Scout News and Notices

A new headquarters for the Boy Scouts of Warsaw, Poland, completed shortly before the German invasion, is now occupied by the infamous German Gestapo as a headquarters.

Bombay Boy Scouts pay regular visits to orphanages and other children's institutions, and sponsor a monthly "Children's Day" of games and other entertainment for poor children of the city.

The Boy Scouts of India are continuing their campaign of education in sanitation and accident prevention for the benefit of backward village communities. During a "Road Courtesy Week" held by the Scouts of Kolhapur the boys maintained all important traffic points, and used placards to develop road sense and reduce accidents.

As in Canada, Britain and elsewhere throughout the Empire, the Boy Scouts of India are busy at many kinds of war-time service. Patrols of Bombay Scouts are attached to air raid posts throughout the city and a further 100 Scout cyclists are constantly standing by for any emergency calls for messengers.

The Boy Scout woodcraft cooking competition held at the Canadian National Exhibition, and open to Scout Troops through the province, was won by a party of the 14th Toronto Troop. Second place went to the 1st. Huntsville Troop, followed in order by three Toronto Troops, the 20th, 68th and 96th.

The cooking was judged by the head chefs from the Royal York Hotel and Eaton's Georgian Room and the incidental woodcraft features by Scout Field Secretaries A. E. Padden and Herbert Greenway. The young outdoor chefs were required to prepare a camp meal for six persons the menu comprising broiled beefsteak, boiled potatoes, a fresh vegetable stew, fresh fruit and coffee. Fireplaces were built of logs or stones, and various camp kitchen gadgets used at Scout camps were permitted. It is planned to make the competition an annual event.

A 5-day Boy Scout Social Service Camp was operated during a largely attended religious conference at the Seneper River, India, by 500 Scouts. In spite of intensely cold weather the boys stood waist deep in the water during the early morning hours to prevent drownings among the throng of ceremonially bathing pilgrims.

The effectiveness of Boy Scout training for emergency public service is impressively illustrated by a recent summary of 125 different types of wartime good turns found by the Scouts of Great Britain. The list includes general assistance in ARP work, holding air raid shelters, filling sand bags, acting as blackout guides to the aged, infirm, mothers, children and new arrivals. In some places they are receiving telephone operators in the Thames River Emergency Service they are stretcher-bearers, signallers, etc. They serve in hospitals, make splints, collect spangnum moss, etc. They assist the police in traffic control, older Scouts act as special constables. In the task of evacuating children they are invaluable, their clothes being running, hither and thither doing a host of things from acting as escorts to cleaning out empty houses to be used as billets. They are orderlies for air raid listening posts and battery baggage units. They are most alert count watchers. On the farms they are helping with the harvest, repairing fences, milking cows, picking hops, collecting or chopping straw, etc. One of the strangest work is gathering acorns, chestnuts and hawthorn berries for animals in the zoos. They have found numerous ways of assisting the refugees from Holland, Belgium and France, meeting them at the stations, supplying them with food and guiding them to their billets. In a word the Scouts of Britain have met the greatest day-after-day test that has ever faced Boy Scouts, and have more than vindicated the aim and motto of their Scout training, "Be Prepared."
