All Projects Underway For Centennial Day

GEORGETOWN —The Georgetown Centennial Committee continues to formulate its plans for Centennial Day here on July 22. Chairman Alec Arsenault presided at a meeting held in the town hall recently.

The secretary, Frank Lavandier, read the minutes and the meeting appointed Joseph Martell treasurer and decided to open a bank account.

A letter was read from the Provincial Centennial Committee approving the centennial grant for a permanent project. This project, to be jointly financed by the grant and by money voted by the Georgetown school district, will be a steel flag pole on a concrete base and will be erected on the school grounds.

The chairman gave the meeting a report of the number of banners and flags sold to local citizens. Raymond Soloman reported that work on the centennial float was progressing and asked for volunteer workers to continue the work. Kenneth Arsenault reported that he and his teen-agers were busy constructing the raft that will represent a burning ship in the harbor on centennial night.

Frank Lavandier reported on the preparations being made for the track and field sports and that he had assurance from David Boswell, that certain equipment would be made available and that a field-man from Mr. Boswell's department would come to Georgetown to assist in the events.

Miss Linda Llewellyn reported that preparations were going ahead for the doll carriage parade. Ivan Bouchard reported the banners had been strung across the streets and the centennial symbols were in place on electric and telephone poles. It is hoped to contact citizens and have them decorate their homes with Christmas tree lights.

Mr. Soloman reported that the Dominion Government potato shed on railway wharf is available for a mammoth dance centennial night. Two street dances are scheduled on the pavement near railway wharf approach, June 23 and July 7, with music by the Thunderbolts Orchestra. They will also play at the dance, centennial night.

LIONS TO CATER

The Georgetown Lions Club will cater to the public on centennial day and will also run the canteen in the potato warehouse during the dance.

It was decided to appoint a parade marshall and the appointment will be made at the next meeting of the committee. The parade will form up at nine in the morning and move off over a designated route at 10 o'clock.

Possibility Of Frost

With falling temperatures late last night and a wind already down to eight miles at midnight, farmers and gardeners were keeping their fingers crossed against the possibility of killing frost. At midnight the temperature was 42.6 at the Charlottetown Radio Range and was expected to reach 35.

The previous night, with an official low recorded at Charlottetown of 39, there was frost in many localities in the eastern section of the province particularly. However, although the ground was white at daybreak, a short time later rain showers occurred and dispelled the frost. There were no immediate reports of damage to garden crops or to tobacco plants.

Many could not recall when frost occurred on June 17, although a year ago it was reported on June 16 for the last time in the month.

As one pereson said, "The red was very red, the blue was very blue, a lovely dark color, and it was beautiful."

There have been a number of other sightings of the controversial flag on automobiles. Most of these others have been in the form of plates mounted where the front license plate would be.

As more and more evidence is encountered of this flag, one is reminded that not too long ago Charlottetown and the Island was one of the few places outside Quebec which showed greater favor for the new flag in a cross-Canada poll conducted by the press
