Of Courtesy it is much less Than Courage of Heart or Holiness.
Yet in my Walks it seems to me That the Grace of God is in Courtesy.

On Monks I did in Storrington fall, They took me straight into their Hall;

I saw Three Pictures on a wall, And Courtesy was in them all.

The first the Annunciation;
The second the Visitation;
The third the Consolation,
Of God that was Our Lady's Son.

The first was of Saint Gabriel, On Wings a-flame from Heaven he fell;
And as he went upon one knee He shone with Heavenly Courtesy.

Our Lady out of Nazareth rode—It was her month of heavy load; Yet was Her face both great and kind,

For Courtesy was in Her mind.

The Third, it was our Little Lord, Whom all the Kings in arms adored; He was so small you could not see His large intent of Courtesy.

Our Lord, that was Our Lady's Son Go bless you, People, one by one; My Rhyme is written, my work is done.

—Hilarie Bellou.

FERRY MODEL ON DISPLAY—
The model of the new car ferry, "Charlottetown," an exact replica of the big steamer, is now on display in the window of the Tourist Bureau Queen Street. The miniature was made in Scotland from the plans of the ferry and is a duplicate of the original in every detail, colours, rigging and relative positions of equipment. The model, which is six or seven feet in length, and weighs about 1,000 pounds is displayed in a walnut case. It will be in the window of the Tourist Bureau for three weeks, and at the end of that time will probably be taken to Summerside.
After exhibition there it will be placed permanently in the lobby of The Canadian National Hotel here.

not at all like the fictional detective, is to develop a really effective national system by having state fingerprinting bureaus in every state. At the present time there are such bureaus in 23 states, three having been added during the past year.

"In effecting the apprehension of the vast army of criminals who ply their trade throughout this and other countries some cooperative system must be evolved which will solve the problem of effecting the apprehension and causing the identification of these roving enemies of society," Hoover said.

The justice department receives additional prints every day, having acquired a total of 447,000, last year. When called upon to check a print sent in to see if the individual has had a previous criminal career, the department gives 48 hours' service.

There are 184 employes now in the fingerprinting section. It had only 25 when it started.

Cooperates With All
The section cooperates with other federal agencies and states in running down criminals and some unusual stories have come from the activity.

"As an instance of the value of this service one of the governmental agencies may be cited the situation in connection with the enforcement of the prohibition law in one of the western districts," Hoover explained. "I have been informed by the prohibition administrator of the district that for a period of three months, 38 per cent of prohibition offenders were found to have been previously finger-printed for major crimes."

"Many offenders in this district had been having other persons serve sentences in their stead.
When the practice was adopted of having offenders fingerprinted, a stop was put to this substitution."

The fingerprint is sure. No two are alike. Criminals may move about under assumed names, but once the fingerprint is handy they have no escape. By the fingerprint record officials may tell through the federal bureau here whether a person arrested has been arrested or convicted previously.

"Manifestly justice can only be done when the judicial official is in the possession of all information which will enable him to determine whether the individual before him for sentence is a hardened criminal, or one who, by humane treatment, may be reclaimed for the benefit of society and himself," Hoover said speaking of another value of fingerprints.

Plot Uncovered
The chief of the investigation bureau recently discovered an attempt to check fingerprinting of those arrested and charged with crime.

"There are some clouds on the horizon," he said. "Among them fort which is becoming more and more manifest to prevent law enforcement officers from registering the fingerprints of persons placed under arrest and charged with various crimes by that type of legal practitioner whose interest in protecting his client's alleged rights seems to surmount his interest in the public welfare."

Hoover also objected strenuously to the opposition being raised in some government bureaus of fingerprinting of government employees.
The Navy, chiefly, has protested.

When the fingerprinting section was set up as the first national clearing house for such identification Hoover took over 810,000 fingerprints collected by the Leavenworth Federal Penitentiary and the National Bureau of Criminal Identification here. The section now has a total of 2,533,308 of current prints.

and handsome gentleman who looks

Washington Letter

By THOMAS L. STOKES
United Press Staff Correspondent

WASHINGTON, Aug. 13.—J. Edgar Hoover, young director of the Justice Department's very efficient bureau of investigation, sees the solution of many criminal problems in the five fingers of a man's hand.

Fingerprinting is a sort of hobby with Hoover, as well as a very important part of his business, and well might it be, for since he set up the fingerprinting section of the department in 1924 many criminals who otherwise would have escaped have been brought to justice because the government had the apparently innocent imprint of their fingers.

When the fingerprinting section
was set up as the first national
clearing house for such identifica-
prints collected by the Leaven-
National Bureau of Criminal Identification here. The section now
prints.

And Never Broke An Egg

MOSCOW, Aug. 13.—A high flying hen and a basket of eggs have successfully demonstrated the practicability of a new parachute designed to drop articles from airplanes without damage.

The parachute is very small and is not yet adapted to human use. It consists of a rubber covered, air filled bag attached to a regulation, umbrella-like apparatus. It costs only fifty rubles (nominally $25) to build and its designers claim it surpasses any similar contrivance because it drifts earthward much slower. It is expected to prove a big stride forward in small commercial delivery by air mail in that it will obviate many stops.
