Prince Edward Island Hospital Annual Collection

In accordance with the promise made a year ago, no appeal of any kind in behalf of the Prince Edward Island Hospital has been made or has been authorized during the year by the Trustees. The time has now arrived, however, when we must have the liberal financial support of the people of Queens and Kings counties, if we are to continue to maintain and increase the efficiency of the hospital, without increasing largely the rates of paying patients, and reducing our free accommodation for those who are unable to pay. A number of copies of our last annual report have been sent to the Secretary of the Board of Trustees in every school district, and we would like to have this report carefully read by everyone.

Outstanding Features of the Work.

- 1. The number of people served by the Hospital, by far the largest in our history, shows the imperative need of more accommodation and equipment.
2. The increased cost of everything used in the Hospital.—Coal increased $1,892.70; groceries, $1,482.42; medicine, $804.14; meat and fish, $321.78, or an increase of $4,500, on four items alone.
3. Salaries reduced $476.76.
4. The very liberal support given the Hospital by the majority of the people which alone made it possible for us to "carry on."

The few figures given herewith will show you that the difference between receipts and expenditures will be greater this year than last and that your strong support is necessary. Further, new equipment is constantly required if we are to keep the Hospital in the first class and a credit to the province. A contagious disease ward is something we should provide at once and we can do so only if we get your generous support.

In accordance with the Trustees' Report of last year, we are now asking the people of Queens and Kings counties to give us the assistance needed. Outside of Charlottetown the collections are being made through the School Trustees, who have been asked to appoint collectors to call on the people of their district beginning November first. In Charlottetown, the collections will be made by envelopes which will be left at every house on Friday and Saturday, October 31st and November 1st, and will be taken up on the following Monday.

The Trustees wish to urge as follows:— To the School Trustees—Please see you get good collectors and start them out promptly. To the Citizens of Charlottetown—Have your envelopes ready for the collectors on Monday morning, November 3rd. And to Everybody—Give according to your ability. The cause is a good one. All monies received will go to make someone a little more comfortable, and give them a better chance for life. That someone might be you.

W. K. ROGERS, Chairman Board of Trustees.

WORRY OVER ROSE AND WALTER KEMP

CHAPTER CV. It was characteristic of Everett that he should feel something had disturbed me. "You aren't as happy as when we first came home. What is it?" he asked. "Has your guest said something to hurt your feelings?" "No—there's nothing!" I hastened to reply. It was almost impossible for me to evade when he asked me a question. Yet I couldn't say Rose had talked again of me as "number two" and had discussed his affairs with Walter Kemp. Then, too, I could not tell him she had been with Kemp. "I have noticed that many people who are on an intimate footing with others feel they can say anything they choose. It is wrong. Friendship that is worth the name is worth conserving by every means in our power. But Rose is thoughtless. Don't let anything she may say cause you unhappiness." I think he mistrusted she had talked of Leola, so asked no more questions. "But I could not so easily dismiss thoughts of her—the one person whom I hated. I am honest; I hated that first wife desperately. Sometimes an agonized longing swept over me to be destroying all evidence that she had lived. Then I would remember that as long as people talked of her, as long as any who knew her were alive, she would be impossible. The next day Rose kept her appointment with Walter Kemp. This time she lunched with him. I felt bitterly nervous about it, not so much because she was with him, as because I had not mentioned to Everett that she had met him. He might see them together and be displeased with both of us. But Rose came in about five o'clock fairly beaming. "I had a wonderful time. We went way out in the country to a little road house for luncheon. Such a quaint place with honeysuckle vines hanging over the porch. We had lunch served there. "That was nice. I am glad you had a good time." I was relieved that she had returned, also that he had not lunched in town. "Barrett Edmonds called up. He is coming in for tea. "Lunching with Hotty announced Barrett and we three had a really jolly time for a few moments before others dropped in—Alice Sloane and her niece, Irma Barton and some others. After they all left and Rose and I were dressing for dinner, she said: "Isn't that Irma Barton the woman everyone said was going to be the second Mrs. Graham?" "Who said that?" "Walter told me this afternoon that every one thought your husband was in love with her and that she was going to be number two." "For goodness sake, Rose do stop talking of 'number two'! You will drive me crazy. One would think it a crime to marry a widower. But it happens, this time, you are wrong. Mrs. Barton was a great friend of mine. She's a friend of mine. We had a long talk not a great while ago, and she told me a lot about herself. It's all nonsense, people coupling her name with Everett's." I knew I spoke convincingly. Had Rose talked of her and Everett before I knew she was to marry his friend, I should have been hurt and annoyed. "Well I'm glad there's nothing to that rumor. It is bad enough to have people say your husband loved his first better, without having someone claim him now also." I heart of felt as if I should go mad if I heard any more about Leola. I could have been very happy at this time but for her—this woman who had died nine years before I met Everett. But how could I be content when all the time I heard of her—my husband's love for her which everyone seemed to think so much greater than it was for me? Since my talk with Irma Barton—until Rose came and revived the feeling by her constant reference to "number one"—I had been far happier when thinking of Everett. Now I determined not to allow Rose to spoil that bit of content, and told her she would please me very much if she did not refer to Everett's first wife again while she was with me. "Why, of course I won't if you are sensitive about it. I didn't suppose you cared, after all this time.

I don't see how you married him if you ever minded playing second fiddle. You remember I said I couldn't." Tomorrow—A Bomb.
