

SORE THROAT?

DEAL promptly with the first sign of hoarseness, soreness or inflammation—it might be the forerunner of laryngitis, influenza or serious bronchial trouble.

The quickest, safest and most soothing remedy is Peps. As a Peps tablet dissolves in the mouth it gives off medicinal fumes that are breathed into the inner recesses of throat and chest.

In their speedy direct way Peps thoroughly disinfects the throat and air-tubes, destroy mischievous germs, relieve any soreness, inflammation or irritation.

Take Peps whenever you suspect you need them. A Peps in the mouth filters the air you breathe, and fortifies against sudden colds and chills and the infection dangers encountered in trains, street cars and crowded assemblies.

Peps are equally good for obstinate coughs and colds, bronchitis, bronchial asthma, and other chest weaknesses of old and young.

WOULD LEAD TO BETTER HABITS

"What reason has that wild girl for marrying a tailor?" "She thinks such a marriage will lead to better habits you know."

CARING FOR THE SAW

Wife: What are you going to do to the saw with that tooth-brush, John?
Hubby: Clean its teeth.

A MEAN DIG

"A beautiful automobile is my husband's gift on my wedding anniversary."
"Is it your tin wedding, dear?"

BLARNEY

Eve: Adam, do you know which one of your ribs I was made from?
Adam (gallantly): To be sure I do, my dear—it was the one nearest my heart.

ADDS FLAVOR.

A teaspoon of minced parsley, celery or green pepper may be advantageously added to creamed vegetable soups just before serving.

SPECIAL POULTRY NOTICE

In addition to our plant at Charlottetown, we are operating Poultry killing stations at the following points on the Island:—

- Turners Limited, O'Leary.
- J. E. Millman, Kensington.
- Russell Clark, Mt. Stewart.
- R. J. McDonald & Co., Cardigan.
- H. H. Cox, Morell.
- Cook & Son, Murray River.
- Morris Bernard & Co., Tignish.

Allowing for shrink, labor and possible depreciation in killing and plucking, you will find it will pay you as well to sell your Poultry alive rather than to take the trouble to kill at home.

We will also be buying Dressed Poultry at top market prices if you prefer to market your Poultry this way.

CHAPTER 15. THE PEACE OFFERINGS

"I'm going shopping, Cousin Camilla. Have you any errand for me?"

Doris paused at the doorway of her cousin's sitting room, on her way downstairs several mornings after the scene between Floidings and his wife—an episode of which she knew nothing.

Camilla, in a negligee, was seated at her desk, a gold penholder resting thoughtfully against her crimsoned lips. She cast a glance over her shoulder at Doris, but she was too preoccupied with her own thoughts to notice that her young cousin was looking exceptionally charming and "striking" in a new spring frock, with hat, shoes, hose and gloves to match.

Camilla was in, what she herself was willing to term, the deuce of a jam.

She said to Doris absently, as if she were thinking very hard and had just begun to see a gleam of light:

"I may need you later. Will you be back in an hour or so?"

Doris promised, and she went downstairs, humming as she went.

Camilla returned to her consideration of several articles scattered before her on the desk.

One was a note, obviously hastily scrawled:

"Dear Camilla:—
"Try to forgive me for being a brute the other afternoon. I lost my temper and I'm sorry. It wasn't very nice of me to try to force you into doing something I asked, and I'm heartily ashamed about the threats of closing your accounts and shutting off your allowance."

"Accompanying this letter are several little items which will, I hope, plead for me in winning your pardon. As for the Brandon matter, you are free to accept if you wish. I can only say that I wish with all my heart that you'd decline his invitation."

"Henry".

The "several little items" were a magnificent pearl necklace, finer than Camilla had ever dreamed of owning, and a bundle of stocks which promised her a generous personal income, independent of the "allowances" or credit at the shops.

Camilla purred like a cat while she fastened the pearls around her sleek throat. They were creamy, lustrous things—and moreover, they cleverly hid the faintest suggestion of a hollow that was beginning to mar the perfection of her lovely throat.

"Well," she said to herself, as she unclasped them and laid them carefully back into their white velvet case. "I've certainly been a fool. Now, what on earth am I going to do about it?"

For Camilla, raging, tearful, making the most of the first bruise she had ever received from masculine fingers, had wept in Hartley's arms that afternoon, had let him kiss her lovely lips—and had granted him the inestimable (so he thought) privilege of taking her away from life with that terrible brute of a husband.

They had arranged to sail this very noon on the European-bound "Ariadne"—appropriate name for a honeymoon ship—Hartley, feverish in his eagerness to take his long-impending plunge.

He had known it all along and been warned by his own conscience had already obtained passports for "Mr. and Mrs. John Hartley," with a photo of Camilla taken nearly fifteen years before. The reservations were made on the "Ariadne" when Camilla was ten, and she had run across an acquaintance, until the ship docked in Europe. Then the elopers would lose themselves in the abundant retreats of the Continent until such a time as Henry Fielding would divorce Camilla.

At eleven o'clock, therefore, they had been the plan only the afternoon before in the privacy of Camilla's salon while she reclined in the circle of his arms and felt his reverential lips on her hair—Camilla was to come to the dock, just a few minutes before the steamer sailed, and slip aboard in the bustle of departure. Hartley would already be on the boat.

To avoid the possibility of arousing suspicion at home, Camilla was to leave the house, ostensibly for shopping, carrying not so much as an overnight bag. Hartley had ordered a complete and expensive outfit for her and had had it delivered to her cabin on the boat.

There had been something tremendously appealing and boyish about him when he confessed that he hoped she'd approve his taste.

And now, with the hour of the elopement at hand, Camilla was sorely beset.

Here was this note of apology from her husband, and the two peace offerings—the pearls and the stocks—the independent income—Romeos in the world, did Camilla believe that she would willingly give up a pearl necklace and her own income. It was too maddening of Henry to have extended the olive branch on this of all mornings!

Almost as if he had suspected? But, what was she to do? If she didn't elope, could she count on young Hartley not to make a scandal? The boy was infatuated enough for anything.

How could one explain to an aging lover that the object of his devotion had changed her mind because her husband had made her a handsome gift? It would be a trifle crass, to say the least. Certainly not conducive to enhance his opinion of his divinity—to learn that she placed a trinket or two above his passion.

So Camilla sat and racked her brains and gradually a solution

MT. BUCHANAN WOMEN'S INSTITUTE

Hunter River And Vicinity

The Mt. Buchanan Women's Institute met at the home of Mrs. R. M. McRae, Nov. 11th for their annual meeting, with ten members present. Meeting opened by singing the Institute Ode. Roll call was answered by naming an allied leader in the Great War. Reading of minutes of last annual and last report of the Sec'y. A good report of the half year was read by the President, Mrs. Dougald McKinnon. The Sec'y-Treas. report was also read. Sick committee report having made five visits and treated each patient with fruit. No school report as school was closed. Then followed the election of officers. The President Mrs. Dougald McKinnon, the Sec'y-Treas. Mrs. R. M. McRae and the Vice-Pres. Mrs. C. D. McLeod, were re-elected. New Directors and Auditors were appointed. Mrs. Dougald McKinnon and Mrs. R. M. McRae were appointed delegates to the conventions. New committees were appointed for the month as usual. One new member was gladly welcomed. A short discussion then took place on repairs to be done to school door. The Sec'y proposed that the school window. The work of making a quilt taken up and decided that we meet at Mrs. J. D. Murchison's to sew blocks and proceed with the making of quilt. Next meeting to be held at the home of Mrs. Nelson Canello's. Christmas and St. Nicholas. Meeting closed by singing the National Anthem. Luncheon was served during the social hour.

Mary E. McRae, Sec'y-Treas.

PRESIDENTS REPORT OF THE MT. BUCHANAN WOMEN'S INSTITUTE

At this our second annual meeting it is my privilege to give a short review of the work of our club during the seven months since the opening of the school window. Meetings were held with an average monthly attendance of ten members the total membership at present being nineteen. The Institute funds have been increased during the past seven months by the proceeds of a Bean Supper held at the home of Mrs. J. D. Murchison in April, and two Ice Cream festivals and sale of cakes during the summer months. We paid for painting the interior of school room and other necessary work, and erection of signboard, a detailed account of such expenditure will appear in the Secretary-Treasurer's report. A quilt has been started for the Protestant Orphanage which no doubt, will be finished this year. The Supervisor, Miss McKenna was present at our August meeting and gave a very interesting talk on Institute work. During the month of November we were appointed to co-operate with Provincial Executive in regard to Education and better schools. Agriculture, National Events, Immigration and home economics, as we become better acquainted with these phases of our work we hope to accomplish more. Much regret was expressed because of the departure of one of our members from our district and in appreciation of her work, an address and beautiful book of poems was presented to her.

Let us strive for greater membership during the coming year. There is much for us to do. Many avenues of work open up before us. But above all we must have loyalty to our club, so that as a band of earnest women we may continue to co-operate with Provincial Executive in regard to Education and better schools. Much regret was expressed because of the departure of one of our members from our district and in appreciation of her work, an address and beautiful book of poems was presented to her.

Let us strive for greater membership during the coming year. There is much for us to do. Many avenues of work open up before us. But above all we must have loyalty to our club, so that as a band of earnest women we may continue to co-operate with Provincial Executive in regard to Education and better schools. Agriculture, National Events, Immigration and home economics, as we become better acquainted with these phases of our work we hope to accomplish more.
