SPRAY IS HELD INEFFECTIVE IN PARALYSIS

(By John Tracey)
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

HALLIFAX, June 22 — Claims of a Toronto physician who worked through Ontario's epidemic of infantile paralysis last year that a zinc sulphate spray of the nostrils and throat was not effective in preventing the disease, were before the Canadian Medical Association tonight.

Dr. Alan Brown advised that the zinc sulphate spray should not be used until further evidence showed it to be effective. The sprays had been ineffective in preventing incidence of poliomyelitis; in a lecture illustrated with slides he indicated use of the spray might have ill-effects.

The spray was used because of a belief the polio germ might enter the body through the nasal passages.

One of the three doctors who participated in the polio symposium, Dr. Brown also cast doubt on the use of convalescent serum in polio cases. The serum may be taken from the body of a previous infantile paralysis sufferer. "The result of our observations is that convalescent serum does not influence the progress of the disease but it does no harm."

Serious outbreaks of polio almost simultaneously in Saskatchewan, Ontario and the Maritimes last year weakened the popular belief that the disease moved eastward in succeeding years.

(Several sections east of Ontario have bought iron lungs in preparation for an outbreak of polio. Purchase of one by the Nova Scotia government was announced two days ago.)

Dr. J. T. Phair, Ontario's chief medical officer in his paper found "little evidence to justify such a presumption" that a cessation in the disease might be looked for with arrival of colder weather. Dr. A. H. Sellers of the Ontario Health Department read the paper prepared by his chief.

Respiratory paralysis resulting from polio infection was described by Dr. Brown. It was this form of the disease which required the use of the iron lung to help the patient breathe. Mortality in respiratory paralysis was 61 per cent as compared with 27 per cent mortality in the spinal variety.

Dr. J. E. Robertson, Toronto child specialist of Moose River fame, was the third participant in the symposium. He urged the need for a common formula in polio treatment. "It is a question of having one method of treatment for all cases," he discussed the surgical aspect of the disease.

DISCUSSION ON F. C. A. ACT IN SENATE

Hon. Mr. Murdoch: May I ask the honourable gentleman a question right there? I have been earnestly trying to follow what, apparently he is trying to prove, that under the administration of the Act the percentage of grafters in Prince Edward Island is less than in any other province of Canada. Is that it?

Hon. Mr. Hughes: I have given the figure I think my honourable friend is quite capable of drawing his own conclusions.

Hon. Mr. MacArthur: That is it.

Hon. Mr. Hughes: Why, even the beneficiaries of the legislation write to the Charlottetown press, over fictitious names, praising the Act and its administration and saying that no termination of the manna-producing scheme for the few should be contemplated. The hon. gentleman should not be ended at all; it is too good a thing.

Hon. Mr. MacArthur: Keep it going.

Hon. Mr. Hughes: On one occasion I characterized the Act and its administration at Ottawa and in some provinces as agreeing in principle with Abernethy's sense of justice, and I find I am not alone in that belief. On the 27th ultimo The Evening Telegram, Toronto, published this editorial, headed "Abernethy may have borrowed idea from Dominion legislation":

"There has been wide condemnation of Premier Abernethy's latest confederate legislation. It has led Right Hon. Arthur Meighen to ask: 'Would anybody from Ontario or Quebec or anywhere on earth, except a madhouse, lend money on real estate there?'

The honourable member who preceded me pointed out what this Farmers' Creditors Arrangement Act has done for the creditors of farmers, and it has had that effect in Prince Edward Island. To-day a young man there who wants to buy a farm or stock simply cannot get credit, because of the operation of this Act. The editorial continues: 'Yes the same question might be asked with regard to the money lending money on farm property anywhere in Canada. While the Dominion Government is considering the disallowance of the Alberta legislation, it might appropriately take into consideration the removal of some of the defects from the Farmers' Creditors Arrangement Act.'

"The boards which make adjustments under this Act do not operate as courts except in the binding character of their findings; they are not bound by any principles of equity, and from their decision there is no appeal, however seriously they may wrong the creditors. These are serious defects to which the Government of Canada should give its attention. They should remove the mote from their own eye at the same time that they are operating on the beam in Alberta's eye."

Then he goes on to give a number of cases. I will not read the decisions.

Now, I have given the facts in regard to the administration in Prince Edward Island. Do you wonder that we are trying to get this Act rescinded? The beneficiaries do not want it rescinded, for men who probably never before got a salary of more than $600 or $700 a year are now getting $6,000 or $7,000 under this Act as administrators.

Hon. Mr. Gordon: Is that not the tendency of the day—shorter hours and bigger pay?

Hon. Mr. Hughes: But it is all

Bush Fires Spread In Northern Alberta

EDMONTON, June 22 —(CP)—Lack of rain, high winds and high temperatures today spurred into greater activity bush fires that dotted northern Alberta.

Fear the fires will spread from extremely dry brush to valuable timber areas is increasing and firefighting crews worked desperately to keep each individual fire under control.

Little was found in the weather forecast indicative of rain. The forecast was "mostly fair with much the same temperature" in northern Alberta although more rain is promised in southern Alberta.

HONORS PARENTS

The motion for the third reading of the Bill was agreed to, and the Bill was read the third time, and passed.

THE END

NO MORE MEALTIME "TANTRUMS" AT OUR HOUSE!

Mealtime wasn't pleasant at our house! First the children would fuss and refuse to eat, then their father would lose his temper. Sometimes I'd lose mine too.

But Kellogg's Rice Krispies put a stop to that! When the children hear that crisp, crackling sound and see those toasted rice bubbles, they don't have any time for fretting! They just eat!

You can't blame youngsters for "kicking" at foods they don't like. Try serving Kellogg's Rice Krispies — the cereal that crackles out loud in milk or cream! Children love the sound — and the tempting taste!

All grocers sell Rice Krispies — light, wholesome and easy to digest. Ready to serve. Made by Kellogg in London, Ontario.

URGES NEEDS OF FISHERMEN

Appeal Voiced By Dr. W. J. Veniot.

OTTAWA, June 22 —(CP)—An appeal on behalf of 200,000 Maritime Province fishermen for the Government to bring them "right guidance" in their own field of endeavor, was voiced in the House of Commons tonight by Dr. W. J. Veniot (Lib. Gloucester) during the budget debate.

All these men want from the government, Dr. Veniot said, is a chance to make a livelihood. He urged the government to make provision as soon as possible for reorganization of the fisheries department so that it would furnish leadership, education and expansion. The fishermen wanted regulation, control, conservation and regulation. He rejoiced that agriculture had received so much assistance but deplored the fact that fishing had been allowed to stagnate, and fishermen were left to their own private initiative with old-fashioned methods and miserable equipment.

For half a century fishermen had been at the mercy of trading companies who had every advantage over the fishermen and had a "strangle hold" over the men because of book debts, mortgages and loans.

All other industries had improved in the past 20 years but fishing had slumped to the verge of extinction. Millions had been spent on agriculture but the fishermen remained "an outcast." He forecast his life in all weather at sea and returned to be victimized by his fellow man ashore.

The fishermen had been made partners in the government nine years ago but Dr. Veniot could not see any signs of its breaking away from the traditional factions of regulations, conservation and control.

Attempts had been made in recent years to assist the fishermen but something more radical was needed for rehabilitation of the industry.

Some fishermen, as food producers, claimed they were entitled to the same assistance, educational and otherwise, as that given the farmers. The present set up of the fisheries department was not in tune with modern times, when compared with the department of agriculture.

The first step recommended by Dr. Veniot was revamping of the fisheries department to bring it up to the level of agriculture. Fishermen needed cold storage facilities, collection, processing, distributing and marketing education. Too many were using antiquated hand-line methods of catching cod and could not afford modern equipment for catching other varieties.

G-man Addresses Chief Constables

EDMONTON, June 22 —(CP)—Combined law-enforcement agencies in any country constitute "a great army moving against a common enemy." N. J. L. Pieper, the special agent in charge of the United States Federal Bureau of Investigation in San Francisco, told members of the Chief Constable's Association of Canada today at their 34th annual convention.

Cooperation between all police and law officers is vital to the welfare of peace and justice, the G-man said. Disorder and disunion among law-enforcing agencies that hindered justice in the United States 10 years ago is giving way steadily to harmony and cooperation, he added.

Former administrative assistant to Edgar G. Hoover, chief of the "G-Men," Mr. Pieper brought greetings to the police chiefs from the Washington executive.

THE GRAVES UPON THE HILL

I walked among the graves today. The place where the forefathers sleep. The steep hill beside the lake. Where sorrowing ones were wont to weep.

No fitter place for man's cold clay, No safer from barbaric tread; For rippling waters murmur by And white-winged sea birds guard the dead.

Here lies the clay of pioneers Who braved the stormy ocean wide, The unfelled forest and the cold, To live in peace, in faith abide.

How well they did their noble part, The trees to fell, the homes to raise, Their food to gain from sea and shore. Their neighbor love, Creator praise!

No "stried" stones are standing there, To mark the peasant's lowly bed, And they who knew their names and worth Are justly numbered with the dead.

Though toil was hard, they lived content, Unknown the wonders of today; Glad to obtain their every need From fruitful soil or teeming sea.

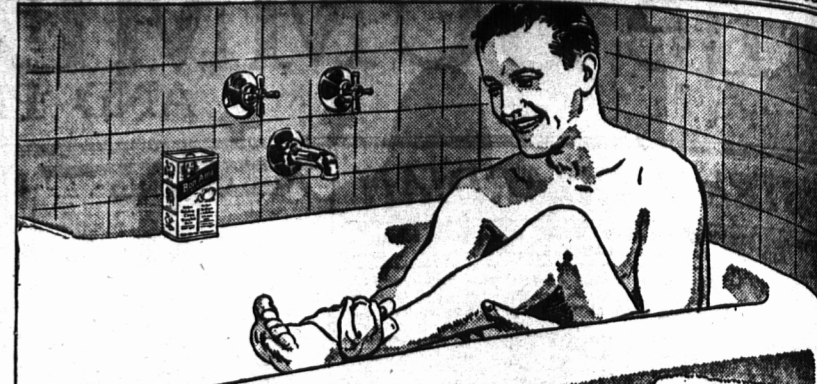

Those honest toiling pioneers Did raise their children bliss, For all around we see the homes Of comfort, peace, and happiness.

A century and more those graves But by the hand of Nature doctored In lonely quiet have remained. A sacred sanctuary of respect.

No refuse there is careless dumped, No fisher builds his shanty there; Nor spreads his nets upon the mounds Where sleep the long gone brave and fair.

No furrowing plough has cleft the soil, And 'tween did myths or stork reap, But grasses grow and flowers bloom And birds do sing where loved ones sleep.

REPORT NEW SINO-JAPANESE PEACE MOVES

(A.P. By Guardian's Special Wire)

SHANGHAI, June 23 —(Thursday)—New peace moves to halt the spreading Chinese-Japanese warfare were reported under way today.

The reports came as Japanese warplanes struck three times at the South China port of Swatow, threatening large scale invasion of South China, and new Japanese-American friction cropped up at Nanking and Shanghai.

Embassies of the Japanese-sponsored North China provisional government were said to be holding preliminary negotiations with re-Nanking University, was said to representatives of the Chinese government of General Chiang Kai-shek.

The German Transoceanic News Agency quoted C. T. Wang, Chung-Hui, Chinese Foreign Minister, as "emphasizing the usefulness of mediation by a third party, since China and Japan desire to terminate hostilities but neither is willing to take the initiative for reasons of prestige."

Ignore Chiang Regime

In Shanghai, a Japanese embassy spokesman declared that Japan would "discuss peace with any Chinese Government except that of the Kuomintang (Chiang's regime)."

While Japanese massed planes and ships off Swatow, the U.S. gunboat Asheville stood by to protect Americans there.

At Nanking, a Japanese consul in charge of the United States Embassy, made representations to Japanese regarding the slapping of Dr. J. C. Thompson of New Brunswick, N. J., by a Japanese sentry.

Dr. Thompson, connected with preliminary negotiations with re-Nanking University, was said to have been slapped while trying to prevent the entry from Beijing of Thompson's Japanese code.

On the war front, Chinese made Japanese action against Swatow with a new offensive in Shantung province, north of the Yellow River area where Japanese troops were said to have recaptured Howma, strategic eastern Shansi city 50 miles north of the Yellow River, and were being rushed north from the Lungai railway campaign was said to be undated last week.
