was followed by another report that some of the prisoners employed on road work some time later had managed to get intoxicated and that a feature of this episode was a fight. Now comes a further rumor that on Tuesday last several of the prisoners confined in the jail were under the influence of liquor and had to be looked after by the Sheriff, who by the way is also prohibition pros-ecutor. We are not in a position to hold an investigation into this matter but if these reports are true something definite should be done to prevent such a disgraceful state of affairs. It is true that following the incendiary fire in the jail last June some iron lattice work contrivances were placed around the windows at the south side of the jail. They bear somewhat a resemblance to chicken coops or fox pens as they have no roof but evidently are not proof against the invading "spirits of the outside world."

May Seek To Regain Gibraltar

The Captain-General lost his position for making this speech as an official. This was Primo de Rivera's first political speech.

When Primo de Rivera became dictator in 1923, no one remembered the action of the former Captain-General at Cadiz. Spain always has had a secret desire to get Gibraltar back, and it is expected the tunnel project will be an excuse to re-open the subject. It is obvious that if the Premier made an arrangement to get Gibraltar back, it would be an achievement that Spain never would forget.

A retrenchment program has been announced for Spain, and it is doubted that it would spend money on the tunnel for years. It is not expected that Britain would part with Gibraltar, but if the tunnel leads to the re-opening of negotiations by which Spain would regain possession on the basis of a lease for 100 to 500 years, possibly with a renewal option, there would be great rejoicing here.

DOCTOR'S DARING EXPERIMENT

(British United Press)
BERLIN, Nov. 20.—The daring experiment of a doctor, who passed a sound or tube into his own heart through an incision in the shoulder, is reported in the latest issue of the Clinical Weekly, one of the leading German medical papers. The success of the experiment is believed to be the first step towards a new treatment for urgent cases, such as sometimes follow violent shocks in which the life of the patient depends upon a rapid and direct administration of stimulants to the heart.

For the purpose of his experiment, Dr. Forsmann, who is assistant surgeon at the hospital at Eberswald, used a well oiled and carefully sterilized elastic tube a little more than two feet in length. First he made a trial with a human corpse, following the progress of the "sound" by means of an X-ray apparatus.

This having proven satisfactory, he made an incision in the wall of the vein of his own left shoulder and inserted tubes, which he carefully pushed forward below the collarbone to the next vein, and then through the vena cava (the large vein which transmits the blood of the head and upper extremities) into the right side of the heart. While he was doing this his only unusual sensations were a feeling of warmth in the region of the collarbone and an inclination to cough.

Finally, with the end of the "sound" in his heart, he walked from the operating theatre to the x-ray room, climbing a flight of stairs on the way. This remarkable operation, however, had no injurious consequences whatsoever, and Dr. Forsmann has since used it with at least temporary success in a case of peritoneal inflammation in which the patient was on the point of death.

In this instance the tube remained in the heart for 6 1/2 hours, with out obvious prejudicial effect either there or in the vein. The doctor claims that his method of cardiac administration is at any rate preferable to that, sometimes employed, of opening up the chest and cutting through the muscle of the heart.

Governor Smith

Charles Douglas Smith was born in 1762. He entered the army in the Dragoons raised by Lord Sheffield, and was promoted to the rank of lieutenant colonel. He was Governor of Prince Edward Island between the years 1813 and 1824. Governor Smith has been described as a man of considerable ability and immense energy, yet his arbitrary and despotic temperament brought him into conflict with the Legislature which he called only four times during his ten years in office; hence his term of governorship has never been regarded as outstanding. In fact the autocratic attitude of the Governor was the cause of continual constitutional strife.

"In the history of Prince Edward Island," the investigator writes, "I found that there was a daughter who married Ambrose Lane, and another who married Charles Carmichael, also a son, Henry, who threw a stone through the window when the Legislature was sitting. He was a naval officer, and in spite of his being still in his teens his father gave him a lucrative post above the heads of more suitable people.

In the biography of Sir Sidney Smith by Hon. E. Howard, Charles Douglas Smith is described as 'still living (1839) enjoying his well-earned honors and great affluence by long and meritorious services in the East Indies.'

Shortly before his death in 1853, he made a will by which he bequeathed to his son, Henry Boyer Smith, Saint John, N.B., his real estate, his gold watch, and the naval sword which he had inherited from his brother, Sir Sidney, to devolve as an heirloom in accordance with the latter's will. His personal estate was divided equally among his four daughters.
