"That little beast of a detective has got something up his sleeve," she thought. "I know he has; only I don't know what. It may be that we're hiding here. Or—it may be Skye. Or it may be both for he's the devil!"

"But if he thinks he's going to hand back the blade to Kentucky Haste to the sound of joyous music, why he's mistaken."

Miss Gillett was afraid of the man for whom she worked, but there was another emotion in her heart stronger than fear. He had no secrets from her, because her services as nurse had had to be called for an inmate of the hidden hall; and he had watched her like a lynx, knowing that she would jump for joy at seeing her patient dead. Twice she had descended with him, and now she was going alone. Because she did fear the man, however, she determined that no trace of her presence should be visible to spying eyes. She had watched carefully all that he did, and she knew how to leave as well as to enter the secret place under the pool. She had a good electric torch, and when she had got far enough down the ladder under the stone with the hole in it, she found the spring which swung that stone back into place.

At the bottom of the iron ladder was a small open space. Air reached it from little apertures above, placed so as to be invisible to any one searching the cellar. Beyond was a short and narrow passage, on either side of which opened a room. They had apertures for ventilation also, as her companion had pointed out during Fanny Gillett's first visit; but these had their outlets in the Persian Garden.

They were so cleverly placed, though the work had been done in old days, that no sound could penetrate to the garden by means of them. The various curves and bends obliterated this danger, for they were arranged somewhat after the fashion of modern "T" tubes. As for the electric lighting of these rooms which Miss Gillett had remarked upon, there was not enough power, her guide explained, to let light pass through the thick glass in any amount. There could be no more than that faint glimmer which she had seen in the room.

There was an electric bulb also in the corridor, but with her torch Fanny did not need to touch the switch. She made no noise until first one bolt, then the other. But she was heard. Something moved inside the room. Or was it in the one opposite? Miss Gillett could not be sure till she pushed the door open.

The light was on in the tiny room with its glass roof, and Eve Haste stood near the crocheted screen, herself behind a chair, the back of which she grasped tightly with both hands, as if ready to use it in self-defence.

"At sight of Fanny Gillett her hands fell to her side, and the door shut showing that the nurse was alone, she subsided limply on the bed. Her face was deathly pale in the dim unbecoming light. Her hair hung in two long, tumbled plaits, and she wore a shabby gray woolen dressing-gown much too large for her, lent by the nurse. But even so, she looked beautiful. Miss Gillett acknowledged this to herself with angry reluctance.

"Oh, it's you!" Eve said dully. "What do you want?"

"I've brought you some medicine."

THE JEALOUS QUEEN

This is the third day's chapter of the famous old tale "Snow-White." Children who follow this story and cut out the pictures will have the entire set of "Snow-White" paper dolls. Watch for it every day.

One day the jealous queen went to her magic mirror, and as always, asked it who was the fairest woman of all. To her surprise the mirror replied:

"Queen, you are the fairest, lady."

"Snow-White is fairest now, I mean."

The queen flew into a terrible rage and vowed she'd get rid of Snow-White. So she dressed the poor child in an old brown dress and cap, all rags, and hired a hunter, for a large sum of money, to take her into the forest secretly and kill her.

(So the hunter dragged Little Snow-White into the forest. Now watch tomorrow to see what will become of her.)

Miss Gillett, "Now for it again. Which do you choose—sleep or death?"

"Better not call names," said Fanny.

Nurse Stacey's Suggestions to Middle Aged Women

A MOST trying period of a woman's life is that of middle age, fraught with danger to some extent, and invariably with most annoying symptoms, such as hot flashes, smothering spells, nervous troubles, irregularities and fainting spells.

When a woman like Nurse Stacey after many years of caring for the sick writes a letter of praise for Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound like the following, it should influence other women who are passing through the Change of Life to try it.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is a root and herb medicine especially adapted to act upon the feminine system. It helps nature to build up the weakened, nervous system, and enables women to pass this trying period with the least possible annoying symptoms.

Nurse Stacey's Letter Follows:

Collinsville, Illinois.—"I could almost write a book in praise of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. In the first place my husband induced me to try it and I have continued taking it off and on for years. I have become a well woman from its use and am now taking it through the Change of Life just to be on the safe side. I first took it for backache and a weak condition of the whole system and I think it saved my life and my baby. She is now a mother and takes it herself and I think I can count as high as a hundred women I have recommended the Vegetable Compound to, as I am a practical nurse. Use my letter in any way you see fit for I will stand by what I write."—Mrs. H. Stacey, Collinsville, Ill.

Another Woman's Similar Experience

Ingram, N. S.—"I took your medicine for a run-down condition and inward troubles. I had pains in my right side so bad at times that I could not walk any distance. I saw about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound in the newspapers and have taken five bottles of it. I am better in every way and you can use my letter to help other women."—Mrs. ALYRA M. PARKY, Ingram, Nova Scotia.

IT WON'T NEED TO BE ALTERED. IT'S THE SAME SIZE AS MY MUM'S. WELL YOU SEE HAROLD DUKE WILLIAM ALMOST AS BIG A NUISANCE AS MY FATHER. I'M INTO PROMISING HIM I'LL BE ANNOYED IF YOU TAKE IT.

A. D. 1066. Edward died on the 5th January 1066. He was a kind and gentle disposition, more fitted for the cloister than the throne in such turbulent times. He was pulled two ways, by the Saxons on one side, and the Normans on the other, and it is probable that under pressure, he promised the succession to both William of Normandy and Harold. The latter being on the spot when the King died, was crowned on the day of Edward's funeral in the Abbey of Westminster.

By ARTHUR MORELAND

IT'S A MISTAKE NOT THAT IS THE LORD HAROLD. I SHOULD NOT BE SURPRISED IF HAROLD HAS POPPED OFF, AND THAT BUSINESS IS LOOKING UP.

UNDER TAYLOR BY APPOINTMENT

THIS WILL TOUCH HIM ON THE RAMP DUKE WILLIAM ROSE WAS CROWNED WESTMINSTER THIS MORNING NO USE YOU COMING OVER HAROLD.

THIS IS NOT A NEWS-PAPER ILLUSTRATION OF THE PERIOD, BUT THE REPRESENTATION OF HAROLD'S CORONATION FROM THE BAYEUX TAPESTRY, A ROLL OF LINEN 214 FEET LONG AND 20 INCHES DEEP. IT DEPICTS IN COLOURED TRIED THE HISTORY FROM THE NORMAN POINT OF VIEW OF THIS EPOCH.
